Sachems face Peabody in Saturday's Super Bowl

By DAVID DEMARCO

Winchester is in the Super Bowl. The dream is reality.

After years of training, the Winchester High School Sachems reached the apex Thanksgiving Day with a 22-13 victory at Woburn High.

The game was as anticipated. Thousands jammed Connolly Stadium to see the two Middlesex League powerhouses, traditional rivals for nearly 100 years, collide.

The Tanners won the toss and elected to go on defense first; they kicked off.

Winchester took the ball and began to grind out yardage slowly for one first down. The Sachems stalled and sent the punting unit on the field.

Disaster struck. Tanner lineman Kevin Spolidoro uncharacteristically lined up inside the Winchester defensive end and had a clear path to punter John Mathson.

Winchester's punt was blocked on the Winchester 17-yard line. Woburn's Dave Digiralamo picked up the bouncing ball and sprinted unmolested to the end zone.

Jim Duran booted the extra point and Woburn led 7-0 with 6:53 left in the first quarter.

Winchester fans were stunned but Sachem players remained cool, knowing they had a few tricks of their own to use before the game ended.

The Sachems took the ball and used their ground game to set up a perfectly executed flea-flicker pass to Mark Shaw, who dashed to the Woburn five-yard line with eight minutes left in the half.

An 18-speed option to Darin Cromwell and an extra point kick by Shaw tied the game at 7-all.

The Sachems' defense, as it did often all day, stopped Woburn's next drive in three plays. Winchester got the ball again on Woburn's 42-yard line.

Winchester marched forward, concluding with a 29-yard run on a 17-speed option run by Cromwell to gain the lead 13-7. Shaw's second successful extra point made it 14-7, Winchester's way.

Against Woburn's highly touted defense, Winchester put 14 points on the board in four minutes.

Weak side defensive end George Nowell was the story for the Sachem defense on the following series.

Nowell was all over Tanner quarterback Bucky Doherty, who was sacked twice by Nowell and had one pass blocked as well.

"I only had one halfback to beat and it wasn't that hard," Nowell said later. "We set the stage for this game early."

The half ended with Winchester up 14-7 but 20 minutes of tough football remained.

By halftime it was obvious the Winchester defense was in control.

Peabody will feature a balanced attack

By DAVID DEMARCO

Winchester doesn't know all that much about Peabody High School, the second team of "Tanners" it will face in the Super Bowl.

Pat Cullen is the main offensive threat for Peabody's running game. Cullen has scored 24 touchdowns this fall, running behind a big offensive line and with an above average quarterback in Ted Staunton.

The Tanners have averaged 220 yards rushing and 88 yards passing in their 10 victories this fall while Staunton has completed nearly 60 percent of his passes.

Peabody plays in the Greater Boston Leauge and has no experience facing a wishbone offensive unit. Ironically, the Tanners completed their regular season with a Thanksgiving Day victory over another group of "Sachems" from Saugus High School.

Peabody's secondary is said to be

Officials send best wishes

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester's Sachems carry the best wishes of the selectmen to the Super Bowl football game Saturday afternoon.

Monday, selectmen honored all three of the town's outstanding high school athletic teams and presented plaques to the captains of each.

Football captains Richard Burke, Darin Cromwell, John Mathson and Mike Vozzella were given the plaque and congratulations for winning the Middlesex League crown with an unbeaten 10-0 record. Selectmen also conveyed best wishes for the Super Bowl.

Girls soccer captains Debbie Maida, Robyn Rogers and Leslie Strazzullo got a similar plaque for winning not only the league title but the state Division I championship.

Boys soccer captains Steve Goudsouzian, Kent McCord and Chris Verhaegen accepted their plaque and honors for the league title and state championship in Division II.

"As Bruce Springsteen says, the glory days will pass by but the example you have set for the kids coming up will remain," selectmen's chairman Wade Welch told the young athletes.

Selectmen say police harassing Lombardi

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester police harass selectman Mark Lombardi according to at least three selectmen.

Police chief John McHugh is on vacation and unavailable for comment.

Often critical of the police department, by his own admission, Lombardi said Monday things have gone too far.

Lombardi said he went through the necessary bureaucracy and $30 payment to get approval for a sign at his new real estate office.

"So instead of blocking the sidewalk sometime when stores were open, I went at 8 a.m. Sunday, with my son," Lombardi said.

The police department came by soon, Lombardi said, and said he had to have a special permit to work on a Sunday.

"But across the street, an electrician was working. And the previous Sunday, a roofer was hammering on the town hall," Lombardi said.

Lombardi said he told the police department most Sunday laws, including one prohibiting "labor for material gain," had been repealed.

The police department was insistent, although officers said the Sunday "law" they were to enforce against Lombardi were "locked in the chief's safe."

"I don't have a problem. The police department has a problem," Lombardi said. "They interpret the laws against whom they want to interpret them."

Lombardi said he speaks publicly about police harassment "so there will be a record of harassment one day when I go to court. And this definitely was harassment."

Later in the meeting, selectmen's chairman Wade Welch agreed.

"I had heard from other sources about Mr. Lombardi's problem with the police," Welch said.

"It's no secret he is a frequent critic of the police department. And when you criticize, you make people become upset.

"But this is the second time the police have tried to enforce a statute against Mr. Lombardi and the second time they've been wrong," Welch said.

"This board is not powerless. I will not have members of this board harassed when they're right. I will not have any board member singled out for abuse because he is outspoken.

"To single out a board member for that kind of treatment and then to be wrong, it's unpardonable," Welch said.

Selectman Frank Sopper spoke less directly but also agreed. He suggested, however, that the town consider a new by-law "re-establishing Sunday as a quiet time."

The issue will be discussed at the next meeting of selectmen at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Dec. 8, in the meeting room just behind the police reception desk at the public safety building.

"I don't have a problem. The police department has a problem," Lombardi said. "They interpret the laws against whom they want to interpret them."

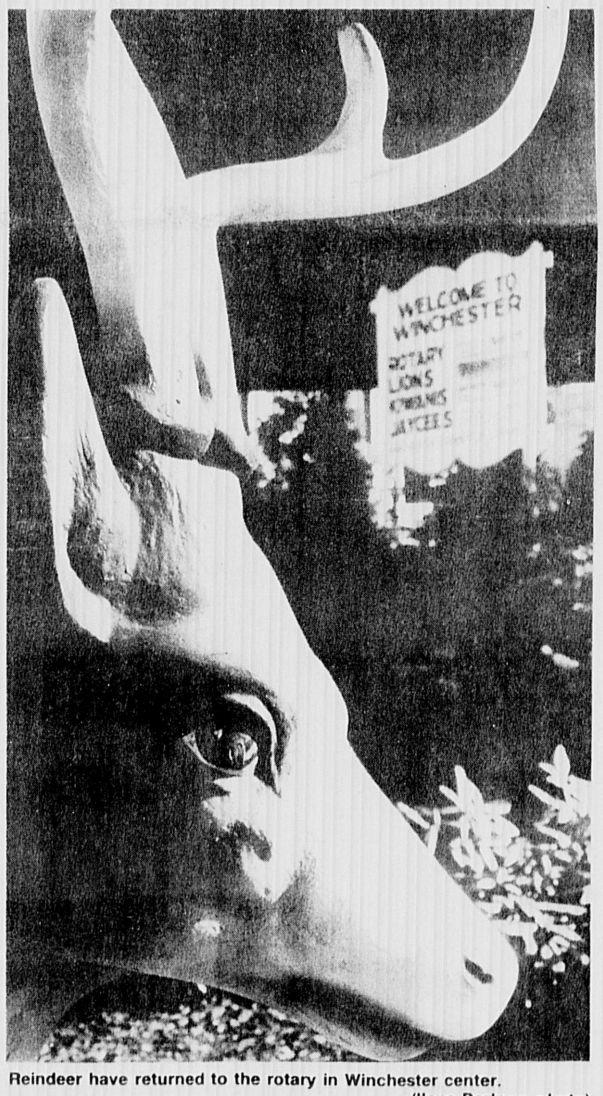

Retired firemen will be honored

Four recent retirees from the Winchester fire department will be honored a retirement dinner dance Friday, Jan. 16, at the Woburn Country Club.

Firefighters Joseph Egan, Joseph McDonough and Joseph Riga and the late Robert Powers will be honored. Each gave more than 20 years of service to the town.

A social hour is scheduled from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. with dinner at 7:30 p.m. and dancing until 11:30 p.m.

Tickets at $12.50 each may be purchased at Winchester fire headquarters on Mt. Vernon Street.

Tree-lighting will start season tonight

Winchester's Christmas season will officially begin at 4:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 4, when Santa Claus arrives at Topsy Turvy to kick off an evening of holiday activities.

Also from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., hay rides for children will be available from the parking lot near the Winchester Chamber of Commerce office on Waterfield Road.

Pictures of children with Santa Claus will be available at Topsy Turvy on Main Street in a program sponsored by the Winchester recreation department and the chamber. The fee will be $2.

Elementary school children will gather on the common at 7 p.m. to sing carols and watch the tree-lighting ceremony.

From 7:30 to 8 p.m., children from St. Mary's School will sing on Winchester Terrace.

Open houses, with special treats and surprises are scheduled in many shops in Winchester center and Santa is expected to visit many of them.

Parking, zoning laws should be better enforced, selectman says

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Overnight parking is illegal on any Winchester street all year but selectman Mark Lombardi thinks the law goes unenforced when someone complains — unless the complainer gives his name.

"A law is a law is a law," Lombardi said during Monday's meeting of selectmen.

Lombardi said if the law is still unenforced by next Monday's meeting, he will "embarrass at least three members of the police department."

Lombardi's comments led to more about law enforcement in general.

"If somebody has a boat in his yard, does the neighbor who complains have to give his name before the police will do anything?" Lombardi asked. Boats can not be parked in driveways in residential neighborhoods, according to town zoning laws.

"People complain but they don't want to give their names. So they call the selectmen," Lombardi said.

Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, wondered if callers also must give their names to the zoning enforcement officer.

"Yes," Lombardi answered. "Only the fire department will come if you don't give your name."

If there are no further hitches, this duplex at 301-303 Cross St. will become two units in the town's seven-unit housing program for families of low-to-moderate income. A town meeting voted last month to purchase the property and legal work is proceeding for the property to be transferred before Jan. 1, selectmen were told Monday night. (Marc Schlossman photo)

Sundays out, auctioneers will face more stringent regulation

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Future auctions in Winchester are going to be restricted far more than in the past.

Selectmen decided Monday to adopt a new policy for granting local permits to auctioneers who wish to work in the town.

A proposed set of regulations drawn by town counsel Douglas Randall will be refined to make it more restrictive in some places and less so in others.

"You might request also to know where the funds collected are going to be deposited, just in case there are problems after the auction," Randall said.

The attorney said two clients of his private practice had sued auctioneers because of such problems.

Selectmen will adopt new regulations to prevent repitition of an incident last month, when an auctioneer applied for a permit less than seven days before a Monday auction, with no meeting of selectmen between the application date and the auction itself.

New rules will require applications to be submitted Thursdays and Fridays for consideration by the next Monday meeting of selectmen.

Auctions will also be prohibited on Sundays and commercial auctions will not be allowed in residential districts. Estate auctions would be an exception.

Randall's proposal will likely be loosened to allow evening auctions by various civic groups, although the proposed rules would not allow any auction after 5 p.m.

Selectmen decided not to designate anyone as their auction licensing agent, preferring to handle the duty themselves.

In other action Monday night, selectmen:

- Approved re-organization of the department of public works, eliminating the position of assistant director and expanding the duties of one operations manager to include highway, grage, transfer station, and buildings and grounds.
- Appointed chairman Wade Welch to a long-range housing plan

(Please see AUCTION, page 16)

Auctions will be prohibited on Sundays and commercial auctions will not be allowed in residential district. Estate auctions would be an exception.

At 1:42 p.m. an accident occurred on Swanton Street when a Melrose resident stopped to make a left into a parking lot and was struck by a vehicle owned by an Oakland, Maine, resident.

At 6:25 p.m., a Subaru sedan driven by a Woburn resident was stopped traveling north on Main Street for driving without a tail light. Further check showed the driver to have a default warrrant out of Dedham. He was issued a citation for defective equipment and released to the custody of the Dedham police.

At 8:25 p.m. a Ford LTD was stopped on Washington Street for missing head lights. Further check showed the driver, Stephen Frotten, 22, of Winchester, was sought to answer state police warrants from Weston and Holden. Frotten was arrested and the vehicle was towed. He was later bailed.

Sunday, Nov.30

At 12:44 a.m., an Irving Street resident noticed a male park a 1977 Dodge Colt on Forest Street and run away. Further inspection showed the registration to belong to a Rockland man and the vehicle identification number registered to another Rockland resident.

The plate belonging to the vehicle was cancelled.

The vehicle was towed. When contacted, the Rockland resident said she no longer had the vehicle, but had neglected to return the plates.

The owner of the car said he sold it to a Woburn resident.

Police in Woburn reported that the Woburn resident believed his car to be stolen, but had not filed a report.

The case is under investigation.

At 3:08 a.m., police observed a black Ford Thunderbird drifting erratically on Mystic Valley Parkway, travelling east between 20 and 30 miles per hour.

Police stopped the vehicle at South Border and Leslie roads and requested paperwork.

David B. Nunnelly, 22, of Woburn, was given a field sobriety test and was placed under arrest for operating under the influence of alcohol and speeding.

At 8:19 a.m., an accident occurred on the corner of Cross Street and George Road extension.

A 1986 Hyundai, driven by a Woburn resident, was struck broadside by a 1979 VW Rabbit.

The driver of the Rabbit, a Brighton resident, was unfamiliar with the area and did not know that the unmarked George Road extension is a private way.

Damage to the rear door and rear quarter of the Hyundai was estimated at $1,000.

The Rabbit sustained damages valued at $500.

At 10:45 p.m., police were called to investigate a party at an apartment on Church Street and found several high school aged youths drinking beer.

Police confronted the resident of the apartment and found that no one present was over 21.

The resident of the home was arrested for being a minor in possession. About 15-20 youths were dispersed.

The youth was later bailed.

At 10:45 p.m., police stopped the driver of a white Chevrolet Monte Carlo, leaving a Church Street party.

Daniel Kinsbourne, 17, of Cambridge Street, was given both the alpahabet and head tilt test. He was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol.

Police said Kinsbourne took a breathalyzer test and registered .12.

He was later bailed.

At 11:30 p.m., a 1978 Buick Sedan parked on Forest Street was struck on the bumper by a blue Pontiac Grand Am, which left the scene immediately after the incident.

Friday, Nov. 28

At 10:15 p.m., police noticed a 1977 Datsun 280Z without tail or plate lights.

The vehicle was brought to a stop in front of Mahoney's on Cambridge Street, after crossing the yellow line three times.

The driver, John Burgess, 52, of Revere was given a sobriety test and the alphabet test three times. He was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol and later bailed.

Wednesday, Nov. 26

At 5:40 a.m., police observed a green Dodge Omni traveling south on Main Street in an erratic fashion, without tail or plate lights.

When the vehicle was brought to a stop, the driver, a Woburn resident, failed to produce a license or registration.

A later check showed his license to be suspended, and the driver was arrested for operating after suspension and with defective equipment.

Saturday, Nov. 29

At 12:17 a.m. police were notified of an injured person at the Knights of Columbus hall on Mt. Vernon Street.

A Wilmington man had fallen over the staircase. Help was called and the patient was transported to Winchester Hospital.

At 12:27 a.m. police observed a red Chevy Camaro operating erratically on Cambridge Street, near Woburn.

When stopped, the driver, a Cambridge man, failed to produce license or registration, and gave two different identification numbers.

Police learned that the man had a revoked license, and possessed two different licenses under the same name.

He was issued a citation for operating without a license and registration.

The citation relative to the revocation of license will be prepared for him in court.

At 1 a.m., police noticed a brown 1983 Ford Escort crossing yellow lines and braking suddenly to avoid striking other cars.

The vehicle was stopped on Main Street. Paul Bianco, 24, of Medford, was given the field sobriety test, the alphabet test and the heel-to-toe test.

Bianco was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol and failure to stay in marked lines. Police said he registered a .13 on the breathalyzer test.

He was placed on bail.

High school band auction 'success'

As auctioneer Wally Gagel rapped down the last item after nearly three hours of selling, he declared the Winchester High School marching band auction to raise funds for the band's trip to the Gator Bowl Festival a success.

About $4,300 was raised at the auction night, organizers said.

The auction, coordinated by Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Upper, offered over 150 items Nov. 21. Items ranged from records to cue sticks, from pillows to fuel oil, from a fox stole to a Yamaha motor scooter.

The Uppers scheduled a flea market at the same time. "This was so donated items not quite new could have an outlet," said Nancy Upper. "We had bicycles, skates, dishes, and even a stereo."

"We were pleased with the cooperation we received," said Dennis Upper. "I was especially impressed with the help we received from some merchants. I know these good people are approached by many worthwhile causes, and they seem to be able to help out 'just one more' each time. Business people are like everyone else. They have no bottomless pocket from which to draw contributions. Yet they seem to have a special pride and enthusiasm for the activities of this community."

Also offered for sale at the auction were services of various sorts by band members. Although some of the services were sold, there are many left, and the students hope to sell these services to aid in the total fundraising effort.

"Anyone interested in hiring these students can get good, reliable services and at the same time help the band," promised Upper. "Available services include babysitting, leaf raking, snow shoveling, party waiters and waitresses, musical entertainment, and house cleaning."

A few gift certificates came into the auction so late they could not be offered for sale. These include dry cleaning and beauty salon certificates.

For information about engaging Band students for these services, or for purchasing the gift certificates, contact the Uppers at 721-2340.

With less than four weeks left before the Band is scheduled to depart for Jacksonville to participate in the Gator Bowl Festival, the fundraising committee continues to seek contributions. Each student is required to pay for almost half the cost of his trip.

Sandy Rodgers, chairman of the fundraising committee, is confident the town will make the trip possible. "From the flight down to the flight back and everything in beteween, all costs are being paid for by the students' assessments, the fundraising efforts, and contributions. Nothing is coming from the school department budget, even though we see this as a real educational trip for the band."

Donations, which are fully tax-deductible, can be made through contributions coordinator Lucy Peck, 134 Mt. Vernon St., 729-2494.

High school revises way of determining class rank

By JANINE DIGIOVANNI

Major changes in the Winchester High School curriculum will "encourage students to reach out to whatever it is that they're capable of," principal Vincent Larocco told a school board meeting Nov.25.

Larocca said changes will include a point system to determine class rank.

The system is based on a weighted formula, which will determine grade point average and class rank for the class of 1988 and subsequent classes. The system works as follows:

All courses, except those which receive a pass/fail mark, are included in determining the formula

Class rank is determined at the end of the junior year, at mid-year of the senior year, and again at the completion of senior year.

For each credit a student completes beyond the required number, a student will receive .3 bonus points to be used when determining a grade point average. A student may receive up to 1.5 bonus points each year.

Courses are divided into leveling schematics to determine bonus points.

For example, level 1 courses are advanced placement courses, roughly equivilant to freshmen college courses. Consequently, advanced placement courses are designed for the most advanced students and receive bonus points in the highest grade category.

Level two courses include those courses which are preparatory for the advanced placement. Students who wish to remain in the sequence must maintain B grades or better.

Level three are designed for the majority of students who intend to pursue their education beyond high school. Students should be maintaining an average grade in these courses,

Level four are courses for students seeking basic academic preparation. Some of these courses, such as art or stage band, may be acceptable to certain colleges when the major in college is in the area of special interest or talent.

All courses are assigned a specific "weight value" depending on their difficulty. Students may take courses for higher weight by contract, to produce work significantly better than that normally expected of the course. They would receive higher points.

"The change addresses an inequity," Larocco said.

Five new courses have also been approved by Larocco and David Ackerman, assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction.

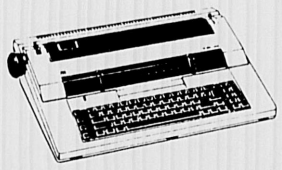

These courses include: commercial air brushing; "Survival in the Fast Lane," an auto beginners course; manufacturing technology; unified math; and business management.

The new courses won general support from committee members, although some disliked the title of the auto mechanics course.

"I'm not happy with the title," said Alice McCarter. "It reminds me of drugs and pressure."

Other board members wondered if the course should be taught in the schools. Larocco said the course is "a practical approach. Everyone in this day and age owns a car. It may save your life, knowing how to change a tire or fix your car if it breaks down."

The new courses were accepted under the condition that the name be reconsidered.

HOW HIGH IS UP?

There was a time when it was unheard of to pay $100,000 for a home. Now, in many parts of the country, it's either a bargain, a starter or a fixer-upper. How high can prices go?

For comparison, consider what has happened to driving in the past ten years. Gasoline prices doubled. At first, the public balked but then quickly adjusted to the new price levels. They didn't stop driving. Automobile prices doubled. Again, the public balked but quickly adjusted. Ten years ago, car buyers would take one or two-year car loans. Today, car buyers take three, four and five year loans to make their purchase affordable. Driving is a necessity and so is the roof over your head.

As home appreciation rates continue to climb, simple math shows us that today's $100,000 house will sell for over $200,000 not too long into the future. You can buy today and profit from the climb, or you can wait. Those who wait, as well as the next generation, will pay the highest prices. They too will adjust.

No. 1 in Winchester because we care. . . It's more than just a business with us. . . it's you and the professional service we provide for you that is the cornerstone of our continued success . . . that's why more buyers and sellers select ANN BLACKHAM & CO. to be their Real Estate broker.

Swim teams will move to Woburn YMCA

By JANINE DIGIOVANNI

The Winchester High School swim team is temporarily swimming at the Vocational School in Wakefield, though it appears likely the team will move to the Woburn YMCA.

Though the school board voted Nov. 25 to begin swim practice in Woburn, complications arose since practice began Monday.

"It came as a shock that there was a problem with the Woburn YMCA" superintendent Charles Mitsakos said. "There was a snag on availablity, a conflict with another group. Until that problem can be resolved, the team needs to practice and will do so at the vocational school."

School board committee members approved the YMCA in Woburn as the practice site for the swim team Nov.25, although principal Vincent Larocco and athletic director William Colella favored the Northeast Regional Vocational School in Wakefield.

"Cost is the one factor in using Northeast," Larocco said.

"And the fact that Voke offers two hours of practice a day, whereas the YMCA only offers one hour and 15 minutes, is another."

"The Voke" is available for practice between 5 and 7 a.m. for $140 a week. Woburn YMCA is available between 5 and 6:15 a.m. for $150 a week.

Parents and board members said the Voke's major disadvantage is safety. Students under 18 are not allowed to drive until after 5 a.m. and the Voke is further away than Woburn.

"The months of swim practice are the worst months of the year in terms of driving condtions," school board member Edward F. O'Connell said.

"My son is exhausted at five in the morning," one mother said. "So I drive him. I would hate to think about those kids driving on that dangerous road to the Voke in the dark at 5 a.m. I'd rather have them use the YMCA, have less time in the water, but be safer getting there."

"Another factor is that most of the students leave the house without having breakfast. If they swim at the YMCA, there's a McDonald's right across the street. They can grab something on their way to school. But the Voke is so far away that they won't be able to have breakfast before going to school."

Larocco said an extra 45 minutes of practice in the morning is essential to the swim team's performance.

"We all agree that afternoon swimming time would be the most logical, but it isn't really possible. Parents request that the dinner hour not be used as practice time, and in order for the team to be competitive, studies show that at least two hours of practice is necessary.

Last year the team practiced at The Woburn Boys Club, but did not want to return this year for health reasons.

One parent said, "The team was undefeated last year and won the league championship and they only practiced one hour a day. Most of the swimmers swim elsewhere on their own time, anyway. I really don't think there is that much difference between one hour and 45 minutes and two hours in the water."

Board member Stephen Powers also recommended the YMCA for safety reasons.

"The students won't have to leave until after five," he said. He also said that swimmers had to be out of the water by 6:30 to get breakfast before getting to school on time.

"We feel Northeast has the best options," Larocco said. "It's the most logical and sensible thing to do."

Among other options considered were the Watertown Boys Club, Arlington Boys and Girls Club, Minuteman Regional Vocational High School, Tufts University, the Melrose YMCA and Medford High School.

"Another complaint has been that the number of hours of practice time available to our swimmers is considerably less than those teams we compete against," Larocco wrote in a letter to Mitsakos.

"All things considered, safety, time, cost, etc., we feel the Voke school is our best bet and so we recommend."

Savings Bank adds student loan funds

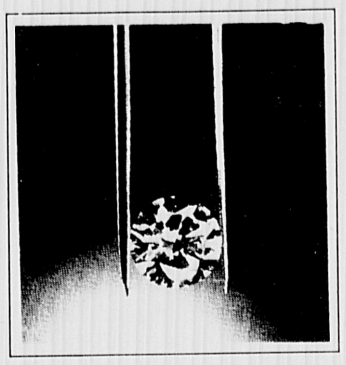

Autumn brings good news for area students because Winchester Savings Bank has made over $380,000 available to make more guaranteed student loans. By selling a portion of its student loan portfolio to "Nellie Mae," the New England Education Loan Marketing Corporation, Winchester Savings is generating new capital to make more education credit available to New England students.

"When Winchester Savings Bank joins with Nellie Mae the outcome assures the strength of the guaranteed student loan program," says Lawrence W. O'Toole, president of Nellie Mae.

In addition to participating in the guaranteed student loan program, Winchester Savings also makes loans to parents of undergraduate students.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Dick Murphy
The Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors

SHOULD YOU MAKE A BACK-UP OFFER

After looking at houses for weeks, you finally find one that's perfect! Unfortunately your agent checks its status to find that it sold just yesterday. Don't lose all hope. Your agent may suggest that you make a back-up offer, so that if the prospective buyers don't go through with the purchase, you'll be the next in line.

The first rule of being "second in line" is don't get attached to the house, and keep looking. There are things that can and may go wrong with the first contract. For example: the prospective buyers may get a terminal case of "buyers' remorse" and back out during the structural contingency period, or their financing may not be approved. They may have another home to sell and a limited amount of time in which to do it. At the same time, however, they do have a strong legal interest in the house as the contract purchasers, and their purchase may go very smoothly. Remember that the back-up offer you make gives you a chance, however remote, of getting a house you love. You just can't count on it!

At Bixby & Porter Company Realtors, you'll find the professional help and guidance necessary to handle all of your real estate needs. Please call us at 729-7000 or stop by our offices at 33 Thompson St. in Winchester.

Town groups donate to Gator fund

The goal of the Winchester High School Marching Band's Gator Bowl Fund came several steps closer as some of the town's philanthropic and service organizations made significant donations recently.

A major supporter of the WHS Band throughout the years has been the Winchester Rotary Club. Neil Harte, president of Rotary, said, "Six years ago we helped purchase several uniforms the band now wears. It was then we began to notice how active this group of young people is. Our members figure if we can encourage that kind of activity among the youth, everyone is going to benefit."

Rotary also has been a main-stay of funding for the Band and for the Cherry Blossom Festival and the Peach Bown Festival trips. "We never take Rotary for granted," said Sandy Rodgers, chairman of the Gator Bowl Fundraising Committee, "because they have so many worthwhile requests made of them throughout the year. But because they have been so generous to the Band, we feel a special relationship."

The EnKa Society has been especially supportive of the band. Raising funds through the EnKa Exchange shop and the annual EnKa Fair, this women's organization donates to programs throughout the town.

Carol Johnson, president, said the gifts committee receives more requests than EnKa could possibly fulfill. "It is always difficult to decide the best way to allocate our limited funds, because all the requests are important. But the band seems to be one of the truly worthwhile endeavors EnKa feels good about supporting."

Johnson said, "We believe participating in the Gator Bowl Festival will be a valuable learning experience. EnKa is pleased to endorse this very special kind of learning opportunity."

John Mercurio, president of the Winchester Kiwanis Club, noted, "We applaud the fine performances of the band. They participate in many town functions to help make these events successful. But most important, we feel the band offers an opportunity for so many students at the high school to grow through the discipline of music. Kiwanis is pleased to be able to help."

The Winchester Lions Club was the first of the service clubs to donate to the Gator Bowl Fund. King Lion Norman Doucette commented that although the main effort of the Lions is to support eye research, "Our members recognize the real importance of helping town causes as well. We think kids deserve whatever help we can give them."

Massachusetts Lions now have a state-wide band that performs at the mid-winter conference and the international convention. The band is made up of high school band members from all across the state. Some students from the Winchester band have participated in this Lions group.

Doucette observed, "We have been proud of our Winchester kids. This donation is one way we can share that pride."

Rodgers said she hopes other organizations will be able to help. "With only a few weeks to go before the trip, we need input from as many people as possible, and the sooner the better."

All donations can be made to the contribution coordinator, Lucy Peck, at 134 Mt. Vernon St., 729-2494.

New donors listed

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Auditions planned for play to be directed by local woman

Dorothy Santos of Winchester will direct the Tony award-winning play, "The Rope Dancers", by Morton Wishengrad for the Arlington Friends of the Drama.

Auditions are scheduled at 2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6, and at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 9, at the AFD Theatre, 22 Academy St., Arlington Center.

Santos is well-known to Winchester theatre-goers and young people as acting coach for the Winchester Cooperative Theatre for Children, where she helped produce "Mary Poppins" and "Cinderalla".

The idea for the Winton Club production of "Bravo, Broadway!" was conceived by Santos and she was stage director for several Winchester High School shows, among them "The Diary of Anne Frank", "Hello, Dolly", "The Music Man" and "Lil Abner".

Santos has been active in professional, university, and community theatre for over 30 years. For this new endeavor she seeks a cast of nine characters to flesh out "The Rope Dancers." A young couple, their 11-year-daughter, born with a slight deformity, a middle-aged neighbor woman and her young daughter, and four middle-aged men: a cop, a moving man, a truant officer and a kindly doctor.

The story is a grim tale of an Irish-American couple in turn-of-the-century New York City whose daughter has been born with six fingers on her left hand. The puritanical mother attributes her daughter's abnormality as punishment from God and she blames her husband's philandering and her own secret sensuality.

Siobhan McKenna, Art Carney, Joan Blondell and Theodore Bikel created the roles in this strong drama, which ends on the hope of a happy home at last.

Audition readings will be from the script. All are advised to read the play prior to try-outs. For further information call Santos at 729-2349.

Art Association show to open

The Winchester Art Association's December members' holiday exhibit runs Dec. 6-30.

Mixed media artworks as well as handcrafted gift items and cards will be on display. The opening reception will be from 5 to 7 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6.

In January, the gallery will host an exhibition of works by members of the Studio Guild.

The gallery, located at 585A Main Street, is open Tuesday through Saturday, noon to 4 p.m.

Music school reps at conference

Corie Nichols, director of the Winchester Community Music School, and Carol Fieleke, board member, attended the annual conference of the National Guild of Community Schools of the Arts in Washington, D.C., Nov. 21-24.

The guild is an association of 160 non-profit, non-degree-granting schools in the U.S. and Canada.

'Nutcracker' to be staged again by Ballet Theatre

The enchantments of "The Nutcracker"--a Christmas tree that grows as you watch, giant mice battling life-size toy soldiers, a wooden nutcracker that comes to life as a prince, waltzing snowflakes, the Sugar Plum Fairy--will be on stage in Winchester when the Winchester Ballet Theatre presents its 6th annual production of the ballet, directed and choreographed by Darlene Wigton.

Show times are 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday Dec. 12 and 13 at the high school auditorium.

The full-length version of the traditional story ballet is created for audiences of all ages, from school children, who are delighted with the giant teddy bear and mechanical toys, through senior citizerns, who can relate to their contemporaries portraying Clara's grandparents as they dance at the Christmas Party.

The cast includes 39 men and women of varying professions, several of whom have studied dance extensively in the U.S. and England and some of whom are presently serious students of ballet.

While many reside in the Winchester area, the cast represents 20 different communities, some as distant as Holbrook and Nashua, N.H.

The role of Clara, the recipient of the nutcracker gift, is danced by Darlene Wigton, and the Nutcracker Prince by Lincoln Clark III of Chelmsford. Wigton and Clark, along with David Workman, Jeffry Workman and Eric Workman, all of Wakefield, founded the theater in 1979 and first presented "The Nutcracker" in Winchester in 1980.

Tickets are $8 at the door and $7 in advance from Lucky Lady Boutique, O'Neil's Pharmacy, and Book Ends in Winchester. For other locations, senior citizens' discount, group rates, or other information, 933-4976.

Proceeds from refreshments available during intermission and part of ticket sales benefit Yvonne Brown's Winchester S.P.C.A. animal shelter project.

Music students perform concert

Students from the Winchester Community Music School performed recently for residents of Mt. Vernon House. In a festive pre-Thanksgiving setting Nov. 17, they played music of Bach, Bloet, Saint-Saens, Monteverdi, Mozart, Faure and Burgess.

Elizabeth Cavitch played flute, Carl Hirschfeld cello and Dusty Maxwell cello. Ben Coonley, Mahrya Dakubu, and Anya Schoenegge combined as a recorder trio.

Susan Solomon performed a piece for voice and Patty Cummings, a student of Susan Barrett, played piano.

COMMENT

An old safe guards treasured memories

By TERRY MAROTTA

I have not seen my grandfather in almost 30 years now. Not since he broke his hip, suffered a stroke and went away for good in a polished wooden box.

The morning they buried him, I stood at the front window waiting for the funeral car, the taste of salt on my cheeks and the smell of new wool gloves in my nostrils.

It was his window that I stood at, his house that I lived in.

It had oak-paneled rooms and whole walls of stained glass that took the thin Boston sunlight and transformed it into colors rich as King Arthur's robes. It had rose-colored tiles surrounding one fireplace, and the three-dimensional face of a lion worked into the wall of another.

Even when I lived there back in the '50s, it seemed a house from another era. It recalled a time when flags snapped smartly in the breeze of a brand new century; when men wore boaters with a jaunty optimism and women floated more than walked beside them down the broad and tree-lined streets.

It was a good house to be a child in, roomy and comfortable and full of old secrets. We kids explored it by the hour, even climbed by a rickety ladder to its tall hipped roof once and looked out from the widows' walk to the blue arc of Massachusetts Bay.

My grandfather went to the hospital in December. The next time I saw him, in February, he lay in his coffin. That June we went away for the summer, and when we came back in September, it was to a new house in a new town.

I never saw the old house again, until I saw it last month. Pulled by memory, I called and sought permission from its present owners to visit it once more.

In many ways, it has changed, of course. But in many ways, it has stayed the same. The rose tiles are still there, and the oak paneled walls; stained glass sunlight still drenches the rugs; the lion roars on in the foyer.

I made my pilgrimage through its rooms, moving slowly, seeing not so much all that was there as all that wasn't: the faces of those who lived in it; our old folks, dead now; my mother, young; the dim ghost of my own babyhood.

When, in the course of the tour, we entered what for us had been the coat room, I remarked on the absence of the old safe that had been hidden behind the coats, filigreed and monogrammed in gold paint, and built into the wall.

"There's an old safe on legs, down in the cellar," my host told me.

We made our way down there, eventually. I seemed to smell coal hauled before the Great War. I seemed to see the Victorian bird cage that stood once in the corner; the old washing machine with the wringer on top.

And then I saw the safe: massive, black, pulled out of the wall now, its bulk exposed, monogrammed and filigreed as I'd remembered it.

"We can't open it," my host told me. "We don't have the combination."

I went home then. I could not forget that safe though, which was not a fixture in the house after all, like the windows and the paneling, but a thing that could have been moved, but wasn't. Wasn't.

I asked my mother what she remembered of it. "I can see my father's hands," she said, "manipulating its lock. I can hear the sound the tumblers made when he finished dialing the combination."

"You don't have that combination anywhere do you?" I wondered.

"In the safest place there is," she answered, tapping her forehead.

I think of it still. The folks in the house offered to give it to us.

The thing is enormous. It would cost a fortune to move. It goes without saying that it's empty.

Ah, but is it? to those searching for tangibles, maybe.

To me, though, and to my mom? It's full. It's brimming with treasure.

BEACON HILL

The House and Senate, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 5 roll calls and local senators' votes on 1 roll call from the week of November 24-28.

Regents(H 6396)- House 117-29, Senate 26-13, overrode Governor Dukakis' veto of a bill retroactively exempting former and present members of the Board of Regents of Higher Education from a section of the state conflict of interest law. The bill provides that any regent affiliated with private institutions of higher education who participates in any board matter that might affect the financial interest of that institution would be exempt from the conflict of interest law.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

Senator Richard Kraus voted yes.

Surtax(H 6487)- Without a word of debate, the House 135-8, gave near final approval and sent to the Senate the bill immediately repealing the 7.5 percent surtax. Earlier in the year, the legislature had approved a bill speeding up the surtax repeal, but when voters approved the tax cap at the polls, they also voided this speedier surtax repeal.

This House action reinstitutes that immediate repeal.

A Yea vote is for the repeal. A Nay vote is against repeal.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

SBLI(H 6413)- House 131-3, gave near final approval and sent to the Senate a bill raising from $60,000 to $250,000 the maximum amount of savings bank life insurance (SBLI) an individual can purchase.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

More SBLI(H 6413)- House 79-63, rejected an SBLI bill amendment giving the insurance commissioner jurisdiction over some SBLI activities.

Supporters said the amendment is a pro-consumer one which gives the commissioner some necessary authority to regulate.

Opponents said the amendment is anti-consumer and is the first in a series of attempts to water down the bill and kill any improvements for SBLI.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Computers(H 6467)- House 114-24, rejected an amendment to strike a $950,000 item for computer equipment, software and other expenses for the House from a $5.1 million package funding some collective bargaining agreements.

Amendment supporters said the cost of operating the legislature is already excessive and claimed the $950,000 is not necessary.

A Yea vote is against the $950,000. A Nay vote is for it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

GUEST COLUMN

Judeo-Christian heritage doesn't need to apologize

By PASTOR PAUL and MONA JOHNIAN

This is in response to the recent article regarding the Interfaith Council of Winchester commending the school committee for taking all mention of Christmas out of the public schools.

There is something wrong when one man's freedom robs you of yours. Public expression of our faith is one thing that distinguishes the United States of America from all other nations.

Social and religious traditions are as much a part of our children's education, and enjoyment, as any other facet of life. One of the highlights of our young lives was the celebration of Christmas with our classmates.

Why should we Judeo-Christian people of America have to continually apologize for our influence in the public life of this nation? Does India apologize for being Hindu?

Do the 800 million Arabs in various nations apologize for being Islamic? Do the communist nations apologize for being atheistic? Does Japan apologize for being ninety-nine percent Buddhist?

What is wrong with a country having a religious identity?

If the various minority religions in America want to celebrate their holidays let them do so! They have every right. That is the true nature of liberty - equal rights.

And because we are in the majority does not make us guilty of violating the minority. To favor minority is as unjust as favoring the majority.

Please, before you suggest we all run into our little cubicles called temples and churches to celebrate, let me assure you we have travelled in several communist countries where they do just that. And we have found that when people lose the freedom to be public with their faith, the whole complexion of their religious life is greatly diminished.

Public spiritual liberty is not only a simple pleasure in our troubled world, it is vital to the balance of the individual personality as well as the social health of a nation - not to mention the absolute necessity it is to our economic survival.

And before we curse money, certainly, none of us would be living in Winchester without it. According to the managers of our largest department stores, the retail business would collapse if Christmas disappeared. I say this to point out the very real fact that Christmas benefits people of all faiths.

Above all, public freedom is the only freedom that will continue to guarantee private liberty to celebrate our cherished and time-honored beliefs. Christmas and Hanukkah mean a lot to millions of American children. It is their heritage. And there is nothing ugly about an identifiable national religious heritage.

(The Johnians are Winchester residents. He is pastor at the Christian Teaching and Worship Center in Woburn.)

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Thanksgiving thanks to EnKa

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to thank the EnKa Society for making this Thanksgiving a very thankful one for me and my family because of the group's generous gift.

It is painful enough being out of work for seven months with a bad break. Knowing there are people out there who care makes the pain that much easier to bear.

God bless you all.

Many help with town decorations

TO THE EDITOR:

The holidays are fast approaching and everyone's time is very precious. Yet, there are always those people who can find time to help others and contribute to making Winchester a better place to live and work.

Many of these individuals came down to the Winchester Chamber of Commerce Sunday to assist with the decorating of hundreds of light poles. The weather was cold, the work was tedious, but the spirit was warm and jovial.

The Winchester Chamber of Commerce would like to express appreciation to the following people who helped to transform the center and create the festive atmosphere for all to enjoy:

Ray Callahan, Harry Chefalo, Bob Deering, Allan Eyden, Mark Lombardi, Catherine Jackson, Ralph Johnson, Chad Maurer, Martha O'Neil, Tom and Sue Patrolia, Teresa Pisacreta, Marcia Saltmarsh, Frank Sopper and Joe Vitka.

Sincerely,
Richard Malcolm
President

Class of 1961 thanks Purity

TO THE EDITOR:

The Winchester High School class of 1961 thanks Leo Hebert, manager of the Purity Supreme store, for his generous contribution to the class' 25th reunion, held Nov. 29 at the Ramada Inn in Woburn.

He contributed a wheel of cheese and snacks to the hospitality room.

Forest Circle residents happy

TO THE EDITOR:

Enclosed is a copy of my letter to town engineer John Ciarcia.

Dear John,

Just a note of "thanks" for improving and repairing the street drainage system on Forest Circle. I feel I can speak for my neighbors, as well as myself, for the work that has been done.

There has been good cooperation between the town departments and the construction firm building the houses in the area. I feel that this should be recognized by all.

Sincerely yours,
David M. Brooks

SENIOR NEWS

Jenks Senior Center mini-fair scheduled Saturday

The annual Mini Fair of the Winchester Seniors Association is scheduled from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6. Randy Kazazian's snack bar will be open throughout the fair. The final event will be a drawing of the lucky number for the beautiful Bengali rug, six by nine feet. The winner need not be present.

There will be costume jewelry, gifts, knit goods, men's boutiques, women's boutiques, aprons, children's games, toys, and dolls, and a table of home-baked goods. During the day, there is a final opportunity to buy tickets for the artistic rug, a gift from Koko Boodakian Sons, Inc.

Grace Dignam, back row, right, chairman of Winchester Seniors Association bake sale, presents a $500 check to Winchester High School marching band treasurer Dee Pedulla. In the front are drum majors Deirdre Skehan, Ann Mueller and Marilyn Cummings.

Introduction to computers scheduled

Are you familiar with the full services of computers? The Winchester Seniors Association Education Committee will present Jack McCarthy at 10:30 a.m. Friday, Dec. 12, at the Jenks Senior Center. He will discuss computers. A computer specialist, he has much to offer and promises to be non-technical. He will survey early computer development, the present "state-of-the-art," and future expectations. In a computer-oriented society, it is important to have some knowledge of computers. The public is invited.

New chairman for building and grounds

The building and grounds committee at the Jenks Senior Center is an important group of volunteers working for the development maintenance of the Jenks Senior Center's building and grounds. It is responsible for the protection of the building and its contents. The work of the part-time custodian is supervised by the committee, which also monitors work performed by service and other contractors.

For many years, Claire and Mal Masters have dedicated countless hours to this important work, accomplishing outstanding results. Now they feel that it is time to place the responsibilities of leadership in other hands.

The Winchester Seniors Association extends sincere appreciation to the Masters for their long and efficient service.

Anthony Nowlan has agreed to take over the multiple chores. He is well-qualified to assume the responsibilities in view of his wide background of experience in the architectural and construction fields.

Holiday dance Sat. Dec. 13

Saturday evening, Dec. 13, the usual monthly dance will be held with Dick Brogna's tunes enticing everyone to feel the joy of moving to the rhythmic sway of popular melodies. Come to the holiday dance from 8 p.m. to midnight and enjoy the spirit of the approaching season.

What is your hobby?

Winchester's seniors pursue a wide variety of interesting and exciting hobbies. The Winchester Seniors Association Education Committee will sponsor a hobby show from 1 to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 7, at the Jenks Senior Center to show what creative people do during leisure hours.

The education committee of the WSA urges seniors to display their special hobby to stimulate othes to experiment with a new field of interest. As visitors roam around exhibit tables, exhibitors will be there to answer questions.

Plan to be a participant. Call 721-7136 and submit your name, telephone number and the nature of an exhibit. The committee looks forward to its first hobby show. This very early notice will allow seniors to prepare to share special intersts.

New Year's Eve party set

Jeanette Baird is chairing the New Year's Eve party at the Jenks Senior Center from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Dec. 31 with the assistance of a capable committee. Helen Hodgdon is preparing the buffet. Bring healthy appetites to enjoy the delicacies.

It will be necessary to make reservations for the party at once since there will have to be a cut-off in numbers. Dick Brogna's tapes will be pleasurable for dancing and a popular young entertainer will perform on his guitar. He has developed a "one-man-band" act.

Eric Kilburn has produced several albums and has won acclaim for being a diverse and extremely talented performer.

Again this year, the generosity of Ann Blackham makes this party of dinng, dancing, and entertainment a joyous occasion for seniors.

Home tax credit for housing elders

New legislation for Massachusetts elders will eliminate increased property taxes for some homeowners who build additions onto their homes so that elders can live there, according to elder affairs secretary Richard E. Rowland.

Not all homeowners will be eligible for tax credits. Certain guidelines must be met:

1. In order for homeowners to claim the tax exemption, the law passed by the state must be accepted by local town or city government.

2. The resident and homeowner do not have to be related but the elder resident must be at least 60 years of age.

3. The homeowner is free to charge rent to the elder.

4. The tax exemption applies only as long as the elder is in residence.

5. There is no limitation to the size of the addition, although most additions would include a bedroom and a bathroom.

6. Local housing authorities must verify annually that there is a person 60 years of age or older in residence in the renovated area.

7. The person 60 or older cannot be the homeowner.

Faith Fellowship celebrates five years

Faith Fellowship Ministries of New England, located at 263 Main St. in Winchester, celebrated its fifth anniversary with services beginning Nov. 12, with evangelists Buddy Harrison, Ed Dufresne, and Vicki-Jamison-Peterson, all of Tulsa, Okla.

Just five years ago, Pastor Jonathan DelTurco and his wife Verna arrived in Massachusetts with their two infant children and began this family church that has affected hundreds of lives throughout New England.

Although celebration services were scheduled to end Nov. 16, "a spirit of revival broke forth that added another week of nightly services,' Del Turco said.

If anyone questions the validity of the miracle-working power of God today, he needs only ask the 800 or 900 people who took part in these services, experiencing the presence of God in a tangible way. Miracles of healing from dissolved tumors to freedom from painful diseases occurred nightly, as well as intense joy and laughter.

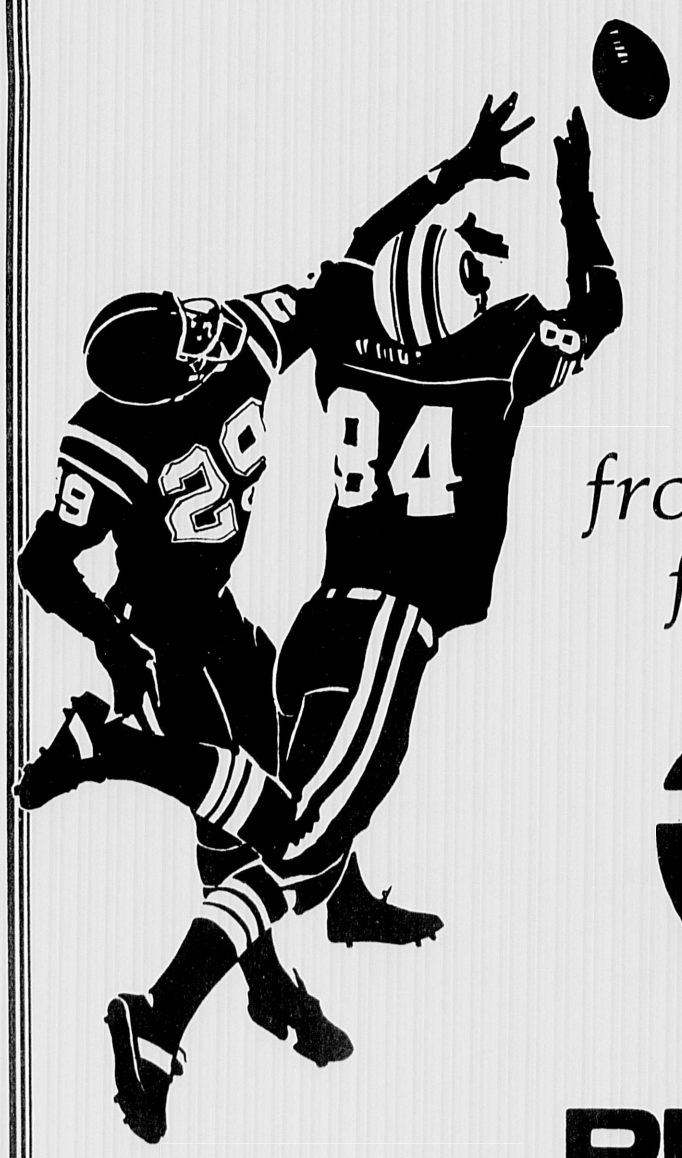

"Many who visited the meetings received Jesus Christ as their personal savior, truly the greatest miracle of all," he said.

Faith Fellowship Ministries meets at 10 a.m. Sundays at Winchester High School, and at 7:30 p.m. Wednesdays at the Main Street location.

Unitarian youth group asks for gifts for other teenagers

Christmas is a time of joy for most, a time of sharing, worship, reuniting with loved ones, and/or family gatherings in the spirit of the joyous season.

Unfortunately for more than 300 boys and 100 girls, ages 12 to 17, it will not be a joyful season. Coming from broken homes, disrupted lives, abandoned by friends and family, forgotten, institutionalized, feeling that no one cares, these young people will spend this Christmas as other Christmases, another day among many.

In conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Youth Services, the Junior Youth Group of the Winchester Unitarian Church will accept donations of gifts for teenagers across the state who might otherwise have a very empty Christmas season.

The following suggestions came from the Winchester students who tried to think of presents, within a reasonable price range, they would like to receive:

Boys: aftershave lotion, socks, craft kits, hats, sweaters, candy and gloves.

Girls: cosmetics, sweaters, games, pierced earrings, bracelets, hats, scarves and perfume.

Last year, the Department of Youth Services sent 2,300 letters in a "Teenage Christmas" appeal. Only 63 responses came back. Winchester Unitarian teenagers would like to make a difference this year, and encourage people to remember that the child in everyone likes to receive a gift Christmas morning.

Please bring donations to the Winchester Unitarian Church office at 478 Main St. across from Lincoln School, before Dec. 20. For information, call the church office at 729-0949 or junior youth group director Cindy Chetwynd at 275-3638.

Temple plans December services

Temple Shir Tikvah of Winchester has listed its December services at the First Congregational Church.

A family service is planned at 10 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 13.

A service is also scheduled at 7:45 p.m. Friday, Dec. 26.

The Sachems advance to Super Bowl

Woburn could not develop a running game and the Sachem pass rush applied more pressure on Doherty than the Tanners could handle.

Winchester's offense, meanwhile, met a tough Tanner defense inside but was able to run outside and threaten enough passing to keep the Woburn secondary honest.

Woburn received the second half kick-off and began to move, finally reaching the Winchester nine-yard line.

Winchester's defense held and Tanner coach Rocky Nelson went for the field goal. But a crucial mistake did the Tanners in. The snap was misplayed and the play fell dead.

Another mistake, this one by Winchester, followed. The Sachems gave Woburn its second gift when quarterback John DeMarco fumbled on first down.

With 9:57 left in the third quarter, Woburn had the ball on the Sachems' one-yard line and a chance to go ahead with one quarter left.

Digiralamo put the ball over to cut the margin to 14-13. A passing attempt for a two-point conversion failed when Duran slipped on the damp turf.

Winchester clung to a one-point lead with most of the fourth quarter to play.

The Sachem offense stalled on the next series and Winchester had to punt.

Woburn's offense, now trying to develop a passing game, also stalled. Digiralamo had been moved to block Winchester's Nowell but linemen Mike Vozzella and John Mathson continued to rush the Woburn quarterback with authority.

The biggest play of the game came on the next series. Winchester had the ball on second down at its own 25-yard line.

DeMarco decided to keep the ball himself on a veer option play and sprinted 58 yards to the Woburn 17-yard line.

With the wind taken out of their sails, Woburn players for the first time began to look worried.

The Sachems were not through at the 25, however. With Cromwell rushing on most plays, the Sachems turned the Woburn lights out with 2:52 left in the game: Cromwell scored from the two-yard line to make it 20-13.

Sachem coach Manny Marshall took no chances, opting for a two-point conversion run by Cromwell. It worked and Winchester led 22-13.

Revenge was the Sachems'. Time ran out with no further scoring.

"Nothing was going to stop us. Now everybody knows we're the best team," Cromwell said. On the day, he rushed for 158 yards.

"The pass rush was excellent, the defense was excellent and the offense was able to get the big play when needed," said linebacker Richie Burke.

The Sachems won the big game, although they did not play perfect football. Woburn was able to break the continuity of the Winchester offense but when yards were needed, the Sachems still came through.

Perhaps the biggest change in Woburn's play was within its own 15-yard line. The Tanners had been tough close to its own end zone all year but were unable to control play there Thanksgiving Day.

Woburn's offense never succeeded; both of the Tanners' scores came as a result of Winchester mistakes.

"They were the toughest team we faced this year," said Shaw.

"We had a few difficulties with our offense," said Aaron West, "but overall we dominated like we said we would."

"We finally reached our four-year goal. I've never felt anything like it," DeMarco said.

With the undisputed championship of the Middlesex League in its possession, Winchester has one more step to take.

At 1 p.m. Saturday, the 10-0 Sachems will meet the 10-0 Peabody Tanners at Sullivan Stadium in Foxboro for the Division I Super Bowl crown.

Driscolls shine for Curry booters

Steve Driscoll of Winchester was named the most valuable player for the Curry College men's soccer team this fall.

His brother, Mike Driscoll, a junior, was the big scorer for the Milton college with eight goals and two assists.

Steve Driscoll, a senior goalkeeper-turned-forward, had the second highest point total with five goals and three assists.

The team outshot its opponents but finished with a 5-12-1 record.

Mike Driscoll will be one of next year's team co-captains with Jon Levine of Needham.

Bus trips set to Super Bowl

Several buses will be ready Saturday to take Winchester fans to the Super Bowl at Sullivan Stadium in Foxboro.

The Winchester Youth Center will offer buses leaving from behind McCall Junior High School at 11:30 a.m. Buses will return immediately after the game.

Tickets are $8, including game tickets. Registation deadline is 4 p.m. Friday and all are welcome. For information, call 729-7129 or 721-7125.

Winchester Football Boosters are also organizing a bus trip which will leave the town hall at 9:50 a.m. For information, call Nancy McIntyre at 729-2130, ext. 296.

Tickets to the game are available at $3.50 in Winchester but will be $5 at the stadium. They are available at Bellino's Pizza, Cradock Pharmacy, Winchester Drug and O'Neil's Pharmacy.

Fans unable to be at Saturday's Super Bowl can listen to live play-by-play coverage on WMRE radio, 1510 AM. A pre-game show will start at 12:45 p.m. Saturday, 15 minutes before kickoff.

The annual football banquet, scheduled Wednesday night, was postponed until 4 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 11, at the Knights of Columbus hall.

Peabody

suspect so expect Winchester to throw the ball Saturday afternoon.

Winchester will also run the option a great deal Saturday and may give Peabody a good look at a play it has not seen before.

Peabody has no experience against the option. Combined with that play and some passing from quarterback John DeMarco, the Sachem offense should points on the board.

Defensively, the Sachems will again have to play a complete game. Peabody can both run and throw.

The Astroturf at Sullivan Stadium may be a factor but will work in Winchester's favor, not Peabody's. Turf makes the game much faster and the Sachems will be ready to play that way.

A disadvantage of turf could be strange and erratic bounces. Special teams' players will have to concentrate more on keeping track of the ball and possible unpredictable bounces.

In its first Super Bowl appearance, in the 15th year of the bowl series, Winchester should dominate. The Sachems are talented and have played a tougher schedule than Peabody.

Saturday night, the Sachems should be undisputed kings of eastern Massachusetts football.

Customers can trust Stormtite for quality workmanship and attention to detail.

Stormtite, located at 170 Belmont St., Watertown, began as a manufacturer of aluminum storm windows and doors in 1953. Its founder, Harry Karnik was soon joined by his son John in 1959, his daughter Nadia in 1964, and most recently his granddaughter Linda in 1984.

Over the years the siding division has played an ever-increasing role in Stormtite's business. At Stormtite, the installation of siding is viewed as a total and complete process. They employ seven siding crews, a roofing crew, two window installers, and one full-time painter.

Each installation is carefully planned and supervised. Employing this range of crews is a convenience to customers while enabling Stormtite to control quality, making sure all work meets its high standards.

"Our work is of top quality," explains John Karnik. "Our mechanics know their business, however I still do periodic checks," he adds.

"Our customers trust us and we do everything possible to retain this trust. "Our work is of top quality. Each house is handled as if it were our own."

This care and attention to detail and quality workmanship has resulted in a unique customer relationship which has continued through-out the company's existence. Customer referrals play an important part in Stormtite's sales, and customer satisfaction is so evident that payment for work is generally accompanied by a 'thank you' note. This customer relationship has contributed to the business being better in recent years than any other time in the company's history.

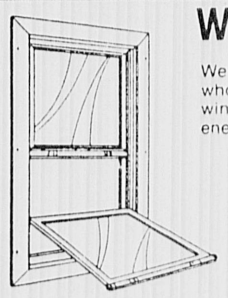

The primary areas serviced by Stormtite includes Arlington, Belmont, Lexington, and Winchester.

The Stormtite can be reached by calling 924-2254 or 484-8353.

Our Year of Glitter and Gold

by Dave Carter

As I look through the shadows of the past,
I can see the future and the destiny.
As I look beyond the pains of the past,
I see the glitter and gold of the future.
I only hope the glitter and gold can last.

The past is riddled with much hindsight.
What if? What if?
The dreams, hopes of success, sacrifice and the pain;
It was all in vain.

Now we all have another chance.
We now must shape our destiny
As the sculptor shapes his clay.
We must now venture through the pain
To the glitter and the gold.

Dave Carter is a tackle for the Winchester High School football team.

Boys soccer team wins state title

By STEVE GOUDSOUZIAN

Winchester High School won the boys soccer state championship Nov. 24 with a 2-1 victory over Wahconah, the third undefeated team the Sachems faced in the tournament.

Wahconah came in boating a high-scoring powerful offense and an outstanding goalie. Winchester came with determination to tarnish Wahconah's record.

To be sure, the Sachems also had quite a reputation. They boasted Chris Verhaegen and a defense that had allowed only two goals in the tournament. The Sachems' closest game in previous tourney action was a 3-0 victory over Marblehead.

But Wahconah was different. For the first time all year, the Sachems had to face a red hot goaltender. Winchester plowed through the Wahconah defense and pounded shots on net.

Everything was deflected away, much to the Sachems' frustration.

Many Winchester players quickly recalled last year, when the Sachems were knocked out of the tournament by a fantastic goalie from Framingham North.

As the first half neared completion, the Sachems were close to panic until Paul Erbafina cranked a low shot through a crowd of players into the net for a 1-0 Sachem lead.

The Sachems led and now they controlled, limiting Wahconah to a few offensive chances and eagerly hunting for their own second score.

But loose balls could not be converted. Crosses were picked off by Wahconah. Shots were tipped over the net by the Wahconah goalie.

Breakaways were stuffed. Rebounds were not converted.

Just as the Sachems got within inches of their second goal, disaster struck. A ball was sent into the Sachem end, where it was tipped up in the air as Wahconah rushed forward and headed the ball in.

With the score tied 1-1, the Sachems panicked again but pushed themselves even harder. The opportunities were there but still the Sachems could not capitalize.

Winchester was awarded a penalty shot. Still the Sachems could not score because Wahconah's goalie made a spectacular save the Sachems could not pounce on the loose rebound.

Finally, the biggest goal of the year came. Kenny Fowler, a sophomore left wing who been quiet for most of the season, launched a cross.

Sophomore Mike McGeehan ran under the ball and headed it safely into the net. Winchester led 2-1.

The defense tightened again and Wahconah was unable to muster any offense. The Sachems, meanwhile, were able to get an insurance goal.

Time finally expired.

Winchester is state champion.

Auctioneers face more, tougher rules, regulation committee created by last month's town meeting. Others on the committee will represent the housing authority and the planning board, with the town manager a non-voting member.

The committee has a budget of $22,000 to hire a consultant to prepare reports to the boards by Jan. 31 and to the spring town meeting.

• Appointed selectman Robert Deering to another new committee created by the town meeting to study ways to reduce the town's production of garbage.

Other committee members will be appointed by the finance committee, board of health, conservation commission, the department of public works and the moderator.

Selectmen said the public works department is under their jurisdiction and may decide to appoint someone themselves if a DPW employee does not volunteer time.

• Accepted contributions from the arts lottery to the community arts program and from the EnKa Society to the arts program and the drama workshop program, both under the recreation department's jurisdiction.

• Agreed to meet with a representative of Continental Cable sometime early in 1987 after selectman Mark Lombardi complained that he learned about the company's recent rate increase "first as a customer before I heard about it as a selectman."

• Decided to write to state Sen. Richard Kraus, seeking resolution of the town's dispute over the Woburn Loop, an abandoned railroad right-of-way.

Last month's town meeting voted to support a "home rule" petition in the legislature that would free the Loop from review by the state secretary of transportation and thus allow the town to allow building on the land.

A "request for proposals" from potential buyers will be reviewed at next week's meeting of selectmen before it is sent to abutters of Loop land.

• Designated town engineer Jake Ciarcia as the town's "dam inspection liaison" with the state Department of Environmental Management.

• Appointed selectman Judie Muggia, vice chairman of the board, to represent the town at the official tree-lighting ceremony at 7 p.m. tonight.

• Noted an increase in assessment from the MBTA from $435, 671 in fiscal 1986 to $451,218 in fiscal 1987.

Selectman Muggia noted that the assessment is based on both population and greater passenger counts at the two train stations in town.

"The population has gone down since 1980 but the assessment is up," she said. "This means people are riding public transportation more, which is good, but it also means that those who take the train from Winchester but don't live here cost the town money in assessments."

Laws not well-enforced, Lombardi says

Selectmen agreed to find out before next Monday if the police department and the zoning officer insist that complainants give their names before taking action.

"They can only change their policies, they can't deny," Lombardi said.

John G. McElwee of Winchester, left, chairman of John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance, accepts the Citizenship Training Group (CTG) "Hon. John Forbes Perkins Award" for achievement in the field of social services to children from Malcolm D. Perkins, son the late judge who founded the CTG, affiliated with the Boston juvenile court department.

What To Do

The trend:

Shopping for at the super

It's Wednesday night. You've been working late, and there's nothing at home in the refrigerator, so you stop at the supermarket to pick up a few things: milk, bread, some broccoli, and oh, yes, a mate.

A mate?

No, it's not the catchy new name of a frozen food entree.

Now, in addition to stopping at the market to pick up something for dinner, you can pick up someone to have dinner with, too.

Since last June, Purity Supreme Inc. has hosted a series of singles nights at its supermarkets in Massachusetts and New Hampshire (where else?)

Dick Syatt, host of a call-in singles radio show on WRKO-AM, introduced the idea to the Boston area. "Someone sent me a an article about a supermarket chain in New York that was hosting singles nights, and I read it over the air," he said.

Many listeners had a favorable response

A mate?

Since last June, Purity Supreme Inc. has hosted a series of singles nights at its supermarkets in Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

One of the first singles nights, held at Purity's Woburn store, attracted about 2,500 people.

Dick Syatt, host of a call-in singles radio show on WRKO-AM, introduced the idea to the Boston area after he read an article about singles parties sponsored by a supermarket chain in New York.

"I thought it was fantastic, and so did many listeners," he said. "It's a solution for 'yuppie' singles who are too busy to go out and meet someone."

Mike Mahoney, Purity Supreme's public relations person in charge of singles nights, agrees. "It really adds to a routine shopping trip," he said. "We want to make shopping fun."

The large white and blue signboard beside the highway advertises special attractions at the mall. Tonight, it says, "Singles Supermarket Night -- meet people, win prizes!"

Outside the market, two smiling cashiers in company aprons hand out stickers. Each one is half of a heart -- the Purity Supreme logo -- with a section of a phrase printed across it.

The stickers are the object of a little mixer game: each participant

must match his half of the phrase to the other half, worn on the lapel of a member of the opposite sex.

"Everyone's looking for their other half," Syatt punned over the phone.

Each time a match is made, both participants can enter a drawing for a number of prizes, including a trip to the Bahama Islands, sponsored by G.W.V. Travel of Needham.

I looked at my sticker. "Haven't we. . ." it read.

I was searching for its mate, which read, ". . .met before?"

Inside, the market appeared no different. No lights flickered, strobe-like, over the dairy case. No suave-looking waiters sidestepped shopping carts with heavy trays of drinks.

But one feature of most markets was noticeably absent: the Muzak.

Instead, shoppers priced, compared, and checked-out to the thumping beat of Madonna's "Lucky Star".

Behind a display case heaped high with plastic bags of bread, a blond, mustachioed disc jockey in a Hawaiian shirt was spinning records.

"I play all kinds of music," he said. "I try to avoid hard rock and put together a good mix of dance music."

Dance music?

"In Woburn they were dancing in the aisles," he said. "It should pick up here as the night goes on."

I glanced up and spotted a man with a sticker leaning over the meat counter.

"Hi," I said, coming up to him. "Do you have '. . .met before?' "

"No, mine says, 'Pardon me'," he smiled.

Rick, 36, had recently moved to the South Shore from Laguna Beach, California. "I heard about this and thought it might be fun," he said.

He indicated the lone item his cart. "Besides, I had some shopping to do," he said.

"Lucky Star" segued into "The Chatanooga Choo-Choo." Beside a pyramid of avocados, an elderly woman began to clap and sway.

Two men stepped inside the door and stared.

"I think it's kind of awkward at first, because the public's not used to this," said Mike, 24, of Brockton.

Steve, 20, of Brockton, added, "Yeah, what are you supposed to say to a girl? Does this watermelon look good?"

The two sauntered past diapers and shampoo toward the far end of the store. At the end of the last aisle, a crowd was forming.

"This could be the start of something big," a voice said.

"Excuse me?" I said.

"I'm looking for my match," said Bill, 52, of Belmont. "Your sticker should say, '. . .start of something big."

"Oh," I said.

"I want to meet people, but I also want the trip," Bill said. "At the last singles night, I matched with 64 women. Tonight, I'm trying to break my record."

"Oh," I said.

The opening lines of "Rock Around the Clock" blasted over the intercom system.

"I found my mate!" yelled Clara, 53, of Whitman, thrusting a man's hand into the air.

"I know you're supposed to be single," she said to a girl with the company apron. "But my husband'sat the other end of the store, so I'll be single just for today."

"Rock Around the Clock" was blasting over the intercom system.

"It's singles night! It's singles night!" yelled a middle-aged woman in a lavender pants suit. She did a neat little two-step and disappeared down an aisle.

"Attention, everyone!" boomed the D.J.'s voice. "It's time for Dick, your host, to draw the winners of tonight's prizes!"

The crowd shuffled to the other end of the store.

At the D.J.'s station by the bread rack, Dick Syatt stood by in a tuxedo, preparing to draw the winners.

When he announced one winner's name and the man did not come forward, a woman called out, "Oh, I remember him! He was the one with the green shirt! Hey Bob!"

As Bob worked through the crowd to claim his prize, the gleeful participants shouted, "Yay, Bob!"

After the drawing, I headed for the exit. Bill approached me.

"I didn't win the trip," he said.

"I know," I said.

"Maybe next time," he said. "I'll see you next time."

It was getting late now, and a long line of people outside waited for stickers.

As I approached the door, I noticed a tall, dark-haired young man across a crowded aisle.

"Hey," I said. "You're '. . .met before!'"

"Huh?" he said.

"Look," I said, uncrumpling the sticker in my hand. "We match."

He smiled. "Oh, yeah."

This could be the start of something big.

Shop Around

Just because you've become a young man now
There's still some things that you don't understand now
Before you ask some girl for her hand now
You keep your freedom for as long as you can now
My mama told me -- you better shop around

There's some things that I want you to know now
Just as sure as the wind's gonna blow now
The girls will come and the girls are gonna go now
Before you tell 'em that you love 'em so now
My mama told me -- you better shop around

Try to get yourself a bargain, son
Don't you be sold on the very first one
Good looking girls come a dime a dozen
Try to find you one who's gonna give you true loving...

Before you take a girl and say "I do" now
Make sure she's in love with you now
Make sure that her love is true now
I hate to see you feeling sad and blue now
My mama told me -- you better shop around

Romance: 1,001 ways for you

Greg Godek has always saved listings of places to go and things to do so that, when romantic inspiration strikes, he knows where and when to set his stage.

Godek has turned even a lost clipping to his advantage.

"About three years ago, I couldn't find something in my files, but as I went through them, it hit me that, hey, there's enough here for a book," says the self-described romantic.

When he mentioned the idea to people at the Main Course, they suggested the workshop which he offers twice a month, "1001 Ways to be Romantic."

The workshop is offered in two versions. One is for men only, because men need more advice in romance.

"Guys don't think ahead," says the native of Rochester, N.Y. "Work often takes their priority, and they have no strategy for romance."

For this reason, Godek says the co-ed version of the course contains much more interaction. "Men just believe what I say, but the women will express opinions and sometimes modify it."

According to the Main Course, "1001 Ways" is "a serious and fun how-to course for keeping the flame burning bright in your established and/or new relationship(s)."

Godek explains that he is not too interested in advising people who have just met "because men and women are very romantic when they are new to each other. Everything is a first."

When a couple is together for some time, Godek suggests that their romance falls into two categories, obligatory and optional.

The obligations may be met at Valentine's, Christmas, and at family birthdays and anniversaries, "but you don't get so much credit for them."

Instead, "it's the bottle of champagne on an odd Tuesday evening for the hell of it that a woman will find romantic. Romance should not need an occasion."

Godek's accumulation of so many things to do — he likely passed 1001 before he thought of the title — is a logical shield against the thing he wants most to avoid: "Romance can become a habit, and gestures become meaningless."

For this reason he puts all emphasis on the unlikely and unexpected. "These can run from no cost whatsoever to any extravagance," he offers.

"Getting guys to do it is the major challenge," he admits. "Once I suggested leaving notes on the wife's windshield, and some men complained, 'What if it rains or snows?"

Godek may have retorted, "use a baggie," with some impatience, but the exchange gave him yet another romantic idea.

Other simple ways are running a bubble bath for your loved one and writing with soap on the bathroom mirror. If the budget allows being lavish, a romantic might plan and pack for a trip that takes a partner entirely by surprise, if not entirely to the other side of the world. Or just rent a skywriter and let the whole world know.

Godek, once he starts, can bombard a listener with ideas, and he estimates that his workshops often pass three hours in length.

While brainstorming, Godek will caution his listeners that they must pick and choose. "You may think a restaurant romantic because it has large windows and is elegant, but the woman you take there may prefer a small, dark, intimate setting."

Why else write a book that lists so many ways? "Some ideas will work for some guys, but bomb for others," he says. "It depends on the woman."

One of the first pieces of advice he will give to men is to read Cosmopolitan and other women's magazines, and for women to read men's magazines, "so that we know what's on each other's minds."

Lately, Godek has his eye on the front page of section two of the Wall Street Journal for reports on trends months before they hit mass market.

A public relations consultant with Cone and Co. of Boston, Godek considers romance a "creative outlet." He has always written, and the first draft of his book is now complete.

As precise as Godek may be with descriptions in his book, he will allow himself an occasional generalization. "Women are more thoughtful than men. They do more of the shopping and tend to pick up those extra items."

Men, meanwhile, "need to be told to pick up $50 worth of greeting cards and keep them at home and at the office.

"Look," he concludes, "my profession is communications. We always communicate an image. We have to be careful, though, whether the image is real or made up. If it's not real, then you are abusing it. If romance is not sincere, then it is manipulative."

And he'll make a concession here and there: "Romance is not the key to starting a relationship, nor even to maintaining one. It is the key to quality. I know people who are good matches because they have a good functional relationship, but with no real romance. Romance is icing on the cake."

Godek will conduct "1001 Ways to be Romantic" and Dec. 4 for the Main Course. He will also appear as part of a weekend program for Valentine's Day at the Learning Center in Boston.

For more information on Godek's presentation, contact the Main Course at 723-4444.

Getting started is biggest obstacle

She paused long enough for the interviewer to think she hung up when he defined the object of being single as trying not to be single anymore.

But the pause only betrays the amount of thought D. Bunnie Poznick gave to the answer she has made to many times to make too easily for print.

"Most people think of single as being lonely, that one equals the other," says Poznick. "I tell people that single means first, that they need to think of the self first. We've got to change the meaning of it," she insists.

Poznick is the executive director of Who's Who in Boston, a networking society for, in her words, "professional and distinguished unmarried people in New England." The group meets about once a month over food and drink for business and personal contacts.

Asked to define networking, Poznick's answer is much quicker: "It's people meeting people meeting people meeting people. . ."

Pozick says many singles are uncomfortable with their first attempts at dating services and singles dances, but, she qualifies, "it's not a mistake, but an education. People should try all avenues."

At the Main Course, Poznick offers a course called "Being Single with a Touch of Class," which she defines as having style in dress, action, approach and attitudes about life.

She will stress appearance — "because we are all visual creatures" — as the first step to introductions, but manners and attitudes inevitably determine whether two people will continue to see each other.

"You can see a smile, but a sense of humor must sustain it," she laughs.

Poznick laughs louder when asked to comment on the phrase, male prerogative.

"Gone with the wind," she says gleefully, adding that everything is equal between a man and a woman when they first meet.

Left in the calm, then, is the anxiety that men and women feel about making the first move.

At singles events, says Poznick, "some people are staring all night, wasting their time."

One touch of class, offers Poznick, is to have a waiter take a business card — with home phone, of course — across a room. On the back of the card might be a simple note such as, "Like your smile."

Poznick mentions the ever-booming greeting card industry as evidence that people are afraid of self-expression.

"People can't talk, so they put it in cards," she says.

The technique of using a card for an introduction has the added fascination of offering handwriting as a clue to a stranger's mystique. Moreover, Poznick adds, it's "a form of introduction without risk of verbal rejection."

Poznick has little patience with the "stereotype that everything is available to singles."

She has had too many requests for help from women and men to believe it, and the response to her sessions at the Main Course has her planning lectures next year.

In summary, she will say that two people must begin simply by being good friends "and everything falls into place after that. Opposites attract, but sameness keeps together."

For more information on Poznick and Who's Who in Boston, she welcomes calls at 742-1330.

'Networking' a classy approach

She's a hot air balloonist who flys out of Stow, has a business in Acton, teaches in Haverhill and lives in Billerica.

All of this is fitting for someone who makes a living motivating people to go places and do what needs to be done.

She is Susan Sparks, proprietor of Social Solutions, offering individual counseling for single people seeking companionship and things to do.

Sparks names "getting started" as the single person's biggest obstacle to a satisfying social life or successful romance. "So I give information on picking out the right kinds of activities based upon an individual's personality, life-style and goals," she says.

Much of her work is showing her clients "how and where to research activities and how to evaluate them." These include dating services, personal ads, singles dances, travel resorts, sports clubs and social clubs.

For those who have recently become single, Sparks will frequently recommend groups such as Parents Without Partners and The Single Life because they are "low-key" and function as "support groups which provide the encouragement needed to restart a social life."

Sparks' clients are usually between their late 20's and late 40's, are predominantly women, usually divorced, and "probably not so familiar with single things."

She adds, "many of them try singles dances and less try dating services" before they seek her out, but they tend to be uncomfortable with them.

Sparks' seminars at Northern Essex Community College include "How to Survive a Divorce," "How to Make Personal Ads Work for You," and "A Single's Sampler."

Another seminar called "How to Get Your Social Life Off the Ground" refers to her hobby of 10 years, flying a hot air balloon. The logo on her business card, too, is a drawing of the balloon she has owned since 1981--suggesting that it's the active single whose life will take off.

Her entree at the Main Course is "How to Plan Your Social Calendar," and it will be offered next on Dec. 11.

Those who wish to know more about Social Solutions or about her seminars at Northern Essex and elsewhere are welcome to call Sparks at 264-4023.

The Main Course is served in homes and apartments in Newton, Lexington and elsewhere in Greater Boston. The offerings of Susan Sparks, D. Bunnie Poznick, Greg Godeck and others are one-session courses of about two hours in length.

Those who take their course with full dinners and wine arrive at 6:30, while those who wish only dessert and coffee are expected at 7 p.m.

Free brochures are available by writing to The Main Course, 10 Ridgeway Lane, Boston, or by calling 723-4444.

The Foreigner is a thanks to brilliant

REVIEW

Larry Shue's highly acclaimed Off-Broadway hit, The Foreigner, is a comedy that sinks or swims on the prowess of the director.

And Daniel L. Schay, producing director of Lowell's Merrimack Repertory Theatre, has pulled out all stops to ascertain that his talented troupe of actors rise to the occasion for the opening of MRT's eighth season through Dec. 6.

Shue's long-running, folksy comedy is a very funny play, written with extraordinary warmth and whimsy, humor and love, and characters that possess unassuming virtues. They're vulnerable and human.

Shue relies not on gimmickry, but on truly focused comic development, with a masterful sense of graceful structure and pleasurable craftsmanship which, under Schay's deft, astute direction, results in continuous and mounting audience enthusiasm led by Brad Bellamy's delightfully hilarious portrayal in the role of Charlie.

Charlie is a shy, staid, dull 30ish Englishman who works as a science-fiction proofreader for a living. His wife is dying and, by Charlie's count, has had 23 lovers in recent months. She finds Charlie's daily visits to the hospital intolerable and suggests that he go on a holiday to spare her the boredom of his company.

Charlie's old wartime buddy "Froggy" LeSueur (Paul Dunn), an Army staff sargeant and demolitions expert, makes an annual trek to the United States to give a three-day course on explosives at an army base in the backwoods of Georgia and insists that the disheartened Charlie tag along as his assistant.

And that is how poor Charlie finds himself at Betty Meeks' (Billie Lou Watt) rundown Fishing Lodge Resort.

Charlie suffers woefully from self-doubt and "active fear of talk."

Conversation with strangers petrifies him, resulting in seizures, and he ruefully regrets coming. To allay his fears, "Froggie", before his departure to the Army base, passes off Charlie as a "foreigner" who speaks no English and this makes Charlie privy to all sorts of intimate information.

He learns that Catherine Simms (Leslie Hicks) has become pregnant by her less than saintly fiancee Rev. David Marshall Lee (Will Osborne).

Catherine is a post-debutante and "heiress" of sorts, her father having left an estate of $200,000, garnered from the prepared meats business. The sum is to be divided between Catherine and her not-too-bright brother Ellard (Lance Lewman) if she deems him capable of handling the funds; otherwise, she keeps the entire amount for herself.

But smooth, good-looking David is up to no good; he keeps planting damaging evidence to proved Ellard's ineptness. He harbors ulterior motives and needs all the inheritance money for his big plans.

He also conspires with the obnoxious redneck cracker Owen Musser (William Perley), the county property inspector, to condemn Betty's lodge so that they can grab it for nothing.

For the affable Betty, that Charlie speaks no English makes him "picturesque." She shouts at him as though he were hard of hearing, even employing sign language as she gloats about their "communication."

Catherine confides in him like an old girlfriend. "No one can keep a secret like Charlie can!" Owen looks upon Charlie as ideal fodder for lynching, while David is suspicious of this "foreigner" with country unknown. And Ellard is fascinated with Charlie, like someone from outer space.

Now the center of attraction, a new persona emerges from Charlie that even he does not recognize! As he converses in his gobbledygook language, he becomes clever, inventive, humorous and cuddly . . . Charlie with a personality! It touches everyone!

Ellard and Charlie play games at the breakfast table (monkey do as monkey see) and learn to relate.

Then Ellard takes it upon himself to become Charlie's mentor and, in the play's most riotous scene, gives Charlie a rapid-fire course on "How to Speak Southern." What with a confrontation with the Klan, Charlie finds more excitement and adventure than he can handle, not to mention a little romance.

Cudos to the entire cast, John Ambrosone for lighting, Amanda Aldridge for costumes, and especially to Alison Ford for the realistic set and set dressing — from beamed ceilings to wood plank floors, log and mortar walls, and old, comfy furniture of every sort.

The Foreigner is a winner . . . all the way!

hit, acting

Tony Award for Best Play, the second segment of Neil Simon's autobiographical trilogy (the final chapter, Broadway Bound, opens in New York this week) has audiences rolling in the aisles at the Shubert Theatre.

But better hurry, the engagement ends Dec. 13.

Seeing Biloxi Blues is like renewing an old and dear friendship and Simon, recalling his early army days with bulls-eye accuracy and touching nostalgia, again reaffirms his ever-growing maturity as a writer.

The play is tender and human, poignant and hilarious, and under director Gene Saks' Tony Award-winning touch, Biloxi Blues proves both heartwarming and highly rewarding.

The action picks up in 1943 on the coach of a troop train en route from Fort Dix, N.J. to Biloxi, Miss., transporting a bunch of raw recruits to bootcamp. Among them is 19-year-old Eugene Morris Jerome (engagingly and infectiously portrayed by William Ragsdale).

As in Memoirs, Eugene (Simon's alter ego) shares his innermost thoughts with the audience and immediately reveals, "Only four days in the army and I hated everyone!... No one had washed! ...If the Germans knew what was coming over they'd be looking forward to this invasion!"

Eugene harbors three cherished goals at this stage of his life: to become a writer, not to get killed, and to lose his virginity. Happily, he accomplishes all three.

Eugene's barrack-mates, a motley-looking crew in fatigues and khaki underwear, are totally diverse.

There's Don Carney (John C. MacKenzie), a shoestore stockroom employee from Montclair, N.M. who sings in his sleep and pictures himself the next Perry Como, but cannot be counted upon under pressure.

And James Hennesey (Michael McNeill), the likeable Irishman who suffers the misfortune of running afoul of army regulations.

Then there's quiet and passive Roy Selridge (John Younger) who hails from Schenectady, N.Y.; and brawny, muscle-bound Joseph Wykowski (David Warshofsky), of Polish extraction, a furniture mover/truckdriver from Bridgeport, Conn. who has "a unique form of paralysis" is his groin area, "a permanent erection."

There's bespectacled, frail and sensitive Arnold Epstein (Andrew Polk), the intelligent and outspoken Jewish boy who insists that logic and reason must be the basis for all decisions, and whose chronic stomach disorders result in vile gaseous emissions, much to the consternation of the others.

Hovering over them is the tough and wonderfully hateful Sgt. Merwin J. Toomey (John Finn) who orders infinite pushups, midnight hikes through swamps, KP and latrine duty. And, of course, there's Eugene, ever the diplomat, whose nimble brain is forever maneuvering for neutral ground..."like Switzerland"... and who keeps a daily log of his most intimate reflections and experiences.

Along the way we are confronted with a $62 theft in the barracks; racial bigotry; heat prostration; Epstein subjected to a humiliating latrine experience and total loss of dignity; and an invasion of privacy involving Eugene's secret and private memoirs.

There's also the group's first 48-hour pass and their initial experience with the prostitute Rowena (Kathy Danzer). (In Brighton Beach Memoirs our hero Eugene finally accomplishes his cherished goal in life; he views a picture of "the golden temple of the Himalayas." Here, doused with Aqua Velva "in every possible crevice," he is, at long last, initiated into its portals!).

Led by Ragsdale's appealing portrayal of Eugene as he stumbles into manhood, Finn as the sargeant you love to hate, and winning performances by Polk and Warshofsky, Biloxi Blues is a joy. You'll want to see it more than once.

Holiday Shopping Spree

Selecting children's gifts

If you're like millions of other shoppers, walking into a toy store at Christmastime may be overwhelming. Suddenly, you're confronted by an array of colors, sizes and shapes that seem as endless as the aisles you walk down. Traditional playthings are side by side with newfangled, high-tech toys.

But toys are an important part of the giving-season, and even if you don't have little ones of your own, holiday time in the world of toys can awaken you to the glee and happiness of Christmas.

Parents usually know exactly what their little ones want for Christmas, but if you're choosing a gift for the child of an employer, neighbor or relative, the following recommendations from LJN Toys, Ltd., a toy company and manufacturer of Photon, a new high-tech interactive game, might help.

Get suggestions from friends who are parents. If you haven't shopped for toys for a while, you might be in for a surprise when you see the diversity of products on the market. One suggestion is to find out what the popular TV shows are among kids and check to see if toy collections are available based on the series. Anything a child can easily relate to — a TV or storybook hero — will likely contribute to imaginative play and creativity.

Select toys that stimulate the imagination. "Playing with figures that have 'human' characteristics can help a child construct new fantasies and understand their own unique feelings and ideas," Gibson says. "Children are more easily apt to identify with such characters and creatively work out conflicts through imaginative play."

Yuletide tidbits

Bishop wrote carol

One of America's favorite Christmas carols, "O Little Town Of Bethlehem," was written by Bishop Phillips Brooks (1835-1893), an eloquent preacher who served first as rector at Holy Trinity Church in Philadelphia and later at Old Trinity Church in Boston, where a bronze statue of him can be seen. It was done by famous sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens.

'Thief' for a husband?

In olden days in Bohemia, now part of Czechoslovakia, girls used to cut cherry branches and force them to bloom for Christmas. They wore them to Mass in their bodices and believed that lads who stole such a branch would be their future husbands.

1843 Yule card first

The world's first Christmas card appeared in England in 1843, designed by John C. Horsley at the suggestion of Henry Cole, who later was knighted for his work in reforming the postal system and making it more efficient.

Burial place of Magi?

Cologne, Germany, is called the "City of Three Kings" because it is reputedly the burial place of the Magi.

A Yule come lately

Christmas was not recognized as a legal holiday in all the American states and territories until 1890.

Martha cooked Yule meal for soldiers

During the hard 1777 winter at Valley Forge, George Washington and his officers had meat, fowl and a few vegetables for Christmas dinner, but no bread, tea or coffee.

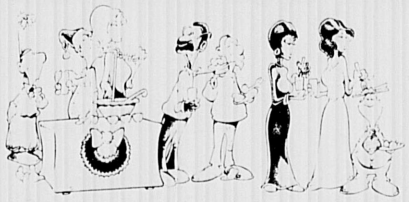

Three years later, Martha Washington joined the general and managed to prepare for him and his staff a meal that included beef, mutton, turkey, pies, pudding, apples and nuts.

Final carol sung

In olden days in England, New Year's Eve was called "Singing E'en" because, at that time, the final Christmas carols were sung.

The games people play

Once the packages are unraveled and the stockings unstuffed on Christmas morning, many Americans settle down to do some serious game playing.

Ever since the early 1800s when mass-market board games first became available in the United States, games have been stalwart entries on gift lists for all ages. In fact, best-selling games have served as mini-barometers of the preoccupations, interests and dreams of their times.

In 1843, children were hinting for the lastest board game for Christmas — "The Mansion of Happiness" — where they navigated the shoals of sin while trying to lead an upright life. This Victorian theme of morality reappeared in the popular "Reward of Virtue" (1850) and "The Checkered Game of Life" (1860).

When the Morgans and Vanderbilts rose to power in the first decade of the 1900s, gamesters emulated their business success with "Wall Street." As the gleeful title, "I'm a Millionaire," suggests, Americans grew increasingly interested in money-making. And in the 1930s, they learned the pain of losing their real-world money in the Great Depression, while "Monopoly" fulfilled fantasies of going from rags to riches.

"Go to the Head of the Class," 1940s, reflected the American concern for public school education. With the 1950s and the advent of television, games based on popular shows had a heyday, like the question-and-answer "Howdy Doody Game."

As society takes a closer look at what's wrong, right and in-between, it makes sense that one of this year's most popular games is "A Question of Scruples." This adult game, from Milton Bradley, is full of questions about modern moral predicaments, some provocative, some humorous and all intriguing.

Popular board games are often the inspiration for spin-offs. Americans buried themselves in trivia a few years ago with the hit game "Trivial Pursuit." This year, they'll be able to use that knowledge when they play "Incognito," where players act out suggested charades and interpretation, then answer questions about the correct answer.

What makes a board game of Christmas Past become a classic for Christmas Future? A game that finds its way under the tree year after year usually has broad-based appeal, can be played by a variety of age ranges, encourages social interaction and challenges skill while introducing an element of chance.

The Christmas tree tradition

Flashing lights. Sparkling tinsel and icicles. Dozens of glistening ornaments made of glass, plastic, wood or porcelain. It's hard to imagine that the Christmas tree had a humble beginning.

Yet, it is said the tradition was born when Martin Luther, while walking through the forest on Christmas Eve, was struck by the beauty of the winter sky lighted by thousands of stars.

Inspired, he cut down a tiny evergreen and set it up in his home for his children. He trimmed the tree with lighted candles to make an image of the starry heavens from which Christ had come on Christmas night.

In 17th-century Sweden, small pines divested of their bark and greens were placed outside doors at Christmastime. Like the German pyramid, they were kept from year to year and brought out for the holiday celebrations.

With the coming of the German tradition of trees inside the home, the stripped pine tree was brought indoors and decorated with cookies and paper ornaments.

In England, the Christmas tree was not well known until the 1840s, when Queen Victoria and Prince Albert popularized it.

The English happily adopted the Queen's tree for their homes. When mass-produced color lithograph greeting cards were developed in the 1880s, people hung them on Christmas trees with their customary ornaments.

A pagan practice of decorating branches with fruit and flowers was translated into the Christian paradise tree.

What About Art?

By Meredith Fife Day

Marian Cannnon Schlesinger's drawing of the Davis & Furber mill in North Andover is one of 81 watercolors and drawings of 19th century New England textile mills exhibited by the artist at the Museum of American Textile History.

Artist depicts textile mills

Fifteen years ago Marian Cannon Schlesinger set out with her sketchbook and paintbox to make a pictorial record of New England 19th century textile mills.

Her mission was, as Schlesinger describes it, "a labor of love."

The fruits of that long labor — some 81 drawings and watercolors — are on display at the Museum of American Textile History, 800 Massachusetts Ave., in North Andover.

Schlesinger grew up in Cambridge, Mass., and had known the textile mills since childhood when she and her family drove to their summer home in Franklin, N.H. Their route north ran through the mill cities of Lawrence and Lowell and along the Merrimack River into New Hampshire.

Later, a course on the American landscape and lectures emphasizing the significance of the 19th century New England mill and its evolution as milestones in America's Industrial Revolution, deepened her interest in the buildings and their surroundings.

"I began to look at these mills that I had known all my life with new appreciation," notes Schlesinger. "I saw them not only as industrial establishments whose economic decline had injured communities and people about whom I cared, but also as stunning examples of vernacular 19th century architecture."

The mill architecture of clean, uncluttered verticals and horizontals with its tapering smokestacks and myriad windows is familiar still along the Merrimack Valley and in southern New Hampshire. Time, though, inevitably alters the architectural landscape.

Schlesinger was inspired through her long-standing interest to make a record of the of the mills "before their further decline had turned them into utter ruins or before they were irretrievably destroyed by the wrecker's ball.

"As it turned out, in many cases I arrived just in time, as I have several drawings of mills that have since been destroyed."

Frequently, Schlesinger depicts one mill from several points of view, giving an idea of both the setting and the substantial size of the complex. Thirteen drawings and paintings of the Amoskaeg Mills in Manchester, N.H. include views of workers' housing as well as the mill buildings themselves, changing profiles as the artist moves her vantage point.

Color is used transparently, sometimes as a wash across the drawing. It is line, though, that is the artist's primary means of describing the kind of detail she requires.

On her pursuit of accuracy in the recording of these mills, Schlesinger states, "I learned to take notes rather than make finished drawings on the site. I would draw a sample window complete with granite lintels and with the number of panes clearly delineated, then I would not the number of windows across and up and down. I further made notes on iron grill work that often adorned the more exotic buildings, as well as the detailed and fancy brick work."

One especially effective drawing is that of Ashland's Asquam Lake Woolen Co., in which the buildings' walls and rooftops are stacked and overlapping. Line is both assured and descriptive, and taut composition gives form to the density of the view.

The artist, in her 15-year endeavor, has recorded and described something of historical, sociological and economic significance. Equally important, she has responded in a personal way to her surroundings and has come to know the world more intimately while contributing to others' understanding of it.

The Museum of American Textile History is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 1 to 5 p.m. weekends. Call 686-0191.

Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers Honors National Weight Loss Winners

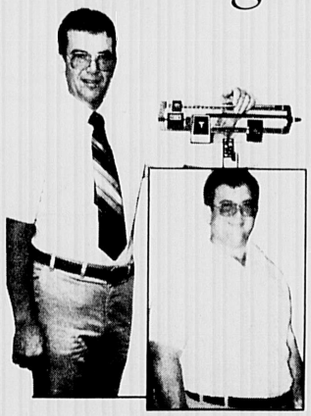

"I Lost 174 Pounds and 125 Inches!"

"Unquestionably, the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers diet works! But anyone can read a diet and, probably follow it for a while, but without continuing motivation from within and the guidance which fosters and inspires that motivation, it is futile to attempt to lose 20 pounds much less 120 or 175 pounds! The valid diet, the medical supervision, the daily monitoring, the behavior modification and several other intangible personal motivators, when combined, add up to success!"

Martha Fulton-Higgs, Columbus, Ohio

"I Lost 125 Pounds in Just 26 Weeks!"

"The friendly and understanding approach of the staff, the modest cost of the program and the choice of everyday foods convinced me that Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers would be my best hope for the future. Now, 26 weeks after and 125 lbs. lighter my whole life has changed."

Bruce Thornton, Springfield, Ohio

"I Lost 268 Pounds and 155 Inches!"

"Thanks to Physician's WEIGHT LOSS Center, I'm alive today. My Doctor told me I had a very short time to live.

Morbid obesity, high blood pressure, and epileptic seizures made it impossible for me to do anything for myself.

Now, my blood pressure is normal without taking medication, my seizures are less frequent, and my medication decreased.

Being on the diet has given me a new outlook on life, and my self-esteem has taken on a new high.

Thank you Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Center for giving me the will to lose over 268 pounds and 138 inches."

Linda Carter, Winston Salem, North Carolina

The highlight of the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers national convention in Columbus, Ohio was the "Slim to Win" weight loss contest. From over 450 entrants in the national competition, 3 finalists were selected on the basis of before and after photos, total pounds and inches lost, length of time on the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers medically supervised diet and a written testimonial on how their lives changed for the better. The 3 national finalists: Martha Fulton-Higgs, Columbus, Ohio, Bruce Thornton, Springfield, Ohio and Linda Carter, Winston Salem, North Carolina presented their stories to over 700 Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers staff attending the convention.

Linda Carter told the audience how she had weighed over 470 one year and nine months earlier. Losing 268 pounds has changed more than Linda's appearance. She had been confined to a wheelchair for 5 years, suffered from grand mal epileptic seizures, and extremely high blood pressure. Linda was told by her doctor to lose weight or die. She was referred to Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers by Dr. J. Kiffin Penry, a neurologist and seizure expert. With the help of Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers, her seizures are now under control and she walks with only the aid of a cane. "Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers medically supervised diet has saved my life. It's great to be alive and I owe it all to Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers," Linda told the tearful audience.

Martha Fulton-Higgs, weighing only 135 pounds, told the audience how she had lost 174 pounds in just 10 months. Martha couldn't say enough about the staff at Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers. "It wasn't the diet alone that did it. If diet alone could have done this for me, I would have lost the weight long ago. It was the combination of the diet, the behavioral guidance and the support of the staff that helped me to succeed. I'm so happy, I feel like Cinderella at the ball!"

Bruce Thornton told his story of losing 150 pounds. He had resigned himself to a life of obesity when he was struck by a heart attack at the age of 37. While recuperating in the hospital, he had plenty of time to remember how he had lost his father to a heart attack when he was only 2 years old. He decided to lose his excess weight so his two children wouldn't have to go through life without a father. Like Linda and Martha before him, he credited his success to the supportive staff of Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers. "They rearranged their schedules to suit mine. Whether I had a good day or a bad day, they were always supportive."

When the moment arrived for announcement of the winners, suspense filled the room. Martha Fulton Higgs won first prize—a Bahamas cruise for two. Linda Carter won second prize—a Disney World-Epcot Center trip for two. Bruce Thornton took home third prize—a Cuisinart Food Processor. Their complete weight loss stories will appear soon in this publication.

Martha, Linda and Bruce are typical of the thousands of people helped by Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers every day. Since 1979, Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers has helped overweight patients change their eating habits and bring their weight problems under control. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers guarantees an average weight loss of at least three pounds per week. This safe and realistic pace is closely monitored by a medical team of doctors, nurses and weight loss counselors to ensure the safety and health of the patient.

Anyone who has ever tried to lose weight would probably be skeptical of such rapid results, but Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers has the proof to support its claims ...thin, healthy and happy patients.

Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers is so proud of their national weight loss winners, they want to celebrate by offering you a very special savings.

Lose Weight and Keep it Off!

Most people are overweight due to poor eating habits which have become ingrained over the years. Eating to soothe anger, depression or boredom or eating just because the food happens to be in sight are all habits which can lead to weight problems.

The Centers place a strong emphasis on replacing improper eating habits with more healthy and constructive attitudes about food. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers' Behavioral Guidance counselors conduct sessions twice weekly to increase each patient's awareness of unproductive, self-defeating eating habits.

For many people, losing weight is not the hard part. Keeping those extra pounds off is where many dieters fail. At Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers, patients are urged and motivated to maintain their goal weights.

"Many weight loss programs abandon their patients once their weight is lost. But we feel our job isn't finished until the patient is able to successfully maintain their goal weight," Lori Anderson, Regional Operations Manager, stated.

After completion of the weight loss portion of the program a one year maintenance program is initiated through a six week period of calorie adjustment to stabilize the bodies' new weight. In addition the staff guides and encourages each patient to participate regularly in the remainder of their one year maintenance plan.

In the year that follows, if up to three pounds are gained, Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers wants that patient to return at no additional charge. The counselors will gladly help the patient lose these few pounds before any more weight is gained and the weight problem recurs.

"I've Kept 164 Pounds Off for 6 Years!"

"I had tried every diet program ever heard of. I would lose weight and gain it all back—plus more. With the help of Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers' caring staff, I've lost over 160 pounds and kept it off!

Darlene Carris,
Fairlawn, Ohio

Medical Supervision is the Key

Anyone considering a weight loss program or a diet of any kind should first investigate how physically safe it is. Medical supervision is a must and Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers has excellent credentials. The Centers all employ medical doctors, registered or licensed practical nurses (R.N.'s or L.P.N.s), and certified weight loss counselors. As an out-patient medical weight loss center, a professional medical team approach is maintained throughout the duration of every weight loss program. A close initial screening is performed before a patient is accepted to the program.

All medical services are performed in-house on all potential patients, as well as on the active enrollees.

Many potential patients expect to be hungry, irritable and short on energy while dieting, but this is not the case with the Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers program. Patients can choose from a wide variety of grocery store items such as fish, chicken, beef, turkey, lobster, shrimp, vegetables, fruits, bread and cheese. Careful menu planning guarantees that the patients are eating well-balanced, nutritional meals. More often than not, patients complain that there is too much food to consume during the day. By the end of their weight loss programs, the patients are convinced that they don't have to starve to lose weight!

Historic Shores Give Berth To An Incomparable Community.

A spirited parkside community has been launched on the banks of the Mystic River. Boasting superb views over the river, the expansive parkland next door and the Boston skyline beyond, this site lies two blocks from Medford Square and minutes from I-93 and downtown Boston.

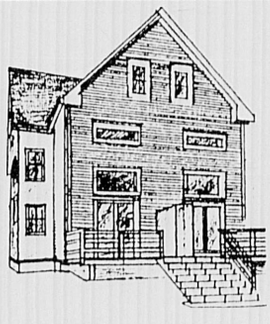

The 89 townhouses at Shipside Green are uniquely sited around beautifully landscaped greens opening out to the park and river's edge. The architecture provides three distinct floor plans, each with a fireplace and its own striking view from a balcony or private garden. Occupancy is scheduled for early summer 1987.

A select number of condominium residences are now being offered for purchase at pre-construction prices beginning at $1ee,000.

For more information regarding Shipside Green's initial offering, call 396-4200, Monday-Friday 9 to 5.

WHAT STAYS WITH HOUSE?

Real estate is usually defined as the land and everything attached to it, such as: buildings, trees, shrubs, etc. The buyer normally gets all of the real estate, but none of the owner's personal property. A problem arises when personal property has become a part of the real estate. This is called a fixture and does pass with the real estate.

There are three usual tests which must be satisfied. Has the personal property been permanently affixed to the real estate? Is it intended to became part of the real estate? And finally, what is the local custom? Some fixtures might include: shades, heaters, ranges, screens, storm windows, and lighting fixtures.

It is important that the seller spell out specifically in his sales agreement exactly what he intends to give to the buyer as part of real estate. This will save misunderstanding at the closing, and sometimes save a sale.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

"Twas the month before Christmas,
Santa sat by the fire
He needed more elves,
But didn't know who to hire
He sipped his hot chocolate with a sigh of dismay
So much work to do in so very few days!
Then what to his tired old eyes should appear,
But this week's "What's Up" section and he got an idea!
He opened it up with a jolly Ho! Ho! Ho!
He dialed 729-8100!
"The kids are so good" he said "So few have been bad!"
Saint Nick had to place a "HOLIDAY HELP WANTED" AD!
With each tiny applicant Santa's confidence grew,
As he happily conducted each elf interview!
His inventory grew as they stocked all his shelves,
His workshop now bustling with busy elves!
Santa sat back and counted the days till his ride,
So relieved that he'd called CENTURY CLASSIFIEDS!

Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit – alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts – is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

*Ask for Autobahn or Audi Limited Warranty at our Parts Department.

Sachems snag Bowl

Peabody falls 20-13 in Sachem 11-0 season

By DAVID DEMARCO

It's all over for the Winchester High School football team. Once you've won the Super Bowl, there are no more practices, no more games.

Sullivan Stadium was the site Saturday as the Sachems captured their most prestigious victory, a 20-13 triumph over previously unbeaten Peabody to take the state Division I championship.

It was not just a game, but a spectacle, not unlike those at the Roman Coliseum.

What's more, the football team brought Winchester its third state championship in the fall season, after the boys' and girls' soccer teams.

Winchester's three state championships in one season are unprecedented in the commonwealth, according to the best records available.

After an emotional victory over archrival Woburn on Thanksgiving Day, it was no wonder Winchester looked sluggish in the first quarter of the Super Bowl.

To make matters worse, Peabody had possession of the ball for most of the quarter. The Tanners established a pounding running game behind the talent of halfback Pat Cullen.

Early in the second period, the Tanners sat on the Winchester five-yard line. Quarterback Ted Staunton executed a perfect play-action pass to Lee Miller, open in the end zone.

Staunton kicked the ball through the uprights and Peabody led 7-0.

But the Tanners didn't enjoy their lead for long.

The first of two mistakes which cost Peabody the game followed soon.

Winchester got the ball and was held in check by the Tanners' defense. John Mathson dropped back to punt for the Sachems and it looked like Cullen would get his hands on the football again.

But Peabody's John Wojiick fumbled the punt on his own 20-yard line. Winchester's Phil Svahn was there to pounce on the bouncing ball.

Like all great teams, Winchester was able to capitalize on the other guys' mistake.

On fourth down, head coach Manny Marshall called for a twins left-screen right. Darin Cromwell grabbed the ensuing pass and raced 24 yards for the score.

Mark Shaw's extra-point kick missed, however, and Peabody still had a 7-6 lead with 6:36 left in the half.

"It was in my head. I just didn't have the concentration," Shaw explained later after he faced the same goalposts as Tony Franklin.

Peabody lost game to errors

Peabody gave Winchester another early Christmas gift on the ensuing kickoff. This time Tom Pucillo fumbled and Winchester was sitting pretty again on the Tanners' 22-yard line.

Quarterback John DeMarco faded back to pass on first down and spied Vinnie Benincasa wide open over the middle.

Bang! Within 17 seconds, Winchester scored two touchdowns. Coach Marshall decided to make up the missed point and his strategy worked.

Cromwell ran for the conversion and Winchester took a 14-7 lead with 6:19 left. Peabody looked shocked by the Sachem blitzkrieg.

By the time Cullen saw the ball again, Winchester's defense was ready and able. Peabody ran three plays and had to give up possession.

Winchester, meanwhile, was burning up the Astroturf and the offense went back to work for the last time before the half.

Peabody should have known it would be in trouble if Cromwell got loose near the sidelines.

Cromwell took a 17-speed option handoff, saw daylight and raced 57 yards for the Sachems' third touchdown. Shaw's kick failed but Winchester led 20-7 with 3:14 left before intermission.

The first half was an excellent display of Winchester's composure. Although the Sachems were dominated in the first quarter and fell behind by seven points, they did not panic.

Instead they recovered to take control of the game. Peabody's mistakes were devastating to its chances and Winchester took advantage of each.

The Tanners had not been behind by as many as 13 points in their first 10 victories. By halftime, they definitely felt the pressure.

Peabody players seemed disoriented and hesitant. But the Tanners didn't get to the Super Bowl for nothing and there were to be 22 more minutes of football.

For seven minutes of the third quarter, the struggle was give-and-take with neither team able to exploit any weakness in the other.

Finally it was Winchester's turn to make mistake.

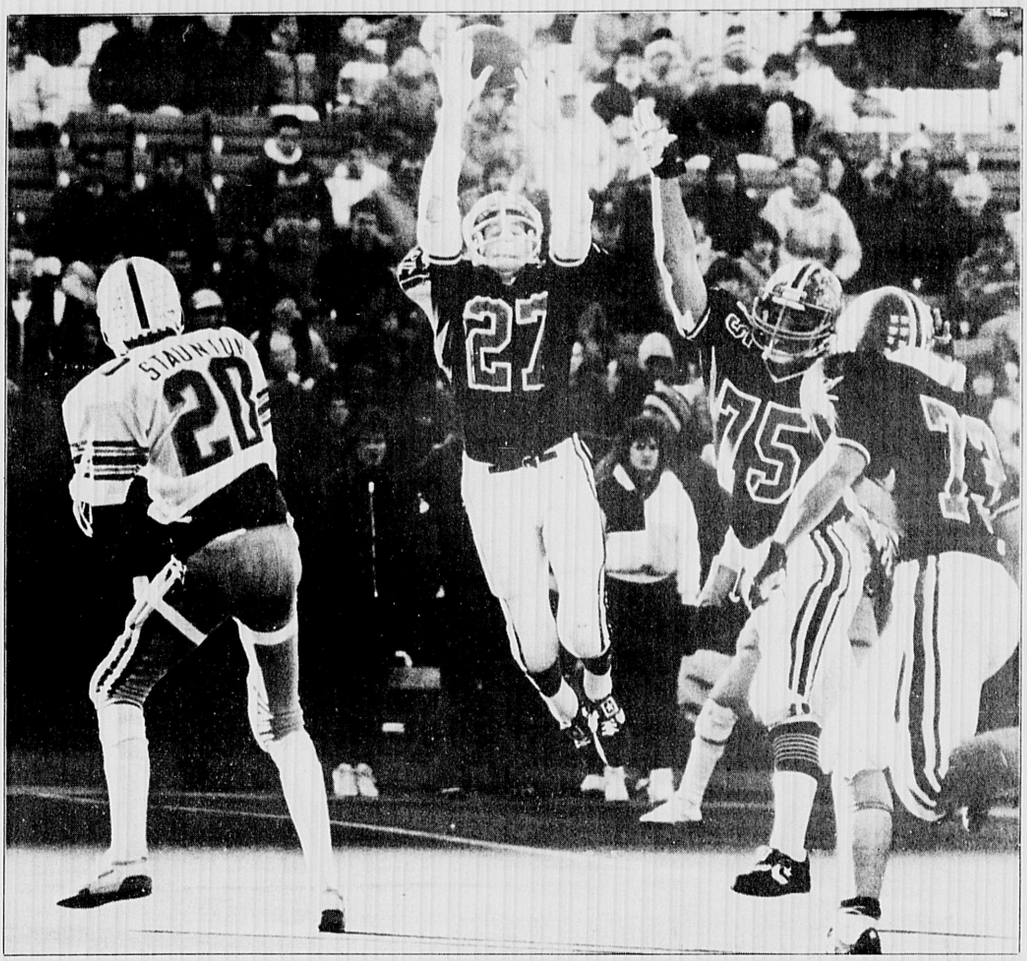

The Sachems fumbled at midfield and with 4:14 left in the period, the Tanners knew they had to score quickly.

It took Peabody eigfht minutes to drive the ball but Cullen made it a new game when he pushed over from the one-yard line with 8:10 to play.

Peabody's one-point conversion attempt failed but Winchester's lead shrank to 20-13.

It was now or never for the Winchester defense.

Again the Sachems fumbled, this time on their own 30-yard line. With plenty of time left, the Tanners had their golden chance.

George Nowell (27) and David Carter (75) put plenty of pressure on Peabody quarterback Ted Staunton during the Super Bowl as Sachem Mike Vozzella (73) moves in to help. (Marc Schlossman photo)

The first half was an excellent display of Winchester's composure. Although the Sachems were were dominated in the first quarter and fell behind by seven points, they did not panic. Instead, they recovered to take control of the game.

The Tanners went to the pass; it proved to be a mistake against the fierce pass rush of Scott Cullen and George Nowell, who sacked quarterback Staunton twice.

Peabody was suddenly 30 yards from a first down, let alone a touchdown.

Aaron West nailed Staunton on fourth down and the Sachems took over. But there was still a lot of life in Peabody.

The Sachem offense stalled and was forced to punt.

Peabody wisely decided to abandon its experiment with the pass and go back to what the Tanners Knew best: the running game.

This time it didn't work.

On fourth down, the Tanners tried a fake punt. Every good idea in football can be ruined by a fumble; ask the Tanners.

Winchester's Mike Vozzella recovered the loose ball on the Peabody 33-yard line.

The Sachem offense took the field with one objective, to use up time. They succeeded well, driving to the seven-yard line before coughing up the ball themselves on yet another fumble.

With only 14 seconds left and 93 yards to go, the Tanners had to go to the air. Vozzella sacked the quarterback for the last play of the year.

Celebrations rang through Sullivan Stadium.

"The Astroturf increased our team speed. We were much quicker than they and the blocking was great," said Cromwell, who rushed for 171 yards on 18 carries and scored two touchdowns.

"There;s nothing left for this team to do. We've done it all," said Cromwell.

"We beat them physically. We were nervous that first quarter, but after that, Cullen did nothing," said Mathson. "They could never beat us, no matter how many times we'd play."

"Two things killed them, overall team speed and the fact that they had never faced an option play," DeMarco said.

"We exploited their lack of speed. The fans were very supportive. It was the last goal we wanted to achieve."

By finishing 11-0, the Sachems have the distinction of being the greatest team in the history of Winchester football.

The season's over. Time will move on but the memories will last forever.

Opener win no surprise

By DAVID DEMARCO

Some things never change. That was the case Saturday as Winchester High School destroyed Somerville High 35-12 in the first football game of the year for both teams.

Somerville has never beaten Winchester and didn't even come close in the first game of the season as Sachem halfback Darin Cromwell stole the show with four touchdowns.

Cromwell carried the ball 16 times for 114 total yards and an average of 7.1 yards per carry.

The first quarter ended scoreless as both teams seemed tentative, working out first-game jitters.

The second quarter began with a bang as Sachem cornerback Mark "Goon" Shaw made a key interception on Winchester's one-yard line.

The Sachem offense came together in response, marching to the end zone in just 11 plays.

The key play in the drive was an outstanding, diving catch made by split end Vinnie Benincasa for a 40-yard pickup.

Cromwell scored his first TD of the day on a straight power play with 9:37 left in the half. The Sachems proved they could move the ball, picking up 94 yards. Once the offense settled down, it would not be stopped.

Later, the Sachems marched 28 yards in six plays to put the ball at the Somerville five-yard line. Cromwell again got the call with 4:32 left, putting his team up 14-0.

With only 13 seconds left, Cromwell scored his third TD from the five-yard line.

Winchester led 21-0 at the half. The table was set for a blowout.

As the second half began, the Sachems received the kickoff and marched to the Somerville nine-yard line. Who got the call? Anyone could guess. Cromwell put the Sachems on top 27-0.

The only question Saturday's game produced was "How good is the defensive secondary?" The Sachems effectively shut down the run and the offense scored on almost every possession, forcing Somerville into a pass-oriented offense.

But poor secondary play was evident when Somerville scored its first touchdown on a deep pass over the middle to Bob Abbott for six.

The Highlanders chalked up 173 passing yards on the day while gaining only 50 on the ground.

The scoreboard had not even registered Somerville's new point total, however, when Winchester's Aaron "Brother" West took the ensuing kickoff, moved to the inside, saw the hold plugged, raced to the outside and scampered 72 yards for Winchester's final TD of the day.

Somerville came back with an Abbott 15-yard completion to make it 35-12 but it was much too little much too late for the overmatched Highlanders.

Darin Cromwell heads Sachems' 'Damage Inc.'

By DAVID DEMARCO

They're known around town as "Damage Incorporated." Star of their show is Darin Cromwell.

Winchester rolled over Wakefield High 49-12 in the season's second game.

Cromwell had 200 yards on 19 carries with four touchdowns, bringing his season total to eight, a remarkable number when the season is only two weeks old.

The Sachems set the tempo in the first quarter as quarterback John DeMarco led the offense on a six-minute drive. Winchester had a first-and-goal from the 10-yard line but a clipping call and an offside penalty put the Sachems deep in a hole.

The drive ended when a DeMarco pass was intercepted and run back to the Winchester 40-yard line. But the Warriors could do nothing about the Sachem defense.

On the Sachems' next possession, Cromwell took the ball and raced 61 yards to the Warriors' 15.

Five plays later, early in the second quarter, Cromwell plunged over the goal line for a 7-0 Winchester lead.

VICTORY

With 1:39 left in the half, Cromwell scored again, this time from 15 yards out to put his team up 14-0.

It was "lights out" for Wakefield before the first half was over when the Sachems scored again on an 18-yard pitch pass from Cromwell to Vinnie Benincasa with 50 seconds left.

Winchester led 21-0 at intermission.

Winchester was able to drive the ball throughout the first half, using up the clock and humbling Wakefield's defense. Meanwhile, the Warrior offense was able to convert on only two first downs in the half.

The Sachems' John Matheson was exceptional at defensive end, shutting down all of Wakefield's outside running game.

The Warriors got on the scoreboard for the first time with 4:42 left in the third quarter as Tito Raymond hit Steve Lombardi with a halfback option pass from 10 yards out.

Richie Burke made an incredible hit to stop Wakefield's attempt for a two-point conversion.

The Sachems drove again, this time to the Wakefield one-yard line. Cromwell completed the drive, putting Winchester up 28-6.

As if he hadn't done enough, Cromwell broke to the outside and stampeded 50 yards for his fourth touchdown at the 7:00 mark of the fourth period.

Cornerback Benincasa returned a Vin Majeski interception 30 yards to put icing on the cake. Winchester led 42-6.

With Winchester's second defensive unit in the game, Raymond scored on a screen pass for Wakefield with five minutes left.

Melrose tough 7-6 battle

By DAVID DEMARCO

Can the Sachems win a football game without Darin Cromwell?

The question was on the minds of many Winchester High School fans as the Sachems faced Melrose in the season's third game.

Winchester proved itself as a TEAM as it answered the question, defeating Melrose 7-6 without running back Cromwell or starting fullback Artie Gordon.

Cromwell wsa sidelined with a badly pulled hamstring muscle while Gordon popped something in his right elbow and the swelling kept him out of the game.

Melrose drove deep into Winchester territory before Aaron "Brother" West intercepted a pass from Melrose quarterback Rich Green in the end zone to bail the Sachems out of trouble.

The Sachem offense could not move the football, however, and Melrose took over with good field position.

The Red Raiders came into the contest with a game plan to exploit Winchester's untested secondary by going to the pass early and often.

The strategy was less than spectacular, however, because Green threw into double coverage. The toss, intended for Chris Pierce, instead landed in the arms of Sachem Mark Shaw.

After one quarter, the scoreboard was blank.

Split end Derek Maggiacomo beat the coverage over the middle for a 23-yard Melrose completion, giving the Raiders a first-and-10 on the one-yard line.

Tailback Jim Olsen gave the Raiders a 6-0 lead at 4:52 of the second quarter, powering his way over the goal line. The Raiders failed to convert a running play for extra points.

At halftime, Melrose led 6-0. Winchester had converted only three first downs in the half with a total of 64 yards gained on offense.

Winchester had its back against the wall as the second half opened. "Pickle" Murray returned a punt to the Melrose 20-yard line, giving the Sachems decent field position for the first time all day.

With 2:19 left in the third period, Danny Costello hit pay dirt on a 43-power, knotting the score at 6-6.

VICTORY

"When we got the ball first-and-goal, we went with a 24-power three times and didn't get it in," explained quarterback John DeMarco. "So we tried the opposite, a 43-power, and scored."

Mark Shaw booted the extra point and Winchester had the slimmest possible lead, 7-6. It was clear the Sachems were not going to get "the breaks" this day, however.

The next time Melrose was forced to punt, there was a fumble by the Sachems on the switch and the Red Raiders recovered on the Winchester 31-yard line with 20 seconds left in the third quarter.

Melrose had 10 minutes to move the ball and put Winchester away. Green's passing brought the Raiders close, only six yards from the goal line.

But the Sachem defense stiffened and showed what it's made of. Mike Vozzella and George Nowell combined for a great sack, sticking Green around the 10-yard line.

Moose Morton put Green and Melrose away on fourth down with a crunching hit.

At no time did the Raiders attempt to run against the Sachems. Instead they relied almost entirely on ace receiver Pierce to grab an aerial in the end zone.

But the Winchester defense was outstanding, keeping the game tight and holding Melrose when it was essential.

With 8:28 left, the Sachems took the ball and ran deep into Melrose territory while seconds ticked away.

"I was impressed with the way we kept our composure when things were going badly. We learned a lot about ourselves, facing adversity. We really came together," DeMarco said later.

The outstanding play of linebacker Richie Burke, who led the Sachems in tackles, deserves special note. The play of cornerback West, who grabbed a pass and caused a fumble, was also excellent.

Mike Murray also did a good job at halfback, gaining 72 yards on 16 carries for an average of 4.5 yards per call.

Watertown trips 35-16 despite pair's injuries in season's 4th success,

By DAVID DEMARCO

It's been said before but it's worth repeating. Winchester Sachems love the nightlife.

Winchester football teams have always done exceptionally well under the light and the season's fourth game was no exception as the Sachems tripped Watertown 35-16 in a display of power football at its best.

Winchester was hurting for the second week in a row with both Darin Cromwell and Artie Gordon sitting on the sidelines.

The Red Raiders received the kickoff but their drive was thwarted by an illegal procedure call. Watertown had to punt.

The Sachems took the ball and drove with their first possession. Mike Murray had an apparent touchdown called back because of an offensive holding call with 1:27 left in the first quarter.

Winchester would not be denied, however. A draw play to Murray set the Sachems up on Watertown's 14-yard line. The first half ended with no score as the Sachems held the ball on Watertown's four.

Danny Costello grabbed the first TD of the night on a 32-fold at 9:57 of the second quarter.

Watertown could develop no offense during the second quarter. Sachem quarterback John DeMarco threw a beautiful pass to Vinnie Benincasa on a 32-tight end streak that was good for 42 yards, just one shy of the Red Raiders' end zone.

VICTORY

Aaron West put the ball over to give Winchester a 14-0 lead.

Nick Anastasides got the Red Raiders' passing game going and led Watertown deep into Winchester territory with under a minute left in the half.

Anastasides made one mistake — throwing into double coverage. Mark Shaw was able to pick off the pass on the Sachems' four-yard line.

It seemed Winchester would be able to ride out the final 43 seconds of the first half. The Watertown defense toughened, though, and the Sachems were forced to punt after three downs.

The punt only went 20 yards and Watertown took over on the Sachems' 30-yard line.

From the Sachems' four-yard line, Anastasides rolled to the left and found Sandy Campbell wide open in the corner of the end zone. At the half, Winchester's lead was cut to 14-8.

The second half was all Winchester's. The Sachems took the kickoff and marched down the field with some of the strongest football they've played this year.

It was "power time" and the inside running game was wide open. Again this week, Winchester stayed away from the option play, electing instead to slug it out on the line of scrimmage.

"We dominated from tackle to tackle. We didn't have to rely on the option because the line was blowing people away," said quarterback DeMarco.

DeMarco had his best game of the season, completing three of five passes for 64 yards.

At 5:36, sophomore Scott Garvey scored to put the Sachems up 21-8.

Anastasides was sacked by George Nowell on the Watertown 20, where Anastasides fumbled. Mike Vozzella recovered for the Sachems, giving them great field position.

Aaron West ran well inside, putting the Sachems on the three. It was Garvey's time again; he got his second TD of the third quarter at 2:47.

Nowell was devastating as the weak side defensive end. He got three sacks and was all over the field.

The Sachems took the ball in again with their next possession, Costello scoring at 4:24 of the fourth quarter to put Winchester up 35-8.

For the opponent's final score, Rusty Bigelow grabbed a 19-yard pass from Anastasides to score against Winchester's second defensive unit.

Winchester rolled up 176 yards rushing for the game, all of it from the inside.

Red Devils fall in easy victory to WHS 34-14

By DAVID DEMARCO

Winchester won but the season's fifth football game against Burlington was as bland as unbuttered toast.

To any knowledgeable observer, the outcome was never in doubt. One team was vastly superior to the other as the Sachem's outgunned the Red Devils 34-14.

Winchester kicked off but, as was the case all day, Burlington's offense could do nothing. The Devils punted.

Aaron "Brother" West broke a play to the left side for Winchester, picking up 42 yards and setting the Sachems up on the Burlington five-yard line.

Danny Costello gave the Sachems a 6-0 lead, scoring from the two on a veer left with 4:27 left in the first quarter.

As usual, Mark Shaw's conversion was good and the Sachems led 7-0.

On the next offensive series, Burlington fumbled and gave Winchester another golden opportunity.

Quarterback John Demarco threw his first TD pass of the year when coach Manny Marshall went to the air on first down. Artie Gordon scored on a perfectly-executed 17-option pass to put Winchester up 14-0.

The Player of the Game, Frankie Gianci, made one of his many fine plays of the day, intercepting a pass with 1:14 left in the first period.

It looked as if Gianci's interception would give the Sachems a chance to drive from the Burlington 23 and put the Red Devils 21 points behind in the 1st quarter.

But the inside game, available to the Sachems until now, closed down. The Sachems were stopped on four plays and there was suddenly no room for Westy to run.

The second quarter opened with Burlington deep in its own territory. Two personal fouls in the same play gave the Red Devils 30 free yards, however, and a lot of momentum.

With new life, Burlington drove all the way to the Sachem five-yard line.

David Travaglini got the Devils on the scoreboard as the tough little quarterback rolled out right and found Bobby Gallinaro in the end zone for a five-yard TD pass at the 4:10 mark.

With about a minute left in the half, West gave the Sachems good field position again, returning a punt to Burlington's 15.

After a pass interference call, Winchester advanced to the two-yard line. Gordon got his second touchdown of the day as he went over the middle with 25 seconds left.

Winchester led 21-7 at intermission after a strange first half for a strange game.

Winchester had only 111 yards on 21 plays but had 21 points on the board. On the other hand, the Sachems gave Burlington almost 40 free yards but the Devils scored only once.

Sachem star Darin Cromwell returned in the third quarter. It was drive time for Winchester, which ate almost the entire quarter. The Sachems showed a balanced attack, using both the option and the inside game.

Without the speed of Cromwell, however, the Sachems would have relied on the superior strength of their line from tackle to tackle to run inside.

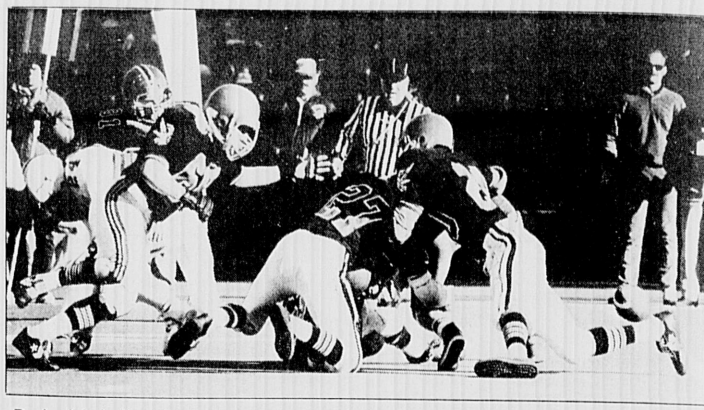

But with Cromwell the Sachems could again make their outside game a big threat.

With 15 seconds left in the third, Cromwell put the game away on a 15-yard TD run. Winchester led 28-7.

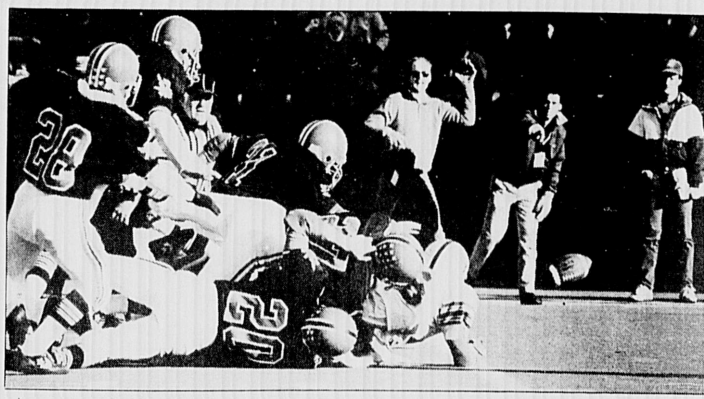

The game was over with a quarter to play.

Defensive end George Nowell put the nails in Burlington's coffin when he picked off a pass for Winchester and ran it back for a 40-yard touchdown.

Sachems hit 6-0 with Reading

By DAVID DEMARCO

Winchester High School rolled to 6-0 defeating Reading 33-14 in the sixth game of the season.

The Rockets were never really in the game as Winchester put them away early.

Reading received the opening kickoff and, to no one's surprise, went to a passing game. A series of incomplete screen passes started early and characterized the game for quarterback Dave Johnson and the Rockets.

When the Sachems touched the ball, they knew what to do. Quarterback John DeMarco connected with Vinnie Benincasa for a 52-yard touchdown pass off a tight formation 32-pass.

With three minutes left in the first quarter, Winchester led 7-0.

Even with a lead of only seven points, it was obvious Winchester would win when Benincasa intercepted a Johnson pass at the 2:17 mark of the first quarter.

As the second quarter opened, the Sachems had the ball on the Rockets' 25-yard line. They drove to the five-yard line but were stopped by mistakes.

VICTORY
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Winchester settled for three points as Mark Shaw hit his first field goal of the season, a nice 33-yard boot. The Sachems led 10-0 at 6:09.

On the ensuing kickoff, Reading put itself in a hole. Kickoff receiver Paul Crispo led the ballroll to his own two-yard line, then made the mistake of picking it up and downing it in his own end zone.

The mistake gave Winchester a safety and two free points.

"Brother" Aaron West ran an excellent return on the free kick to give the Sachems great field position on the Rockets' 38. Winchester took the ball and stayed on the ground with a balanced attack.

With a minute left, Darin Cromwell scored from the one-yard line on a 24-power to make the score 19-0 at the half.

Winchester maintained possession of the ball for most of the second quarter, leaving Reading mentally down and physically beaten up from the Sachems' outside running attack.

Reading tried to come back in the third quarter. The Rockets' offense was able to generate a little spark and marched to the Sachems' seven-yard line.

Crispo got the Rockets on the board at 4:30, cutting the Winchester lead to 19-8.

The Sachems answered when DeMarco connected with Benincasa again, this time with a 41-yard pass play on a tight formation 18-option pass.

Since the Sachems usually run from tight formations, the pass play left Reading flat-footed and Benincasa three steps open.

> With three minutes left in the first quarter, Winchester led 7-0.

With the score 26-8, the Rockets were out of it. On Reading's next possession, Johnson got enough time to connect with several passes. Reading was on Winchester's 12-yard line.

Johnson hit Scott Allen in the far left corner of the end zone to make the score 26-14.

Cromwell put the icing on Winchester's cake with a minute left.

The game was the first of the season with all facets of the Sachems' game, including the pass, working well.

Stoneham tough in nail-biting win

By DAVID DEMARCO

Rolaids were the most popular snack food for Winchester football fans during the season's seventh game.

It was a nail-biting affair that left fans and players drawn and exhausted.

Winchester beat Stoneham 28-22 but the outcome was very much in doubt until the final seconds.

Stoneham was a lot more up for the game. They caught us by surprise. Nobody was tackling and we just weren't ready," admitted defensive end John Mathson.

The Spartans received the kickoff and drove, running outside at random. At 6:57 of the first quarter, Dave Pignone ran a sweep from the Winchester 45-yard line to pay dirt, putting the Spartans up 6-0.

A mistake set up the Spartans again when quarterback John DeMarco misplayed a pitch that went for a fumble. Stoneham recovered on the Sachem 23.

The turnover cost Winchester six more points. The Spartans quickly drove to the Sachem 1-yard line, setting up the score after a nice playaction pass by reserve quarterback Bob Ferraro.

Ed Hickey shoved the ball over at 8:52 and a two-point conversion was good. Stoneham led 14-0 and had the Sachems further behind than ever this year.

Winchester showed poise. The Sachems knew they had to score on their next series of plays.

From the Winchester 28, Coach Manny Marshall called a veer right. DeMarco kept the ball and galloped 72 yards for the touchdown.

That single play turned the momentum around and was the first of three consecutive unanswered touchdowns.

For the first time this year, the extra point attempt was blocked. But the Sachems were back in the game, down 14-6 with 6:53 left in the half.

The Winchester defense held on the next series, in part because of the exceptional play of Mathson.

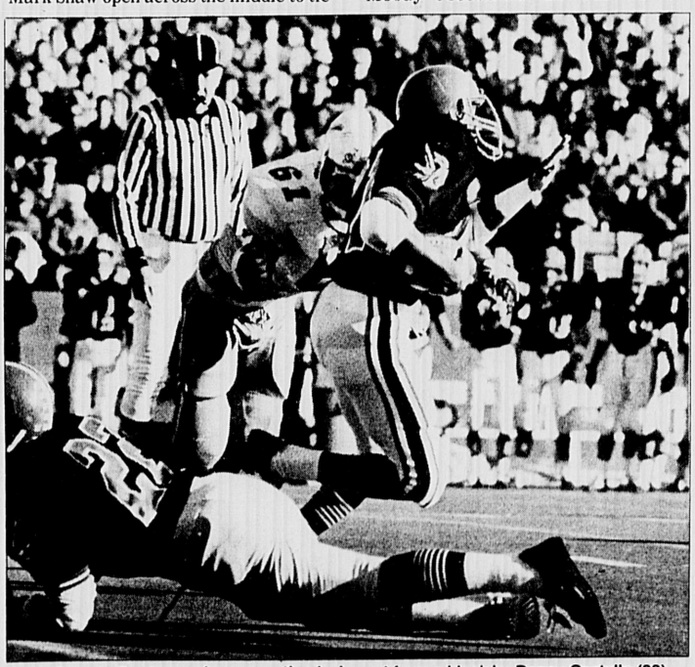

On its next offensive series, Winchester drove to the Stoneham 10.

The hitting was intense as the Spartans resisted mightily before yielding any yardage. But Darin Cromwell powered his way over the goal line from the one, cutting Stoneham's lead to 14-12.

On a two-point try, Demarco found Mark Shaw open across the middle to tie the game 14 all.

With 15 seconds left in the half, Cromwell again scored from the one, giving his team a 21-12 lead at the half.

But the game was far from over. Winchester's defensive line had been eaten up by trap plays. "They seemed to be double-teaming the nose and cracking down on the tackles," said Aaron West.

Richie Burke was outstanding, as usual, with 11 unassisted tackles and was the defensive leader. His teammates agreed. "We weren't really intense. Nobody but Burkie made outstanding plays," said J.R. Morton.

Defense dominated the third quarter and neither squad scored. But Winchester backed up a few yards after each team traded the ball. Something drastic was needed as the fourth period began.

"Air DeMarco" took off. The quarterback hit Vinnie Benincasa for a 65-yard TD off a 17-power bootleg pass. With 7:24 left, coach Marshall had gone for the gold on a first-and-10.

It worked and Winchester led 27-14 with 7:24 to play. There was still lots of football left.

Stoneham was ready. The Spartans took the ball and ate up the Sachems' defensive line. Ferraro led Stoneham to the Sachem 15-yard line. With 3:8 left, he hit Pignone in the right corner to make it a new ball game at 28-20.

Stoneham faked a kick and completed a two-point conversion, cutting Winchester's lead to 28-22. A Spartan TD would tie the game and any conversion would win it.

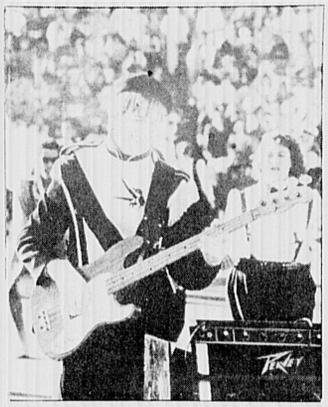

To heighten the drama, Winchester's offense stalled and the Sachems had to punt from deep in their own territory.

Stoneham took over at midfield with a minute left. Just 57 seconds later, the Spartans were on the Winchester six-yard line with three seconds to go on the clock.

Sachems end Lexington jinx

VICTORY
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

By DAVID DEMARCO

Not this time.

Winchester's football team would not be denied this year, as it was twice in recent years in crucial games against Lexington. In 1986, the Sachems downed the Minutemen 19-6.

It was the greatest performance by a Winchester team in recent years, many said, despite pouring rain.

The Sachems played as if possessed. From the opening second to the final tick, Winchester was all over Lexington.

Now 7-0 in the Middlesex League and 8-0 overall, Winchester sits alone atop the league standings and second only to Peabody in Division I rankings for the Super Bowl game. Walpole, the remaining unbeaten and untied squad, is third and Woburn, which tied Melrose Saturday, is fourth.

Winchester received Saturday's kickoff and went right to work. Coach Manny Marshall deserves much credit for calling the plays, especially his decision to try a pass on the first play from scrimmage.

Quarterback John DeMarco fired a bomb to Vin Benincasa for 66 yards and six points. For Winchester, there was no looking back.

The Minutemen were unable to develop an offense all afternoon. Fullback Jeff Nevill and tailback Mark Maguire were totally neutralized.

Perhaps because of the rain, Lexington did not pass as often as expected, even after falling behind early. Instead, the Minutemen rushed the ball 35 times for 144 yards.

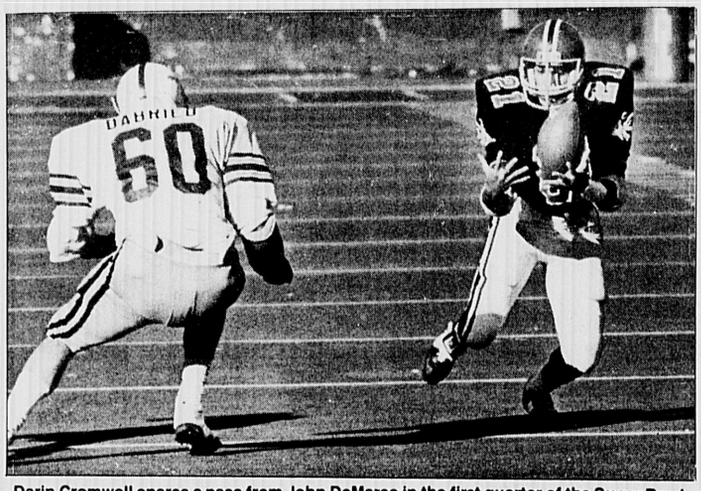

Winchester's next touchdown was set up by a 54-yard punt return by Darin Cromwell. The Sachems had a first-and-10 on the Lexington 16-yard line to begin their march.

Cromwell pushed over the goal line from the one to put Winchester up 12-0. But the Sachems knew they were not out of the weeds; Winchester led by the same score last year before losing.

Lexington got its only score of the day directly off a fumble by the usually sure-handed Cromwell. The Minutemen took over on the Winchester 26-yard line.

Sloppy field conditions were responsible for nine fumbles on the afternoon. Luckily for Winchester, seven were by Lexington ballcarriers and only one of the Sachems' fumbles proved costly.

Neville drove the final yard for Lexington to cut the Sachem lead to 12-6. The Sachem defense fought on each play and nearly held on the series. For the afternoon, however, the Sachem defense forced Lexington to punt four times.

With a halftime score of 12-6, the game was still up for grabs and a weather-caused mistake could decide it. But Winchester was so intense, it seemed the Minutemen wanted no part of the raging maniacs in front of them.

Underrated Frankie Gianci would not let up, however, and blocked a punt on the Lexington 35-yard line to give Winchester a great opportunity. George Nowell recovered the ball and Winchester took over at the Lexington 19.

DeMarco connected with Benincasa again for a 14-yard TD pass to put the Sachems on top 19-6 with nine minutes left in the third quarter.

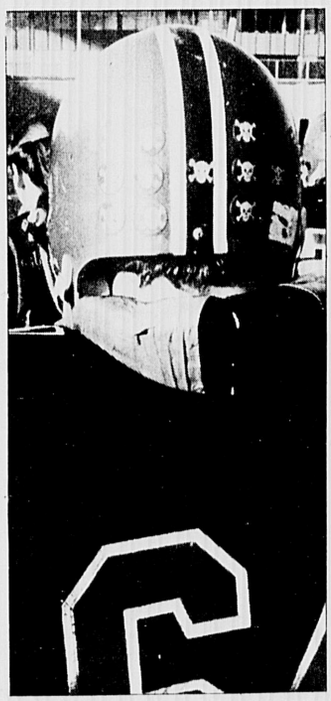

Tasting victory, the Sachems played the rest of the game as if the game were scoreless.

The game had no superstars; each player did something outstanding. The defensive play of Mike Vozzella, David Carter, Richie Burke and Scott Cullen shut down the big Lexington offense for four quarters.

On offense, the play of Benincasa, snagging two touchdown passes in a monsoon, was incredible and DeMarco was a true field general, throwing as if the ball were dry.

Cromwell still had all his moves, despite uncertain footing, while fullback Danny Costello ran with people on his back more than once.

Credit also must go to offensive guard Dave Ford, who played with a bad ankle against a man twice his size and succeeded as the underdog in the David versus Goliath rematch.

Scott Cullen's back had to be an imposing sight to Peabody fans. (Marc Schlossman photo)

Belmont Marauders buried 38-12 in tuneup for Thanksgiving Day

By DAVID DEMARCO

Winchester tuned up for Thanksgiving's "big event" with a 38-12 pasting of Belmont in the ninth game of the season as the Sachems ran to 9-0.

The Sachems will face unbeaten and once-tied Woburn in the traditional Turkey Day game.

Winchester kicked off to Belmont but the Marauders set the stage for the afternoon when they fumbled the ball away on their first possession.

Winchester recovered on the Belmont 49-yard line and marched to the Belmont seven.

At 3:25 of the first quarter, Darin Cromwell did what he does so well. Winchester led 6-0.

The Sachems got their second gift of the day on the Marauders' next possession. Poor Belmont fumbled again, putting the Sachem offense on its own 41-yard line.

On first down, Winchester went deep to Vin Benincasa. The pass was complete for 58 yards to the Belmont one. Cromwell went in again at 9:24 of the second quarter.

By now it was obvious Winchester could score at will. It was almost as if the Sachems were toying with Belmont when they fumbled the ball to the Marauders at the Sachem 35-yard line.

But Belmont quarterback Chris Wright was unable to get his team's offense moving.

The Sachems took over and drove to the Marauders' 31. Again the pass meant doom for Belmont. John DeMarco hit Benincasa for a 41-yard TD play. Winchester led 18-0 with 1:35 left in the half.

The rest of the game was as dreary as the sky, at least in terms of suspense.

Artie Gordon intercepted a pass for Winchester on the next series of downs, bringing an overworked Sachem offensive unit back on the field.

Mike "Pickle" Murray received the call on the next series. Murray ran well, setting up the Sachems on the Belmont 25. With 49 seconds left, DeMarco hit Murray to make the halftime score 24-0.

Coach Manny Marshall saw an opportunity to give younger players some varsity experience in the second half.

The Sachems took the kickoff on their own two-yard line and drove through Belmont's defense with ease.

The offense munched up seven minutes of the third quarter before Cromwell scored again, this time from the four-yard line.

With Winchester up 32-0, Coach Marshall gave the first string the rest of the day off.

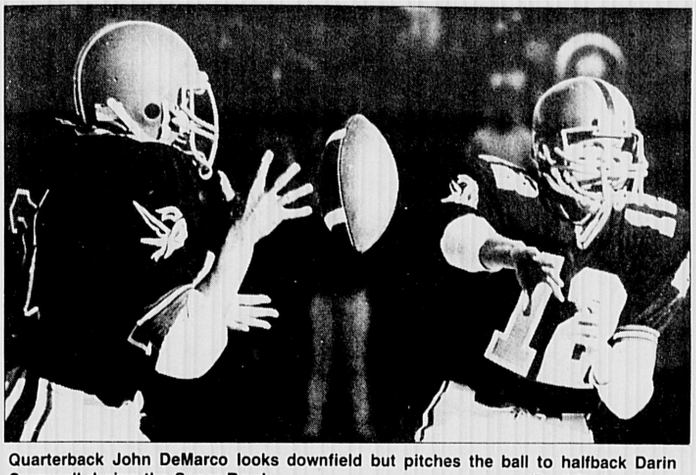

Brian Gilligan recovered his own team's fumble in the end zone for Belmont's first touchdown and Wright gave the Marauders their second at 3:14 of the fourth quarter.

Scott Garvey scored Winchester's last touchdown on a nice 18-yard run.

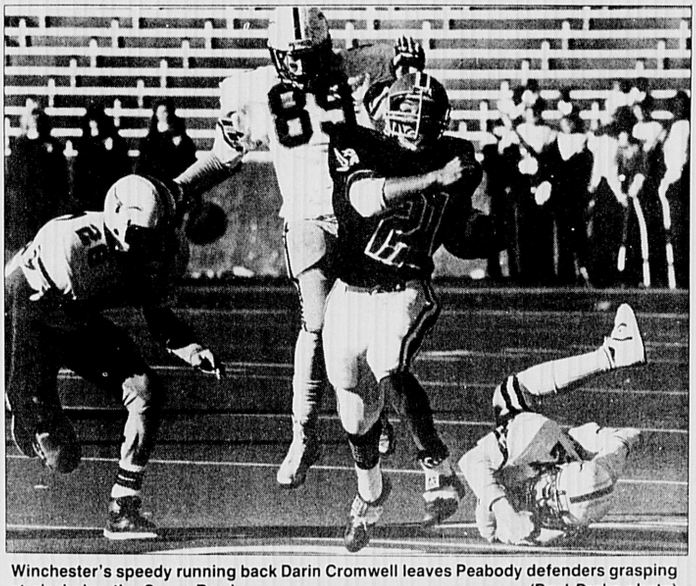

Seniors playing their last home game had fun in the second half, standing on the sidelines and watching their younger compadres.

Winchester closed the game with 345 yards of total offense.

By DAVID DEMARCO

Winchester is in the Super Bowl. The dream is reality.

After years of training, the Winchester High School Sachems reached the apex Thanksgiving Day with a 22-13 victory at Woburn High.

The game was as anticipated. Thousands jammed Connolly Stadium to see the collision of two Middlesex League powerhouses, traditional rivals for nearly 100 years.

The Tanners won the toss and elected to go on defense first; they kicked off.

Winchester took the ball and began to grind out yardage slowly for one first down. The Sachems stalled and sent the punting unit on the field.

Disaster struck. Tanner lineman Kevin Spolidoro uncharacteristically lined up inside the Winchester defensive end and had a clear path to punter John Mathson.

Winchester's punt was blocked on the Winchester 17-yard line. Woburn's Dave Digiralamo picked up the bouncing ball and sprinted unmolested to the end zone.

Jim Duran booted the extra point and Woburn led 7-0 with 6:53 left in the first quarter.

Winchester fans were stunned but Sachem players remained cool, knowing they had a few tricks of their own to use before the game ended.

The Sachems took the ball and used their ground game to set up a perfectly executed flea-flicker pass to Mark Shaw, who dashed to the Woburn five-yard line with eight minutes left in the half.

An 18-speed option to Darin Cromwell and an extra point kick by Shaw tied the game at 7-all.

The Sachems' defense, as it did often all day, stopped Woburn's next drive in three plays. Winchester got the ball again on Woburn's 42-yard line.

Winchester marched forward, concluding with a 29-yard run on a 17-speed option run by Cromwell to gain the lead 13-7. Shaw's second successful extra point made it 14-7, Winchester's way.

Against Woburn's highly touted defense, Winchester put 14 points on the board in four minutes.

Weak side defensive end Geroge Nowell was the story for the Sachem defense on the following series.

Nowell was all over Tanner quarterback Bucky Doherty, who was sacked twice by Nowell and had one pass blocked as well.

"I only had one halfback to beat and it wasn't that hard," Nowell said later. "We set the stage for this game early."

The half ended with Winchester up 14-7 but 20 minutes of tough football remained.

By halftime it was obvious the Winchester defense was in control. Woburn could not develop a running game and the Sachem pass rush applied more pressure on Doherty than the Tanners could handle.

Winchester's offense, meanwhile, met a tough Tanner defense inside but was able to run outside and threaten enough passing to keep the Woburn secondary honest.

VICTORY

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Woburn received the second half kickoff and began to move, finally reaching the Winchester nine-yard line.

Winchester's defense held and Tanner coach Rocky Nelson went for the field goal. But a crucial mistake did the Tanners in. The snap was misplayed and the play fell dead.

Another mistake, this one by Winchester, followed. The Sachems gave Woburn its second gift when quarterback John Demarco fumbled on first down.

With 9:57 left in the third quarter, Woburn had the ball on the Sachems' one-yard line and a chance to go ahead with one quarter left.

Digiralamo put the ball over to cut the margin to 14-13. A passing attempt for a two-point conversion failed when Duran slipped on the damp turf.

Winchester clung to a one-point lead with most of the fourth quarter to play.

The Sachem offense stalled on the next series and Winchester had to punt.

Woburn's offense, now trying to develop a passing game, also stalled. Digiralamo had been moved to block Winchester's Nowell but linemen Mike Vozzella and John Mathson continued to rush the Woburn quarterback with authority.

The biggest play of the game came on the next series. Winchester had the ball on second down at its own 25-yard line.

DeMarco decided to keep the ball himself on a veer option play and sprinted 58 yards to the Woburn 17-yard line.

With the wind taken out of their sails, Woburn players for the first time began to look worried.

The Sachems were not through at the 25, however. With Cromwell rushing on most plays, the Sachems turned the Woburn lights out with 2:52 left in the game. Cromwell scored from the two-yard line to make it 20-13.

Sachem coach Manny Marshall took no chances, opting for a two-point conversion run by Cromwell. It worked and Winchester led 22-13.

Revenge was the Sachems'. Time ran out with no further scoring.

"Nothing was going to stop us. Now everybody knows we're the best team," Cromwell said. On the day, he rushed for 158 yards.

"The pass rush was excellent, the defense was excellent and the offense was able to get the big play when needed," said linebacker Richie Burke.

The Sachems won the big game, although they did not play perfect football. Woburn was able to break the continuity of the Winchester offense but when yards were needed, the Sachems still came through.

Perhaps the bigget change in Woburn's play was within its own 15-yard line. The Tanners had been tough close to its own end zone all year but were unable to control play there Thanksgiving Day.

In the second half, the Sachems did not let up, as Erbafina scored, followed by sophomore Vandy French, Anthony Cuccinatti and Paul Cappodonna, who started in place of the injured Kenny Fowler.

Game 3: Watertown

Winchester continued its winning ways with a 7-0 win at Watertown Sept. 16.

Rice and Erbafina each scored in the first half, while Verhaegen netted three goals after the intermission. Rice and Erbafina each assisted on a VanHaegan goal.

Cappadonna and Steve Reeve also added goals for the Sachems.

Game 4: Burlington

Rice and Erbafina also scored for the Sachems.

Junior Stephen Reeve and senior Brian Riley filled in when the ailing Kent McCord and Steve Goudsouzian, respectively.

Game 5: Reading

The Sachems shut out host Reading, 4-0, Sept. 22, getting two goals from Verhaegen and one each from Cappadonna and Cuccinatti.

Fullbacks Mike Bortman and David Ducharme played strong defense as goalie Scott Racek needed to make only two stops of direct kicks.

Game 6: Stoneham

Mike Rice led Winchester with five goals as the Sachems beat the Spartans, 9-1, Sept. 24.

Fowler and Verhaegen also scored for the Sachems

Game 7: Lexington

After averaging almost six goals a game during their first six wins, Winchester could score none in a 1-0 loss to Lexington Sept. 26.

The Minutemen doubleteamed and shut down Verhaegen, who had scored 11 of the team's 35 goals to date.

Lexington scored on a rebound from an indirect kick.

Game 8: Belmont

Visiting Belmont scored twice in the first half and held on to beat the Sachems, 2-1, Sept. 30.

Rice scored his tenth goal of the season on a cross from Fowler.

The Sachems' record fell to 6-2 with the loss.

Game 9: Woburn

Winchester returned to winning ways Oct. 3 by beating Woburn, 3-1.

Rice opened the scoring with a penalty shot from a hand ball. Fowler and Cappodonna also scored for the Sachems, who finished the first half of the season with seven wins and two losses. Winchester was in third place in the Middlesex League behind Belmont and Lexington

Game 10: Wakefield

The Sachems beat the Warriors, 4-0, Oct. 7 to avenge an opening game loss to Wakefield.

Loose balls in front of Wakefield's net led to first half scores by Reeve and Cappadonna. Verhaegen added two second half goals, the latter off a scissor-kick pass from Mike McGeehan.

Game 11: Melrose

The Sachems improved their record to nine wins and two losses with a 3-0 shutout of Melrose Oct. 10.

Winchester has scored 46 goals in 11 games, while letting just nine goals reach its own net.

Game 12: Burlington

Verhaegen scored twice to lead Winchester past Burlington, 6-0, Oct. 16.

Jude Capachetti, Steve Goudsouzian, McGeehan and Rice also scored for the Sachems.

Goalie Scott Racek did not have to make a save until the final 10 minutes of the game.

Game 13: Reading

Winchester captain and stopper McCord notched his first goal of the season during a 4-2 win over Reading Oct. 17.

French scored on a pass from McGeehan, while Cappodonna scored the game-winning and insurance goals.

The Sachems defense faltered toward the end of the game.

Game 14: Watertown

Winchester won eaily against Watertown Oct. 20, as Cappachetti scored twice en route to a 6-1 win.

Also scoring were French, Verhaegen, McCord and Erbafina.

Game 15: Stoneham

A tough Stoneham defense and a narrow field kept Winchester's high powered offense dormant until the last five minutes of the Oct. 21 game, when they broke loose for three goals.

Coach Gene Bouley tried different strategies to forge a goal against Stoneham, which at times kept nine players back on defense.

French scored on a breakaway with five minutes left in the game. Cappadonna and Goudsouzian also netted goals for the Sachems.

Game 16: Lexington

Winchester and Lexington played to a 1-1 tie Oct. 24, with Rice providing the tying goal on a left-footed shot.

The teams were scoreless in the first half. The tie dropped the Sachems' record to 13-2-1.

Game 17: Belmont

The Sachems failed to clinch the Middlesex League title with a 1-1 tie against Belmont Oct. 28.

Winchester came into the game just two points ahead of Belmont in first place in the Middlesex League.

Verhaegen's goal off a Robbie Kean corner kick just six minutes into the game was to be the only score for the Sachems.

Winchester gave up one goal to Belmont's powerful offense.

Game 18: Woburn

Fowler scored twice and VerHeagen converted a penalty kick to lead Winchester to a 3-0 shutout of Woburn, giving the Sachems a Middlesex League title on the last day of the regular season.

The Sachems ended the regular season with a 14-2-2 record.

Girls win crown

19-win season sparks girls to title

Winchester didn't lose a game all season on the way to the Division I state girls soccer championship.

Several players shared scoring honors for the Sachemettes but Joann Shusta in the net was a major factor, recording 14 shutouts in 19 victories.

Winchester ended with a 19-0-2 overall record. Here's how the season went:

Game 1: Wakefield

Winchester opened the season with a 1-1 tie against Wakefield Sept. 9. The Sachemettes' only goal, credited to Debbie Nowell, came on a misplay by the Warriors' goalkeeper.

Although Winchester outshot Wakefield, 25-8, the Sachemettes could not get the ball past the goalie.

Game 2: Andover

The Sachemettes shut out Andover High, 2-0, Sept. 12 despite a long trip and a rain delay. Katie "Scooter" Binding and Nowell scored for Winchester.

The team was paced by Meghan Guarnotta, who scored three goals. Nowell, the Sachemettes' point leader, also scored for Winchester.

Game 4: Burlington

Karen Sansbury's goal at 7:46 was the first scored against the Sachemettes since the opening game of the season.

Reece tied the game at 17:30 on a pass from Nowell. Binding later scored the game-winning and insurance goals for Winchester.

Game 8: Woburn

Guarnotta (five goals, two assists) and Reece (three goals) led Winchester past the young Woburn Tannerettes, 13-0, Oct. 3.

Reece's hat trick was complete by intermission.

Game 9: Wakefield

In a repeat of the season's first game, the Sachemettes tied Wakefield, 1-1, Oct. 7.

After a scoreless first half, Guarnotta scored at 15:44 of the second half on a pass from Nowell.

But eight minutes later, the score was tied, as the Sachemettes failed to clear the ball after a corner kick and Sheryl Watson scored.

Despite the tie, Winchester remains undefeated with a 7-0-2 record.

Game 10: Burlington

The Sachemettes blanked Burlington, 8-0, Oct. 16, despite a sluggish first half on offense.

Guarnotta got the only goal of the first half off a deflection. Burlington had no shots on goal during the half.

In the second half, the Sachems exploded with what Debbie Maida termed "a chain reaction of aggressiveness."

Binding scored twice, as did Reece, and the Sachems got goals from Denise Chabot, Nowell and Maida.

Game 11: Reading

Winchester did not score in the first half but netted two goals after intermission to stop Reading, 2-0, Oct. 17.

Game 12: Concord-Carlisle

The Sachemettes handed archrival Concord-Carlisle its second loss of the season with a 5-0 win Oct. 21.

Billed as the biggest test of the year for Winchester, the game was an easy one for the Sachemettes.

Binding scored at 18:00 and 23:48 in the first half, and Strazullo added another goal before halftime. All three goals resulted from corner kicks.

Reece and Kelly Dewar scored in the second half.

Playoffs, Game 3:
Sachemettes 2, Concord-Carlisle 1 (3OT)

Winchester won the northern Massachusetts title for the second year in a row with a 2-1 triple overtime win over Concord-Carlisle Nov. 15.

The Lady Patriots dominated the rest of the first half, but Shusta stopped their attacks.

At 30:57 of the second half, C-C's Cyndi Damon scored on a shot that deflected off a Winchester leg.

After two scoreless sudden death overtimes, Binding scored again, on a pass from Guarnotta, to keep the Sachemettes winning.

Playoffs, Game 4:
Sachemettes 2, Bridgewater-Raynham 0

Winchester defeated Bridgewater-Raynham, 2-0, Nov. 18, to advance to the state championship game.

After a Binding shot hit the crossbar, Reece tied the game with a header. Her gamewinner, on a pass from Kelly Dewar, came at 3:06 of the second half.

Shusta preserved the victory with a strong game.

Two of Winchester's top players, Skehan and Nowell, did not play in the final due to injuries.

Including the playoffs, the Sachemettes finished the season with a record of 19 wins, no losses and two ties.

In all, 14 of the wins were shutouts.

Katie Binding (24) gets a hug from teammate Charlotte Reese after scoring in the Sachemettes' 2-0 victory over Arlington.

Marshall celebrates win

'Nothing was going to sway them, I'm happy'

Manny Marshall has been head football coach since 1967. This year is his greatest triumph.

"We've had a very special group of seniors," says Marshall. "We had 25 seniors — that's quite a number. It's nice to see that many stay with the program."

He credits Winchester's 11-0 season to the team, shrugging off credit for himself.

"They were all very hard workers, determined," he says. "Nothing was going to sway them."

Depth and strength helped, he says. "We had some injuries, but someone always came in and picked up the slack."

Marshall was backed up by backs coach Dave Berman, ends coach Tom Kline, line coach John Donohue, defensive ends coach Bob Miksen, and the two freshmen coaches, John Pirani and Frank Marshall.

Frank Marshall, Manny's son, is in his first year of coaching.

"After being in this more than 20 years, I get my enjoyment from watching the players," Marshall says. "I'm happy for them."

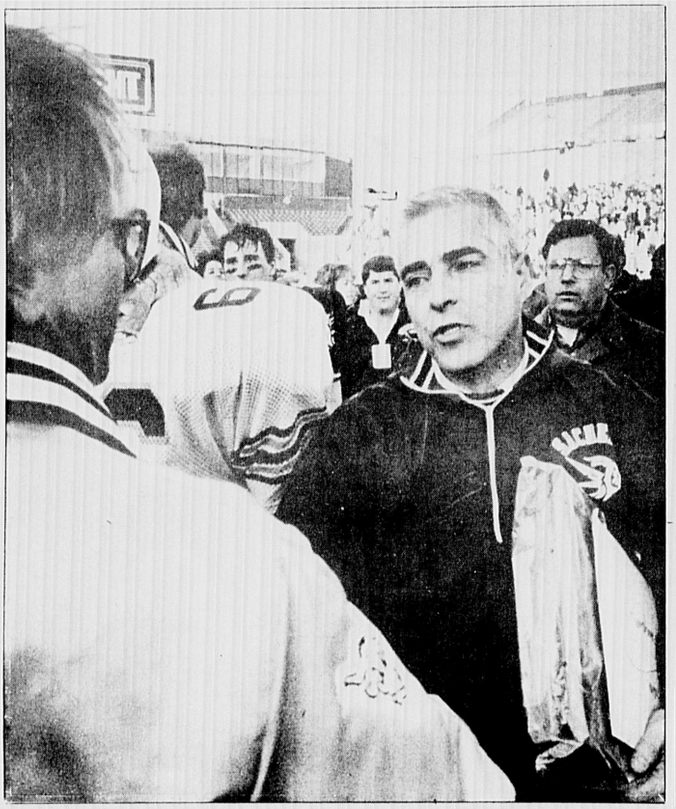

Middlesex selections

A number of the Winchester High School football team are named to the All Middlesex League.

Announced by coach Manny Marshall, honorable mention went to Dan Costello, William Morton, George Nowell, Scott Cullen, Art Gordon, Aaron West and David Ford.

First team selections are John DeMarco, Mike Vozzella, David Carter, Darin Cromwell, Richard Burke, John Mathson, Mark Shaw and Vin Benincasa.

D'Orsis get gas license

By GEORGE DERRINGER

John and Janet D'Orsi won permission to run a gas station they don't really want to own Monday night.

In September, the D'Orsis purchased the gas station formerly operated by Kenneth Binding at the corner of Washington and Forest streets.

Their plan was to turn the property into a wholesale and retail gingerbread baking house. But one vote by Virginia Hoefling, an alternate member of the zoning board of appeals, prevented a unanimous vote in

Loop buyers should watch mailboxes

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Anyone who wants to buy a piece of the old Woburn Loop property north of Swanton Street should watch his mailbox this week.

Selectmen voted Monday to send "requests for proposals" this Friday to all abutters of the abandoned railroad right-of-way and anyone else who has indicated interest in buying some of the lots, roughly laid out to correspond to abutting lots.

Several pieces of information will be included in the packets to be mailed Friday and more information will be available from the town engineer's office at town hall.

Selectmen were united in support of the plan and predicted a strong response. Proposals will be due Jan. 15.

None will be opened before that date, however. Once opened, letters become public documents and thus available for inspection by anyone.

Selectmen decided to advertise their request for proposals as well.

Schools study multicultural holiday option

The joy of the season will not be eliminated but "December music programs" should encompass a theme broader than Christmas"

By JANINE DIGIOVANNI

"Sensitive" observance of religious holidays by public schools has been the subject of discussion by school officials and a special task force during recent weeks.

The religion subcommittee of a special task force formed last spring to promote "racial, ethical and cultural awareness" reviewed current school policies and guidelines in a report submitted Nov.17.

Last month, the task force adopted the subcommittee's recommendations and distributed them to staff members. Teachers were urged to use "discretion and sensitivity" in planning holiday observances, including the annual holiday programs held in each elementary school.

Assistant superintendent David Ackerman, who was appointed to the subcommittee to represent the superintendent, said that the subcommittee's aim is to provide awareness of certain issues, mainly to introduce multi-cultural themes during the holiday season.

The joy of the season will not be eliminated, but "December music programs" should "encompass a theme broader and more inclusive than Christmas, e.g. light, peace, gifts and giving," in the words of another memo from music director Lynne Rahmeier to elementary principals and members of the music staff.

Religious traditions will not be eliminated but such themes as love, peace, brotherhood and family ties will be added, Ackerman said.

"We expect to have an excellent holiday program and to be positive and appropriate," Ackerman said.

"The public should understand that underlying the concern about sensitivity to differences is a positive factor in how our schools should be. All children — boys and girls, handicapped and non-handicapped, academically gifted and non-academically gifted, black, white, Asians, Christians, non-Christians — should all feel comfortable and feel full and equal in the school community."

The goal to create a positive vision is "exciting and constructive to build," Ackerman said. "That vision does not exclude some attention to religious holidays in context of schools. It suggests every child is comfortable in the schools, which are public and non-sectarian."

Holiday guidelines advise teachers to use sensitivity and to emphasize such important values as love, compassion, family ties, peace and brotherhood. Holiday programs will be seasonal and multicultural in approach and learning time will not be interrupted for time spent holiday preparation, guidelines say.

Rahmeier said, "We're trying to draw from the richness of cultual diversity. Consequently, we use themes that are universal to all societies. Peace is an example, singing carols about peace, Hebrew songs about shalom, songs about bringing people together."

"Also dancing and instrument playing," Rahmeier said. "The joy of making music together."

Rahmeier, who came to the position one year ago, said music must be appropriate to the times.

"The community is becoming more diverse," she said, "and becoming more aware of the diversity within."

There are always fears associated with change. But Rahmeier is confident that the multicultural approach to the holidays is the key to promoting awareness and understanding.

"From my perspective," she said, "Things are going smoothly toward a program people are looking forward to, involving children at schools."

Ackerman agrees. "We expect to have excellent holiday programs and to be positive and appropriate," he said.

"We have every expectation that teachers and principals will use good judgment in making the holiday experience positive."

Asked if some parents fear their children will not learn about the joy of the holiday season, Ackerman said, "Awareness in not necessarily a bad thing. If you're committed to being sensitive to the total community, you may find it necessary to make self-imposed limitations."

At first they may seem unnatural and annoying, but by doing that, it's essential for each child as a full and equal member of the school community to feel equal. It could be a tremendous achievement, a positive and conclusive goal, one that is difficult to attain. Any school that does should feel proud."

Liquor licenses will be closely reviewed

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester liquor license renewal applications will get closer scrutiny this year.

Selectmen decided Monday to have license holders appear before them Dec. 15 or 22, despite recommendations for renewals from the police chief, fire chief and building inspector.

"I'm very unhappy with rubber-stamping the renewals," said selectman Frank Sopper, who said all license-holders should at least appear before selectmen.

"A liquor license is very important. It must be kept under constant control," Sopper said. "There's a lot about these that I do not understand and I'd like to have some answers."

In keeping with the general policy of selectmen to defer a vote when one member asks to do so, the board directed town manager Chad Maurer to ask all applicants to appear in the next two weeks.

Club liquor licenses are held by the Sons of Italy, the Veterans of Foreign Wars post, the Christopher Columbus Society, the Knights of Columus and the Elks Lodge.

Restaurants with liquor licenses are Ristorante Lucia, Dover Grille and Maximilian's Cafe.

The town's only package store license is held by Nicholas Buonopane.

Liquor was also a consideration in another part of the selectmen's meeting Monday.

Northern Hospitality, a contra and square dancing group which includes Winchester members, asked to rent the town hall auditorium for New Year's Eve.

Winchester resident Peter Barnes and Tod Whittemore wrote to selectmen, asking permission for their seventh annual dance. "No alcohol will be allowed," they said.

"I'd say no," selectman Mark Lombardi said. "I can't believe they're going to have 300 people and not have liquor."

Selectman Judie Muggia said square dancers are "not a drinking

High school improvement 'democracy' proposal gets school board resistance

By JANINE DIGIOVANNI

McCall Junior High School improvement council proposals won unanimous approval of the school board Tuesday but Winchester High School's proposals will have to wait 30 days to be discussed.

Winchester High School's problem stemmed from a proposal to allocate $2,000 to "develop strategies and procedures which will hopefully result in more involvement by the staff and students in the decision making process ..."

"It is our hope to begin a project which will have ongoing ramifications over the next several years as to how a high school can be operated to optimize democratic procedure," the proposal says.

Board member Edward O'Connell said, "Due to the vagueness of this statement ... I'm at a loss and I simply cannot vote on it."

High school principal Vincent Larocco said the improvement money will be used to hire consultants and conduct workshops as well as to design model programs.

Donna Brandt Landry, board memberm said, "I read it and I said bravo," but O'Connell disageed strongly.

"I believe in excellence ... I'm squeamish by the vagueness. I think this ought to be brought back and worked on and then resubmitted for consideration," he said.

One teacher at Winchester High School voiced disapproval of the proposal. "I serve on the School Improvement Committee and we thought the idea for the proposal was good, but I wanted to know how it was going to be done," she said.

"Shouldn't we always be motivated to have the best?" O'Connell said.

Items calling for funding for overseas scholarships, dramatic opportunites, creative awards and crisis intervention were approved and item No. 2 was called for resubmission

High school's expanded business courses to include business administration

By JANINE DIGIOVANNI

With the high proportion of college students electing business as their major, students from Winchester High School might have an advantage.

"Students should at least have good keyboarding skills before graduating from high school," Don Kozak, coodinator of the business education program at Winchester High School said, "to use for computer or their own personal use.

"Students who plan to major in business should familiarize themselves by taking accounting or the new course in business management."

The business management course is just one new feature Winchester High is offering in the business education program.

Due to a federal grant and school budgeting, the department has recently added Apple computers, digital deckmates and Olivetti electronic typewriters.

This means more students can take advantage of the business education progaram. "We're a tiny department," Kozak said. "And one of our goals is to continue serving the non-college bound student but also to offer courses to the college bound students."

Courses such as business management and accounting can give the college bound student a jump on his freshman studies.

"Those courses are college-weighted," Kozak added, meaning they are more attractive to students seeking to raise their academic class standings in high school.

In addition, the business education program allows students to participate in student-operated businesses, which can be very appealing to college admissions officers.

One such program is a branch of Winchester Savings Bank which will be open at Winchester High School one and a half hours a day beginning Feb. 23. Students will be trained at the main branch of the bank one month prior.

Manned by three to four students, "Sachem Savings" will offer services such as checking, money orders,and travelers checks to fellow students, teachers and administrative staff.

Another student-run business,"Wordpro" gives advanced word processing students the chance to do on-campus business.

Approximately 20 percent of the student body participates in the program and Kozak would like to see that number increase.

"We would like to have serious business administration students take accounting and business management as college prep," he said.

The new business administration course provides "insight to characteristics, organization and operations of business. Contemporary issues as well as routine factors that affect business operations are introduced, including environment of the worker."

"We're developing the program now and through the summer so that the curriculum will be as up-to-date as possible. Future developments include the viewing and analysis of Japanese management and productivity," Kozak said.

Conservation commission will review High Street site

By KATHLEEN KELLEHER

Winchester's conservation commission will review a proposal to develop housing on wetlands at its Dec. 2 meeting.

High Street Realty Trust hopes to build eight frontage lots on High Street. Development would entail building on wetlands and a buffer zone (which absorbs water and prevents flooding) and increasing the width of High Street by four to six feet.

A drainage system would lead into the nearby stream. Commission chairman Jerry Cura raised concerns about "the quality and quantity of water going into the stream" after the development.

Salt, grease, oil, fertilizer and sediment associated with residential areas would pollute the stream, Cura said. Flooding and erosion, which would devalue the aestethics of the land, also concerned the commission.

The commission will investigate the laws governing use of wetlands and will visit the site. According to the commission, laws may already exist to protect wetlands from development.

The commission also discussed recent oil contamination of the Aberjona River. A leak from an underground drum of heating oil near the post office was discovered in November. The leak has been contaminating the river.

According to a planner the river "smells like if someone lit a match it would blow up."

Booms have been placed to contain the oil. However, two weeks after the discovery, the leaky tank had not been removed. Suspected tanks are being tested.

The owner of the leaky drum will be financially responsible for removal. Any drums removed which are not leaking would be at the town's expense. Thus, the town is hesitating to remove any drums until the leaky tank can be verified, according to commission members.

The conservation commission meets of 7:30 p.m. the second and fourth Tuesday of every month, except December, at town hall. All meetings are open to the public. Members are chairman Jerry Cura, Secretary Betty Vanderbilt, Dan Doenges, Susan Levine Ann Matarese, Susie Saarinen and John Shawcross. Elaine Vreeland is the newly hired part-time conservation administrator.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

The Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors

LENDER'S APPRAISAL

Many sellers think that the price of their home is determined solely by what they're willing to accept and what the buyer is willing to pay. There's one more variable, however, that can complicate the sale of a home—the lender's appraisal.

To protect the interest of their investors, the mortgage lender hires an appraiser to give an independent objective evaluation of what the property is worth. If the appraised value is lower than the selling price, the seller will be glad that they've enlisted the service of a professional Realtor! The agent will then give the appraiser detailed information about other homes in the neighborhood which have recently sold that support the price of the seller's home. An appeal to the appraiser sometimes works, but if it doesn't, some delicate negotiations will follow. Both the seller and the buyer may have to make some concessions to make the transaction work. The bank may ask the buyers to increase their down payment, or they may ask the sellers for a reduction in price.

The professionals at Bixby & Porter Company Realtors can help minimize the pitfalls of buying or selling property. Call us at 729-7000, or stop by our offices at 33 Thompson St., Winchester.

Delightful family home with 2 room first floor bedroom suite, study, music room, fireplaced livingroom, charming dining room, modern family kitchen & bath, deck, plus three second floor bedrooms and a bath. A great buy at $329,900.

Chamber lights open holiday

"The holiday season is officially underway in Winchester and the warmth and spirit that was evident last Thursday evening at the tree lighting ceremony hopefully will continue throughout the entire year," said Cathy Alexander executive director of the Winchester Chamber of Commerce.

It was a beautiful example of why Winchester is such a desirable place to live, work and visit," she said.

This is the sixth year the chamber has assumed the responsibility for the organization and fund-raising of lighting and decorating our community for the holiday season.

"We rely entirely on the generosity of local clubs, residents and business people. Please help us continue to light up Winchester and join with the following who have contributed: Bayberry Shoe, Calista's Apparel, Cradock Apothecary, Dover Grille, Evana, Eyelook Optical, Fortnightly Women's Group, Jervey Family, Dr. and Mrs. G. Kaufmann, Pat Kemple, J. J. Loftus Co., Judie Muggia, Murray and Quill, My Favorite Place, Nelson's Bakery, T. Michaels, Temptations, Teresa's Fashions, Topsy Turvy, Carolyn Ward, Winchester Estates Garden Club, Winchester Hospital, Winchester Savings Bank, F. W. Woolworth Co.," she said.

Contact the Chamber office to enter a home or business in the special lighting decorating contest.

Selectmen in legal mire on sport honor

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester selectmen want to honor the high school's three state championship athletic teams, but they're sure how or if at least proposal is legal.

Selectmen discussed the issue hazily Monday night, referring to informal discussions between them after the football team won the Super Bowl Saturday.

Chairman Wade Welch said a plan he thought to be in place at 5 p.m. had somehow been "sandbagged" by 7 p.m. He did not say what the plan is.

During the regular meeting, selectman Judie Muggia proposed a subcommittee to "create a vehicle" by which selectmen could recognize outstanding accomplishments of townspeople in many areas. She said the vehicle should be "funded" at future town meetings.

Later, Muggia said her proposal was designed also to cut short discussion of the problem selectmen faced Monday.

Welch said he favored awards, not a subcommittee.

Town manager Chad Maurer hinted that money is the problem. "It's appropriate for the town to express appreciation," he said, "but it has to be within the fiscal and legal restraints with which we operate."

"The teams earned this. They've done more for Winchester than for themselves," selectman Mark Lombardi said.

Lombardi said the town should "take a chance.

"We spend more money to study where people park, how to fertilize playfields and why the high school field sinks," he said. "Winchester might win the Super Bowl only once in our lifetimes. Once in a while, we have to take a chance.

"If the town can't afford to do this, it ought to just fold up and we'll all go back to Chelsea," he said.

Selectman Frank Sopper asked what the audience wondered. "What are we talking about here? How much money?"

Nobody answered. "The problem is that what I'd like to do may not be do-able," Welch said. "But I want to recognize these three teams, right to the limit of what I'm able to do legally."

Later, after official adjournment of the meeting, selectmen continued their discussion. They decided to give official recognition, in some form, next week.

It was apparent, especially from remarks by Welch, that no money is available in a designated account for such expenditures. Welch said funds are often moved from one account to another as needed and objected to someone's reluctance to make a transfer now.

CHRISTMAS
A Whole Season Under One Roof

At Mahoney's, Christmas begins in November.

That's when we first see that look of wide-eyed wonder from kids exploring our huge selection of Christmas greenery. They're just not used to walking through a forest of Christmas trees.

More than a few parents have been overwhelmed themselves.

We have thousands of Christmas trees. Freshly cut Scotch pines, Douglas firs, and Balsam firs. Every size. Every price.

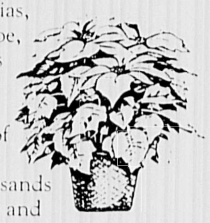

Whether you need just the right tree for a small apartment or a majestic thirty footer, Mahoney's will have the special tree you're looking for.

All are lush, high quality evergreens that will retain their handsome appearance and familiar fragrance well into the new year.

And if you need to rearrange a few of the gifts you're hiding in the car to make room for the tree, we'll be happy to distract the kids. We can introduce them to Santa Claus and show them the live animals that inhabit our petting farm.

At Mahoney's we've made shopping for the tree an anticipated tradition instead of an annual chore.

Indoors we have every other type of traditional Christmas greenery—including over 30 greenhouses of red, white and pink poinsettias, holly, mistletoe, and countless Balsam wreaths.

Plus miles of tinsel and garland, thousands of shiny silver and gold balls, and Christmas lights of every description.

Mahoney's. A whole season under one roof. It's enough to put a twinkle in anybody's eye.

Daisies learn the joys of being a Girl Scout

By JANINE DIGIOVANNI

Seventy-five years ago an Englishwoman named Juliette Gordon Lowe held the first Girl Scout meeting in her Savannah, Ga., home.

Since that first meeting, the Girl Scouts of America have grown to accommodate nearly 3,000,000 members.

This year, five kindergarten students at St. Mary's have joined their ranks.

Until 1984, Girl Scout hopefuls had to wait until they were first graders to participate. Now kindergarten students can become part of the Daisy group.

Daisy, which was Gordon Lowe's nickname, started this September in Winchester by Denise Gentile. Her five-year-old daughter, Tiffany, is part of the group.

Gentile purchased the uniforms herself to be passed on to next year's group. She became leader of the group because she saw it as a chance for younger students to learn to work with each other.

Although the Daisy group is more craft related and less structured than Brownies or Girl Scouts, members also work towards badges.

"Recently we had an open house at St. Mary's," Gentile says, "The group baked cookies. They were so excited to think they were contributing. They're very proud to be a part of something.

"There aren't any specific badges at this level," she adds, "But we try to work toward something. The kids like to feel they're doing the same thing older girls are doing."

Gentile says Daisies will make Christmas cards for senior citizens as part of their work to earn community service badges.

Daisies participate in the Girl Scout Promise, which "they take very seriously," Gentile says.

"We had an initiation in the beginning of the year. We made Daisy headbands and I read them the Girl Scout promise and explained its importance."

She says the group gives children a chance to interact at a younger age.

"They learn to share," she says. 'They treat each other like sisters."

So far this year, the group has had two baking projects.

"They work so well together," Gentile says, laughing. "They seem more mature than 5-year-olds, at times."

Gentile, who also worked with her nephew's Boy Scout troop when she was a teenager, says"I enjoy kids, and I believe keeping busy, especially with something as wholesome as Girl Scouts, is a good thing."

She believes most of the group will become Brownies.

Christine Glasheen looks up from cutting a reindeer out of construction paper. "I like being a Daisy," she says, "because we get to make things."

Noel DeCarlo recites the Girl Scout pledge while solemnly holding up three fingers in the Girl Scout sign.

Rebekka Grater wears a headband with a Daisy insignia. "Sometimes we bake things," she adds.

Tiffany Gentile has the best reason of all:

"We make gingerbread cookies and we give things to people."

More than 300 people attend open house

Gov. Michael Dukakis sent his personal congragations to Sherman and Margolis Associates for the official opening in Winchester.

Dukakis said that "I am sure the Town of Winchester is grateful to have such a fine new facility to help adolescents cope with the pressures of drugs and alcohol abuse. My administration is working hard to control substance abuse among our youth and I appreciate all the additional help in the battle."

The Nov. 23 open house attracted more than 300 people and included local educators, medical and health professionals, and clergy people.

Howard Sherman and David Margolis expressed appreciation for the warm welcome.

Sherman and Margolis Associates provide comprehensive, professional counseling for children, teenagers and their families both days and evenings and can be reached at 165 Washington St., 729-2070.

Lincoln School philosophy wins board applause

By JANINE DIGIOVANNI

The Winchester school committee approved the "Lincoln School Philosophy" in a unanimous vote Tuesday.

"It is with pride and excitement that the Lincoln School committee comes to you this evening," said Sally Walter, chairperson of the philosphy committee.

The statement of educational philosophy and objectives were developed "to meet the needs of the students and the community served by the school."

Members of the committee included third grade teacher Catherine Sullivan, kindergarten teachers Maureen McWilliams and Betsy Krystl and Lincoln school parent and school board member Donna Brandt Landry.

The philosophy was created as part of the accredidation process that will begin in the spring of 1988.

"We got together, shared our ideas, brought them to the staff, then sat down and wrote it," Walters said.

The philosophy and objectives were unanimously approved and accepted. "They literally have drawn a standing ovation from parents," a committee member said.

"Every time I meet a parent in the hall, they express interest in the program," Joanne Benton, instructional specialist at Lincoln School said.

The philosophy met with only one recommendation for change, that from school committee member Edward O'Connell, who felt the term "whole individuals" in reference to children was unnecessary.

"The word whole stems from the holistic approach," Walters said.

An excerpt from the philsosphy says: "Lincoln school looks upon its children as whole individuals. Learning is valued as life committment. Therefore the community pledges to support the children's educational, emotional, and physical well-being in all phases of their school experience.

"The environment supports risk-taking, dignifies each learner's attempts, and encourages all to be active participants in the learning process."

The objectives consider community, inviting parents, staff and children to participate in school activities and demonstrating that open communication is valued; individual differences, to enhance awareness and appreciation for multicultural differences and sensitize children to the special needs of others; academic, to base instruction on current research and integrate subject areas as well as promoting opportunites for students to acquire life skills.

Social/ emotional objectives provide avenues for peer interaction, encourage respect for understanding of social rules and for each other, to empower children to cope with personal conflicts through peer counseling and to instill confidence in self-direction, decision making and personal achievement.

Physical objectives include emphasis on motor skills as a developmental focus of the curriculum, sensitivity to general health and an environment which is safe and accessible.

Principal Susan Villani complimented the program, saying "What is written is something that students as well as parents will be able to understand. The committee deserves double credit."

Superintendent Charles Mitsakos added, "I'd like to share the kudos. I'm delighted and touched to see that kind of an emphasis."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Selectmen, not consortium won't budge

To the Editor:

We are writing in response to an article appearing in the Nov. 13 edition of The Winchester Star, entitled, "Town won't benefit from hospital program."

As you know, the article discussed the Advanced Life Support or Paramedic Project, co-sponsored by the North Suburban Emergency Medical Consortium, a group of three Hospitals, including Winchester Hospital, Choate-Symmes Hospital, and the Lahey Clinic. These three hospitals, in following both a regional and national trend in improving emergency, prehospital care, will provide highly trained, paramedic services to acutely ill or injured patients in our service area. Our program became operational two weeks ago.

In the fourth paragraph of your article you state that the reason the Winchester board of selectmen voted against participation was that "in part because representatives of the organization (the Consortium) have not responded to their (the board of selectmen) requests to visit a selectmen's meeting."

This statement is not only factually incorrect, but it unfairly misrepresents our diligent and persistent efforts over the last several years to convince the board of selectmen to reconsider their initial decision not to participate in the program.

First, over a year ago the program was presented to the board of selectmen and was not endorsed. Since then, representatives of the consortium have met with the prior chairman of the board of selectmen and the town manager to answer additional questions regarding the project; as recently as several months ago, as a result of our initiative and reinvitation, a representative of the board and the town manager met with members of the Consortium at Winchester Hospital where other concerns were discussed.

Last, the consortium has not received any "request" from the board of selectmen, either formally or informally, for any additional information or to attend a selectmen's meeting.

Furthermore, we have made our availability absolutely clear to the board and remain interested in participating in any forum necessary to clarify the role or functioning of the program.

In short, it is inappropriate to blame the consortium for "not responding to their requests" to visit a selectmen's meeting" particularly when none had been offered (except that noted above), when the board had consistently failed to endorse the program, and when all of us in the consortium had been, and remain available, on any notice, to discuss the project.

We are disappointed in The Winchester Star for providing the residents of Winchester with incorrect and misleading information and we remain disappointed in the board of selectmen for failing to provide an important improvement in prehospital, emergency care.

Unfortunately, your headline, "Town won't benefit from hospital program," is true, unless the board of selectmen reconsiders their prior position and elects to participate, just as the governing boards of our nine other surrounding communities have done, and whose residents now benefit from our efforts over the last six years.

We urge the board of selectmen to reconsider their initial position and participate in the program, to the benefit of the community, or to explain why a program felt to represent an improvement in care by nine out of ten of our surrounding communities fails to interest the Governing Board of the Town of Winchester.

Sincerely,

Save, don't sell the Woburn Loop

TO THE EDITOR:

If logic has anything to do with solving the problem of the Woburn Loop, the problem solves itself: there is no problem!

No part of the property should be sold. Title, in its entirety, must remain in the town.

The parts under demand should be leased, not sold, on a short-term, renewable basis.

If, then, a certain business, office building or other rental or industrial concern finds itself in need of additional space for parking (a suitable "passive" use, certainly), the town can then lease it the desired space at a nominal price, say $1 per square foot per annum.

The town now has $110,000 invested in this property. Interest on such a sum for the town is probably $6,000 or $7,000 per annum.

If only two or three concerns should want suich parking spaces, each with 1,000 feet or more, the whole project will pay for itself.

And if more demand develops, it could show a considerable profit.

Furthermore, the cost implementing a rental plan would be negligible — no title searches, no surveying charges, no legal fees, no real estate commissions, no neighborhood quarrels or litigation. None of these whatsoever.

And, against the possibility of urgent future needs, the title remains inviolate.

Think about it! Simpler, cheaper, more flexible — better all around.

Democrats proud of Casey effort

To the Editor:

The Winchester Democratic Town Committe is proud to have supported Paul Casey in his campaign for the state legislature. His efforts in going door to door in both communites, in addressing serious issues that are often swept under the rug, and thus serving the public, even as he sought public office, are applauded by the committee.

We congratulate Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh for his re-election and will look to him for legislative leadership during the next two years.

We also congratulate those Democrats in Massachusetts and throughout the country who were elected to public office, demonstrating a public will for change.

Sincerely,
William Wells, Chairman
Winchester Democratic Town Committee

Smokers beware: Your days may be numbered

By TERRY MAROTTA

Professor Thomas Schelling, director of the Kennedy School's Institute for the Study of Smoking Behavior and Policy, says that smoking as a phenomenon will have disappeared entirely by the year 2036.

I think he's right: to me his statement has the ring of true prophecy.

Watching a smoker today is like watching the Dodo waddle to the extinction's brink.

Wherever you look, smokers are under seige. You can't smoke in elevators anymore, or in operating rooms, in bakeries or in movie theatres. You can't even smoke on the job in some places, on account of the potential for soiling the pink and innocent lungs of the person beside you.

Like most people over 30, I grew up in an era when everyone smoked; when folks set out cigarettes as well as salted nuts if company was coming.

In family photos and home movies, there are cigarettes in everyone's hands - even in the wedding pictures. It looks funny to us now, but then it was the norm.

Back in the real old days, of course, smoking took effort. You had to haul out the papers, haul out the tobacco and roll your own. It took some doing and it made a mess.

When ready-made cigarettes came along, everything changed.

People began smoking with unprecedented ease, cigarette after cigarette. They could light up without looking, practically; they could light up in their sleep.

And light up they did.

Tobacco growers pitched smoking as a cool thing to do; a manly thing, if you were a man; a liberated thing, if you were a woman.

Life Magazine ran a feature in 1939 reporting on the activities of one Florence Linden, who toured the country on the Philip Morris payroll, ostensibly lecturing to women on the etiquette of smoking. In truth she was teaching them how.

We haven't seen cigarette ads on the tube in a long time now, but once there were so much smoking on TV you could get wheezy just watching.

Edward R. Murrow patron saint of electronic journalism, smoked madly, while reading the news.

As for the movies, they were blue with romantic puffings and exhalations.

The starlets, red lips clamped around their smokes, inclined their heads artfully downward to get lights from attentive and deferential leading men.

The men themselves smoked to show toughness, or resolve, pensivenes or mute proof that no dame could break THEIR hearts. You have to say that for the cigarette: it made a wonderful prop.

Now, of course, everything's changed. A scant ten years ago, you went to a party 100% sure you'd come home reeking of tobacco.

Today at such a gathering, one person in twenty lights up - if he's got the nerve; if small tasteful signs posted round the room don't forbid him.

I tried smoking at the age of 14, down by the lake at summer camp, and knew for the first and last time how it felt to invite a gritty cloud inside my head. I was lucky; I never had to quit.

I have relatives that aren't so lucky.

They smoke in the shower; they smoke on skis, blindly puffing away as they zoom 50 miles an hour down a mountain. When these folks try to quit, it'll be serious business.

My mother started smoking in the Jazz Age and smoked clear on up to the summer of the Watergate hearings. She was sick one week that August and confined to her bed.

On a small portable TV brought in to her room for the purpose, she gathered, together with Sam Ervin, every scintilla of evidence against the man she'd been mentally impeaching since the early 50's.

"He's disgusting!", she finally hissed to herself in the empty room. Then, looking down at the cigarette clenched in her hand, she added "You're disgusting too!", stubbed the thing out and has never smoked again or wanted to.

Smoking will end for all of us before long, Mom's way or some other way, if Professor Schelling is correct.

And centuries hence, the anthropologists will scratch their heads over the whole peculiar custom.

BEACON HILL

The House. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 7 roll calls from the week of December 1-5. Roll calls from late sessions will be included in next week's report.

Drunk Driving(H 6114)- House 132-0, gave near final approval and sent to the Senate a version of the bill imposing tougher penalties on drunk drivers. Key provisions include an automatic 60 day license suspension for anyone who registers a blood alcohol level of .10 or higher; an increase from 90 to 150 days the license suspension period for a motorist who refuses to take a Breathalyzer test; and increased penalties for repeat offenders. Supporters said the bill is a major step toward solving the drunk driving problem.

A Yea vote is for the bill.

Represenative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

License(H 6114)- House 102-36, rejected an amendment allowing motorists who refuse to take a Breathalyzer test and have their licenses suspended for 150 days, to get their licenses back immediately if they are found innocent within 150 days.

Amendment supporters said this simply protects the innocent.

Opponents said anyone found innocent can already appeal to the Registry to have a license returned.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Hardship(H 6114)- House 71-68, first approved, then 68-68 rejected an amendment allowing the Registrar to re-issue limited hardship licenses to second offenders if the first offense occurred at least four years earlier, if neither offense caused personal injury, death or property damage and if the offender can prove his or her job requires use of an automobile.

Amendment supporters said this simply makes the law flexible, with many safeguards, in extreme hardship cases.

Opponents said it substantially weakens the new law.

Both roll calls are listed.

On both roll calls, a Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no on both roll calls.

Breathalyzer(H 6114)- House 99-38, rejected an amendment making the fact that someone refused to take a Breathalyzer test admissable in court.

Amendment supporters said this proposal will strengthen the bill.

Opponents said the amendment would set a bad precedent.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

First Offenders(H 6114)- House 126-10, rejected an amendment imposing a minimum 30 day jail sentence for first offenders.

Amendment supporters said this is the only way to get tough with drunk drivers.

Opponents said the amendment goes too far and is too severe.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Judicial Conduct(H 6503)- House 83-55, gave near final approval and sent to the Senate a bill making several changes in procedures for the Commission on Judicial Conduct which oversees the conduct of the state's 300 judges.

Under the bill, the panel would no longer have to delay its investigations for 30 days and the public would be allowed access to the panel's proceedings if the panel finds that probable cause exists and has filed formal charges against a judge.

Supporters, noting currently proceedings are all confidential, said the changes will make judges more accountable.

Opponents said the changes are unfair and will result in a circus atmosphere and witch hunts.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Planning board hears plan for Forest Glen Estates

By MARGARET ROLL
League of Women voters Observer Cores

A public hearing to discuss Forest Glen Estates was conducted by the planning board Monday night.

Robert M. Gill presented a 25-lot subdivision to be constructed between Bellview and Forest Streets near the Stoneham line. The developer has been working with the conservation commission and a hydrolic study of the land has been completed.

Because of difficult terrain, much cutting and filling will be necessary. Lots will be of varying size and no waivers or variances will be needed. A 26-foot road will be constructed and will connect to both Bellview and Forest Streets.

Concerns expressed by neighbors included loss of water pressure, loss of buffer from noise and Route 93, safety, blasting, increased traffic and loss of open land.

Winchester Woods

Willie Scalarsic came before the board to discuss the placement of the buildings for the Winchester Woods development. On the former Hudson Industries property near Leonard Pond.

The plan calls for 72 units and the planning board discussed further suggestions for placement of buildings on the site.

Executive Session

Town manager Chad Maurer met with the board in executive session to discuss the property on Mt. Vernon Street near the Converse Place professional building.

The town has negotiated with the owner in an attempt to prevent development of the "green space" there.

Plan Endorsement

The planning board discussed a plan submitted Monday night in behalf of Mrs. King of Herrick Road. She requests that an additional lot be carved out on an existing residential lot. The plan shows a dog leg and strangely shaped lot.

The board made suggestions how the lot lines could be changed to provide the best land use for the two lots.

Residents object to proposed subdivision off Forest Street

By MARK NADEAU

Residents voiced objections to a proposed subivision at Monday night's planning board hearing.

The subdivision, known as "Forest Glen Estates," would span from the southerly side of Forest Street to the northeasterly portion of Bellevue Avenue. There would be 25 lots.

One Bellevue Avenue resident objected to the inlet that would lead on to her street, claiming it would increase traffic in the quiet neighborhood. Another questioned why there was an inlet at all instead of a cul-de-sac, as with other subdivisions within Winchester.

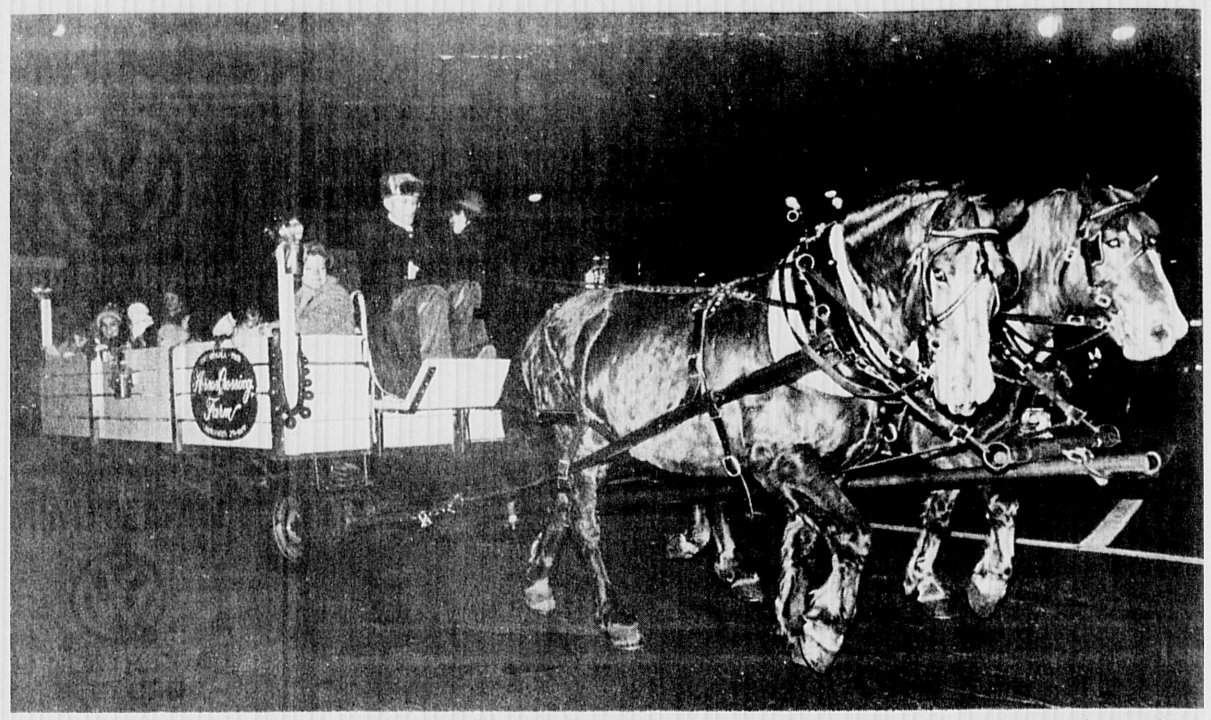

Robert Gill, who presented the developer's plans at the start of the hearing, said it would be more likely that Bellevue residents would pass through the subdivision than vice-versa due to the convenience of the subdivisional road leading to Forest Street.

The planning board will weigh concerns of the residents before voting.

Another resident was concerned with water pressure. He was worried his already low pressure would diminish further.

However, town engineer John Ciarcia said developers would use the "loop system" of water distribution thereby increasing the water pressure for all residents within the area.

One resident was concerned with landscaping. Gill said there will be a minimal tree removal and sand-blasting due to high costs of these procedures.

SENIOR NEWS

Jenks Senior Center donor list continues to grow

Winchester seniors are grateful to the donors for their generosity in continuning to keep checks coming for the expansion of the Jenks Senior Center. There still remains a substantial shortfall and every donation is helpful in reaching the established goal. The following have recently added to the fund:

Duila C. and Mario A. Alfano, Irene and Owen Caldwell, Donald R. Ellis, Allan J. Eyden, Anna M. Gallelo, Irma Ganchi, Anthony and Michelina Gigliotte;

Margaret L. Hardcastle, Mary J. King, Randolph L. Kazazian, Jr. and Virginia M., Emily W. and F. Sheppard Holt, Norman E. Keene, Margaret Labedz, Charles Lilley;

Alice T. Mac Lellan, Dr. Edward F. McCarthy Jr., Samuel Penney, Olga S. and Domenic J. Percoco, Maria Perritano and Joseph Sr.;

Evelyn Piazza, Angelina R. and Thomas P. Raftis, Elizabeth B. Rynee, Margot and Robert Semonian, Edward S. and Eileen Shanley, Diana and Peter Svahn, Walter Vargas and Paul J. and Jane D. Whitney.

Appreciation is extended to these donors. With the end of the year at hand, others who have not made their donations may do so and deduct the contribution from their 1986 income tax.

Creative use of Leisure

Everyone has leisure moments, and some find more time than others to fill the hours with creative activities. We have seen evidence of great creativity among seniors. A hobby show is planned by the education committee of the Winchester seniors association from 1 to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 7, in the meeting room.

Everyone who has a hobby is invited to display it at the Jenks Senior Center, being present to answer questions and motivate visitors to detour down the inviting side roads of fun and enjoyment. There are slumbering talents that wait for just such a stimulus.

The making of something, the collecting of something, the discovering of something, the creating of something, and the doing of something all have limitless possibilities. The following are only a few hobbies followed by seniors: woodworking, wood-carving, painting, ceramics, sculpturing, weaving, needlework, cooking, enameling, antique refinishing, basketry, mineralogy, rocks and shell collections, buttons, salt and pepper shaker collections, thimbles of all kinds, matchbook covers, wildflower collections, scrapbook fillers, poems and stories, hooked rugs, papier-mache articles, doll making, and dozens of other things. All will be of interest to those who come to view the exhibits.

What will you do to help make this first hobby show a real success? Whatever your special talents and interests are, you reflect the fact that your life is enriched by pursuing a hobby. Please call 721-7136, the Jenks Senior Center Reception Desk to tell what you plan to exhibit Jan. 7.

Doll show postponed

Inclement weather Dec. 3 prompted cancellation of the program pertaining to dolls and doll making. The show is postponed to 10:30 a.m. Friday, Jan. 16, with the same presenters, Diane Dieter and Jane Boorman.

Dieter has collected over 350 dolls during the past 13 years. Jane Boorman will demonstrate doll construction from molds to finished models. A discussion will follow.

The public is invited. Refreshments will be served. Sign up at the Jenks Senior Center Reception Desk if you plan to attend to give the committee a chance to provide adequate refreshments. Call 721-7136.

Volunteers needed at the desk

Personal illness, family problems and winters in southern climes have contributed to a diminished number of desk volunteers. Ruth Ayres chairperson of the information/referral committee, sends an S.O.S. for more people to fill the vacancies of this important "hub of the Jenks wheel!" Please leave word for her at the Jenks Senior Center reception desk (721-7136) if you are willing to devote some time to handling the relations with the public by phone or personal contacts.

Receptionists answer questions about activities, serve as hostesses and match ride requests with volunteer senior drivers of the transportation committee.

They serve from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. or from 1 to 4 p.m. once a week, biweekly, or in accordance with the slot that is open.

Receptionists are public relations agents for the Center and the work is personally rewarding. It is hoped a number of people will serve on this committee. An orientation period provides necessary knowledge.

Computer program set Friday

At 10:30 a.m., Friday Dec. 12, Jack McCarthy will present a factual program about computers, using layman's language. He will stress early development of computers, the present "state-of-the-art" and future expectations. Since we are living in a computerized world, it is important to have some knowledge about the value of this form of communication. McCarthy's background includes detailed work with computers. The public is invited.

Christmas party

The Winchester seniors association will hold a short quarterly meeting at the Jenks Senior Center at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday Dec. 17, followed by the annual Christmas party. The program is under the direction of Helen Murphy, who will present the popular Dick Brogna, band leader for Saturday night dances at the center.

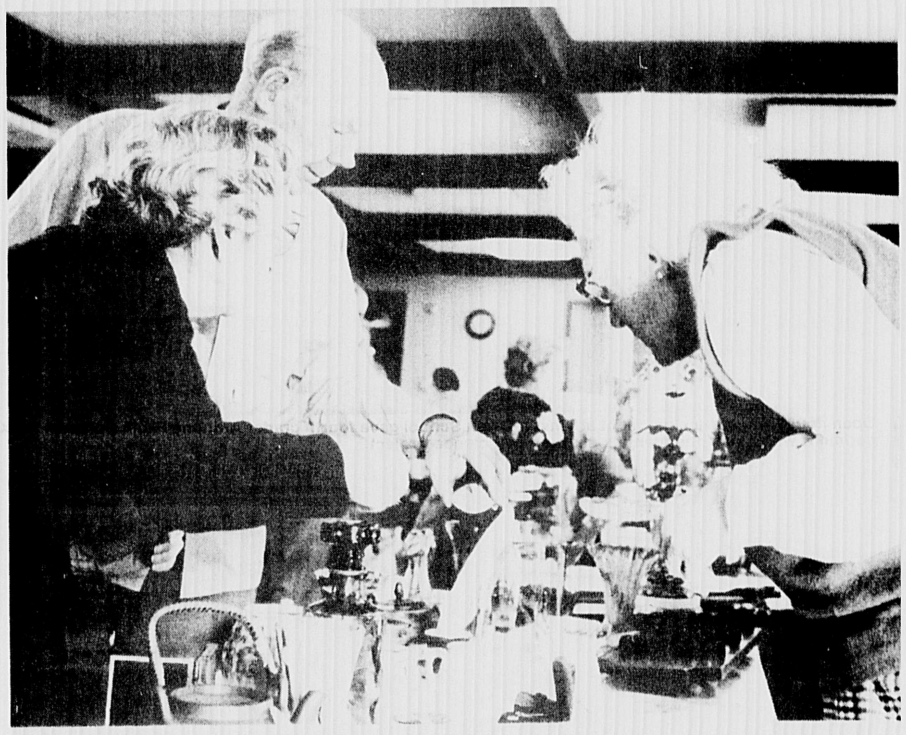

The Jenks Senior Center Glee Club, under the leadership of Robert Mulford, is developing a new repertoire for visits to the Winchester Nursing Center, the Mt. Vernon House, and the Palmer Street Housing, Mary Murphy Apartments. Some of this program will be shared at the Christmas party with a sing-a-long. It is a satisfying experience for both songsters and listeners, especially at this season when joy abounds.

Refreshments will be prepared by Helen Hodgdon, expert food coordinator at the center, with the help of her able assistants. Helen's work always makes any occasion a festive one. When Santa Claus arrives in full dress and whiskers, gifts will be distributed

The third annual New Year's party, generously sponsored by Ann Blackham, is scheduled at the Jenks Senior Center from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. No one needs to be alone, provided reservations are made as soon as possible. Accommodations are limited in view of the delicious buffet prepared by Helen Hodgdon and space necessary for dancing.

Jeanette Baird is in charge of the program, presenting some special "live" entertainment. Champagne will be served at midnight. Make reservations immediately.

Sachemettes seek victories

By BRENDAN FARRINGTON

The Winchester girls basketball team, coming off a 4-15 record, is looking to improve its standing in a tough Middlesex League, and coach Joe DiSarcina sees no reason it shouldn't.

"I think we will be a better team," said DiSarcina, stressing that the Sachemettes will be better balanced this year and will work as a whole instead of relying on one or two players.

The Sachemettes lost five seniors to graduation, but several key players, including top scorers Maureen Dokas and Meghan Guarnotta, are returning this year.

The Sachemettes may have had a disappointing season last year, but they managed to win three of their last five games, which is not an easy feat when sitting at the bottom of the league with a 1-13 record.

"We played a lot of underclassmen at the end of the year and they did a fairly respectable job," DiSarcina said.

Without the pressure of possible post-season play, the coach was able to play the underclassmen with success, making this year's team stronger and more experienced.

The Sachemettes still face big challenges in the upcoming season. DiSarcina pointed out that the Middlesex League provides stiff competition in basketball.

"The Burlingtons, the Wakefields, the Lexingtons, the Belmonts are always very strong," he said.

The Sachemettes start their season next Tuesday at Wakefield, whom DiSarcina said is the preseason pick as the top team in the league. Opening against one of the best is hard, but could work out to Winchester's advantage if it can catch Wakefield while still fresh.

Whatever Tuesday's outcome, the Sachemettes' season should be brighter than last winter. The team has a great attitude, and has been looking good in pre-season practice.

Sachem quintet looks to future

By BRENDAN FARRINGTON

The Winchester boys basketball team hopes to repeat its success of last winter as it gets ready to start the season next Tuesday at home against Wakefield.

Last winter the Sachems finished in second place in the Middlesex League before losing to West Roxbury in the post-season.

This year's team has seen some changes, but still looks strong for this season's competition.

The Sachems lost their two leading scorers to graduation and are working with a new coach, but don't let that get your hopes down.

The Sachems look strong and proved it by taking revenge on West Roxbury with a 71-64 victory in their first pre-season scrimmage Tuesday night.

Senior Chris Verhaegen, the scoring leader among last year's returning players, came out strong against West Roxbury and looks to be a Sachem stand-out in the season.

The Sachems also had good performances in the scrimmage from Eric Emeneau, Dan Meserve and Mike Haddad. Coach Mike Boyages said the team is looking good as a whole.

Boyages is coaching the Sachems for the first time, but it isn't his first experience with the team. He coached against them at Stoneham last year and has worked with many of the players in a summer league.

Boyages said the team has been looking good in practice, even though the players just started working together as a unit due to the absence of several football players participating in last weekend's Super Bowl.

"I couldn't ask for a better attitude," the coach said.

The Sachems will get a good test Tuesday against Wakefield because the Warriors are expected to be top contenders in the Middlesex League.

Winchester should be successful again this year and will definitely not be a disappointment. Look for them to have an exciting season, and hopefully a longer post-season.

Ricciardellis mean winning tennis at Middlebury College

Ricciardelli, a name synonymous with winning women's tennis at Middlebury College for the past four years, will continue to supply able leadership to the team next year as the oldest sister, Patti, passes on the co-captaincy of the squad to younger sister Paula, a junior.

The daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Louis Ricciardelli of 12 Foxcroft Rd., they have combined to help the Panthers compile four straight winning seasons for an overall record of 29-10-0. Both contributed valuable points in singles and doubles play during Middlebury's outstanding 8-2 record this year.

Patti, who co-captained the 1986 team with Bess Cromwell of Baltimore, has transferred the reigns of leadership to sister Paula recently elected along with Amy Sheldon of Summit, N.J., to head the Panther netwomen next year.

Patti, the graduating sister, posted a perfect 6-0 record in singles play this year. She compiled an impressive three-year career record of 24-13 at Middlebury.

Paula did nearly as well, registering a solid 6-1 mark in singles play.

Winchester icemen can only improve — and likely will

By BRENDAN FARRINGTON

The Winchester Sachems hockey team has nowhere to go but up after last year's winless season, but don't expect them to be among the top teams of the Middlesex League.

The Sachems do show improvement, but the team is young and has a long way to go in a league of strong teams. Winchester does, however, have one key factor this year that was missing last winter: attitude.

"The attitude is definitly on an upbeat," coach Mike Whyte said, "it's been super."

He attributes the change to the Sachems' new players and the ability of the returning players to put the past behind them.

Winchester lost several players over the year, but no big standouts. The Sachems still have last year's leading scorer, Greg Winn, on their roster and he is expected to be a big offensive threat this year.

Junior Jim McInerney will be in goal this winter and Whyte says he's looking sharp.

"He's ready, and that's half the battle. Good teams go for the goalie, and we have that," Whyte said.

Winchester tied its first exhibition game, 2-2, against Salem last Sunday, which has given the team hope of putting last year's 0-18 record far behind.

The Sachems start their regular season at 6 p.m. next Wednesday

Senior tri-captains Dokas, Guarnotta and Jeannie Cullen have been showing strong leadership in preparing their teammates for the season and are expected to be strong forces on the court this winter.

The Sachemettes may not be destined to be champions this year, but they have the spirit and improvement needed to make this season a success.

The Winchester Star

LETTERS

DeMarco thanks all who helped

TO THE EDITOR:

It is with great regret that I must submit my resignation as sports writer for Winchester High School. After the football team's Super Bowl victory Saturday, I feel my goals have been achieved and my purpose has been served. The time has now come to move on.

I would like to thank the young people of Winchester High School, who over the years, have greatly enriched my life. I did not write for the parents, coaches or the paper itself, but for the kids. Their opinion was the only one that mattered to me.

I can only hope that those athletes that I've known will look back and say that I was a positive influence in their lives.

It has been a great pleasure to call the young men and women of Winchester High School my friends.

Aubusson
The Aubusson design was created by French nuns in the 16th century. Characterized by the arabesque border surrounding an open field with a medallion in the center, this design was first incorporated into the flat-weave tapestries woven by the nuns. Today the Aubusson rug is made in India of 100% wool pile gently colored then handknotted and carved. The Aubusson rug... fine art for your home at affordable prices.

The Winchester Star
WINCHESTER STAR

He's visited more Winchester homes than Santa Claus

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Ralph Macaulay has visited more Winchester homes than Santa Claus.

He's neither a "meter reader" nor a bill collector nor even a politician. Macaulay is a vacuum cleaner salesman.

He sells door-to-door.

"Young people don't like to do that any more," he says sadly. "But I still do it, even though I'm semi-retired."

Though he has never lived in Winchester, Macaulay has spent 90 percent of his time here for the past 40 years. He's no stranger.

Since 1946, Macaulay has knocked on every door in town several times, peddling vacuum cleaners for his own business, located in his home for most of those 40 years.

"I sold mostly in Winchester. Why? Because it has a lot of large homes with two or three vacuums," he says.

He opened a store in Melrose after about 20 years on the road. "After that long, people called me," he says.

But Macaulay didn't enjoy his cozy store long before he saw business slowly falling off. "You have to go door-to-door or you lose business," he says.

To supplement his own efforts, Macaulay hired college students to sell vacuums during the summer.

"Four of them went into the ministry. I guess it means that after you work for me, you turn out to be a saint," Macaulay says with a grin.

"After they work for the devil a while, people tend to see the light."

Clearly proud of those four men, Macaulay says one has been a missionary in Thailand for 28 years, one is pastor of a church in Maine and two are in divinity school.

Only later does he say one of them is his own son. Scott Macaulay, 25, studies at Andover-Newton Theological School.

Macaulay became a door-to-door vacuum cleaner salesman by accident. While working for an appliance store in Malden Square, the Medford native met an Italian man who had invented a new kind of mop.

Macaulay quit his job to sell the mop door-to-door. "My parents thought I was crazy," he says, "but I wanted my own business."

His timing was a bit off.

"I found that most of the younger people weren't buying mops in 1946; they were buying vacuum cleaners," Macaulay says. It was time for a new product line.

'After they work for the devil a while, people tend to see the light,' says Macauley.

In the post-war years, after Macaulay's own stint in the Army, vacuum cleaners were often sold on the weekly installment plan. Salesmen went door-to-door and collected a dollar or two per week.

"When a housewife had given me $20, I delivered the vacuum cleaner," he says. "Then I went back every week to collect the rest. In fact, I'll still sell vacuum cleaners that way."

A generation of baby boomers can remember Mom pretending not to be home when the vacuum cleaner man or the insurance man came by for his weekly dollar.

"I've always been trusting and most people are worthy of it," Macaulay says.

He also does repairs because he gains customers that way. "I talked to an 80-year-old lady the other day whose salesman told her that her vacuum's motor ran backwards," Macauley says. "Well, some motors run clockwise and some counterclockwise. But I knew the real story when she said the salesman wanted to sell her a new $600 vacuum.

"I fixed the old one for a $10 bill. Now I have a customer for life, including when the old machine really does need to be replaced.

Ralph R. Macaulay

Macaulay says cheating customers doesn't pay in the long run.

"You can sell $600 machines for a while, doing business that way. But you can't stay in business for 40 years," he says.

Not everything about the past 40 years has been wonderful.

"I used to work 80 hours a week. I'd be physically exhausted. I had lots of ambition but no sense," he says.

Door-to-door selling is no longer so popular, Macaulay says, in part because "the biggest change in the business is the number of ladies home during the day. Now nobody's home or a babysitter or housekeeper is the only one there."

In the post-war years, vacuum cleaners were often sold on the weekly installment plan.

Sales gimmicks have also changed.

"I used to have a weathervane sign on the roof of my car. They're illegal now but the sign swung around in the wind," he explains.

"I'd park right out here, in front of The Star. People would stop and tell me my sign was falling off.

"What did I do then? I told them the sign was okay. Oh, and I gave them a sales pitch," Macaulay smiles.

Now in semi-retirement, Macaulay has lots to keep him busy. He's active in Habitat for Humanity, a Christian organization which rehabilitates old homes for low-income people and sells them at no profit. Habitat international president David Rowe is also pastor of the First Baptist Church of Melrose, of which Macaulay is a member.

Macaulay is also a volunteer at New England Memorial Hospital, active in the Antique Theatre Organ Society and a founder of the North Suburban Hammond Organ Society.

"I enjoy life," Macaulay says simply.

All members of Macaulay's household have musical talent. He plays the violin and harmonica while his wife, Sylvia, is an organist.

Son Scott plays the organ and piano, daughter Katherine, 23, the trumpet, and son Bruce, 18, the baritone horn.

Macaulay also has five classic autos, including two 1972 Ford convertibles and a giant 1980 Cadillac.

Still going door-to-door part-time for the same business, even though he no longer owns it, Macaulay says his philosophy of life is simple.

"Work hard, enjoy life and try to have as good a nature as possible."

And keep the carpets clean.

Holiday programs

Lynch musical program Dec. 18

All Lynch School students will participate in a seasonal musical program Thursday evening, December 18. Lynch School families are cordially invited to attend.

Sing-a-long at Ambrose

At 11 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 23, Ambrose School will have a sing-a-long for all grades. This year's theme will be "Peace and World Fellowship" with a strong multi-cultural approach.

Ballet Theatre to present 'Nutcracker' on weekend

A Christmas tree that grows as audiences watch, giant mice battling life-size toy soldiers, a wooden nutcracker that comes to life as a prince, waltzing snowflakes, the Sugar Plum Fairy and international dancing sweets will be on stage at the Winchester High School auditorium when the Winchester Ballet Theatre presents its 6th annual production of "The Nutcracker," directed and choreographed by Darlene Wigton, Dec. 12 and 13.

The theater's full-length version of the traditional story ballet is created for all ages, from school children, who are delighted with the giant teddy bear and mechanical toys, through senior citizens who can relate to their contemporaries portraying Clara's grandparents as they dance at the Christmas party.

Men are particularly amused with the battle, in which toy soldiers and mean mice are played by men of the British 10th Regiment of Foot and the Massachusetts II Regiment, while women enjoy the lavish costumes of the formal 18th century court and other classical scenes.

The cast includes 36 men and women of varying professions, several of whom have studied dance extensively in the U.S. and England, who perform as an avocation, and selected teens who are serious students of ballet.

While many reside in the area, others come from more distant locations as Holbrook and Nashua, N.H., representing 20 different communities.

Performing for their third season with the W.B.T. are Winchester residents Amber Williamson and her father, Ronald Williamson. Amber, a freshman at Winchester High, dances as a Dew Drop Fairy and the classical Waltz of the Flowers, as well as other character roles.

Ronald Williamson plays the giant teddy bear that comes to life when the enchanted Christmas tree doubles its height.

The role of Clara, the teenage girl around whom the story is centered when she receives the enchanted Nutcracker as a gift, is danced by Darlene Wigton of Woburn, and the Nutcracker-Prince by Lincoln Clark III of Chelmsford.

Wigton and Clark along with David, Jeffry and Eric Workman all of Wakefield, founded the W.B.T. in 1979 and first presented "The Nutcracker" in Winchester in 1980.

Performance times are 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Dec. 12 and 13. Tickets are 8 p.m. at the door and $7 in advance. Tickets are on sale in Winchester at The Lucky Lady Boutique, O'Neil's Pharmacy and Bookends. For senior citizens' discount or other information, call 933-4976. Proceeds from refreshments and part of ticket sales will benefit Yvonne Brown's Winchester S.P.C.A. animal shelter project.

Children to give holiday music concert

A free concert of holiday music by Winchester children for Winchester children will take place at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 16, at the Unitarian Church.

The concert will feature the Training Choir of the highly regarded Treble Chorus of New England and Sharmane Simard on the Celtic folk harp. The public is invited and a reception will follow the performance.

The Treble Chorus is a professional group of young boys and girls, ages 8-16, singing a wide repertoire of classical music, both sacred and secular.

Winchester members of its Training Choir include: Sierra Callahan, daughter of Michael and Adrian Callahan of Bacon Street; Carrie Marotta, daughter of David and Terry Marotta of Ravenscroft Road; Diana Merritt, daughter of Ann Hathaway and Dennis Merritt of Highland Avenue; and Peter John Stoltzman, son of Richard and Lucy Stoltzman of Lincolnshire Way.

Local men in Arlington musical

Mike Jacobs and Dick Bradley of Winchester will appear in the musical "Ballroom" at the Arlington Friends of the Drama. The hit Broadway musical is an adaptation of Jerome Kass of his popular television script "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom." In addition to its deeply touching story, this production features many memorable melodies and plenty of ballroom dancing.

Performances are Fridays and Saturdays, Dec. 5-6, and Dec. 12-13 at 8:15 p.m. and Sundays, Dec. 7 and 14 at 7 p.m. at the Arlington Friends of the Drama, 22 Academy St., Arlington. Tickets are $7 for all performances.

NOTES FROM THE BLACKBOARD

Classroom research on elementary science

Under the direction of Susan Doubler, an Ambrose teacher currently on sabbatical, six Winchester teachers are participating in a project called "STAR" (Science Teaching Action Research).

The project, which originated in England will define effective science practice at fifth and sixth grade levels.

Doubler's work in Winchester and other Boston-area schools will be linked to that in 48 schools in England. Teachers involved will play a major role in interpreting the data to make science education more meaningful for elementary students.

Reye's syndrome alert issued

Because this is the flu time of year, a bulletin warning about the connection between Reye's syndrome and the use of aspirin for treating children suffering with the flu and other viral infections has been sent home with students.

Parents should read this bulletin carefully to be aware of the symptoms and possible complications.

If parents still have questions after reading the bulletin, they should contact their own doctor for clarification.

Muraco school library news

During November and December, the Muraco library's theme has been "Reach For A Book." Children have illustrated book jackets for favorite books and will vote for each classes' favorite book.

The library is also celebrating Peter Spier's silver anniversary with book talks and a display of his book jackets.

All-day Indians at Lynch

The all-day kindergarten at Lynch School is finishing a very exciting unit about native American Indians. The class held an open-house for parents to "show and share" many of projects.

In addition to making Indian vests, headbands and tom-toms, children planted corn seeds and recorded their observations over several weeks. Patterns and sequencing were done in math, music and art. Some children made their own ABC book with Indian words, while others dictated a book "All About Indians."

Everyone has enjoyed taking turns in the class teepee. The "cooking fire" is covered with a variety of plastic pots and pans and "Indians" serve up a varied diet of anything from buffalo meat and corn to fish and berries.

The Delta Draw computer program was even integrated into the unit. It was used to create an Indian design printed out for each child. These designs were color-backed with construction paper and made into necklaces.

Muraco School teachers Sheila Gill and Pat Garvey, right, join Betty Harrington of Drumlin Farm in Lincoln and Middlesex Cooperative Extension agent Will Snyder to learn about hatching chicks in their classrooms to teach students about the life cycle. The recent workshop was conducted by 4-H and Youth Development, a division of cooperative extension at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

Vinson-Owen welcomes member

The Vinson-Owen Parent's Association board welcomes its newest member, Michele Nasella, as special needs chairperson. The chairperson acts as a liaison between the special education staff and parents to facilitate communication, and to share programs, issues, or concerns with the Winchester Advisory Committee on Special Education.

Vinson-Owen fifth graders study energy

Vinson-Owen fifth graders have been constructing solar houses as part of their study of energy. Using ordinary household supplies, students are challenged to construct a model of a solar house that uses only the sun's energy for heat.

To see how successful each house is in containing solar energy, each model will be placed outside and students will track the temperature inside their house over a determined period of time.

Playtime leads to productive group process

Passersby might have questioned activities taking place Dec. 1 and 3 in the playground of Lincoln School. Here groups of 10 or more children were seen gingerly climbing upon small squares of wood and singing "It's a Small World."

Other groups delicately crossed a long board with cooperative efforts made to insure that no group member fell into the "peanut butter poison pit."

These and other activities, sponsored by the school's enrichment committee, were conducted by representatives of "Horizons for Youth," located in Sharon.

The purpose of the varied exercises, geared for each grade level, was to explore the dynamics of the group process. Groups received a "challenge" which could be successfully completed only with the participation of all group members. Four adult leaders facilitated student problem-solving.

"It sounds quite simple, but in fact there was a great deal of learning taking place," said Lincoln's enrichment committee.

"Students learned to think as a group," one member said. "Solutions were discovered through discussion, negotiation, and lots of quiet maneuvering."

Lincoln's youngest have Thanksgiving

Lincoln School kindergarteners celebrated Thanksgiving by sharing a meal they prepared with some assistance from teachers Betsy Kristl, Connie Maney and Maureen McWilliams.

McWilliams' class created a sumptuous Stone Soup, accompained by cornbread made by students in Kristl's class and fresh butter produced by Maney's students.

The youngsters's creative efforts included making napkin rings shared with friends from another class.

Parents donated time, ingredients, napkins and beverages.

Second grade enter world of pets

Lincoln School second graders in Mary Connors' class are in the midst of pet exploration. Students who own pets have shared their experiences with classmates. Routines of feeding, care, and the responsibility of ownership have been discussed.

In some cases, the pets themselves have held center stage. To date, visitors have included a cat, turtle, mouse and guinea pig.

Vinson-Owen plans holiday program

All parents of Vinson-Owen children are invited to attend the holiday program with Mr. Green. The kindergarten through Grade 3 program is 7 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 10.

The Grades 4-6 program is 7 to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 16.

The theme of the holiday program this year is "Peace."

Visiting Nurses need health care help

The holidays are a terrible time to be alone and sick.

Visiting Nurse and Community Health, which is Winchester's visiting nurse agency, is making an appeal for funds to pay for health care for the needy sick of the community, such as Frank and Scott.

Frank, 75, is a stroke victim. His wife, Helen, has a heart condition and is doing her best to care for him with the help of a home health aide who visits three times a week to assist with personal care and transfer Frank from bed to wheelchair. Their income is $500 a month, which barely covers food and rent. The family receives a reduced fee for the visits. It costs Visiting Nurse and Community Health $1,872 per year to provide this uncompensated care to Frank and Helen.

Another person helped by VNCH was Scott, age 22, who was discharged from the hospital with extensive injuries from an accident. Scott had no family, no health insurance and no resource anywhere. Visiting Nurse and Community Health provided daily nursing visits until he was able to care for himself. These visits cost the agency $2,016 and were uncompensated.

Last year VNCH provided $29,000 worth of free and reduced care to 230 needy patients in our service area requiring home visits.

According to Jayne Tapia, executive director, "we have every reason to believe that more money will be needed in 1987 now that hospitals are discharging patients in sicker and sicker conditions. This means more intense and extended home care. 'Yes, many people's insurance do run out in the course of their recuperation," she said.

Community residents in need who benefit from this Free Care Fund are primarily age 65 and older, but could be any age.

An appeal is being sent to residents and businesses to ask aid for people who need health care and are without sufficient resources to pay for it.

As part of its ongoing fund raising program, VNCH also conducts a monthly raffle, the "VNCH Free Care 1000 Club," with proceeds going to help the needy sick.

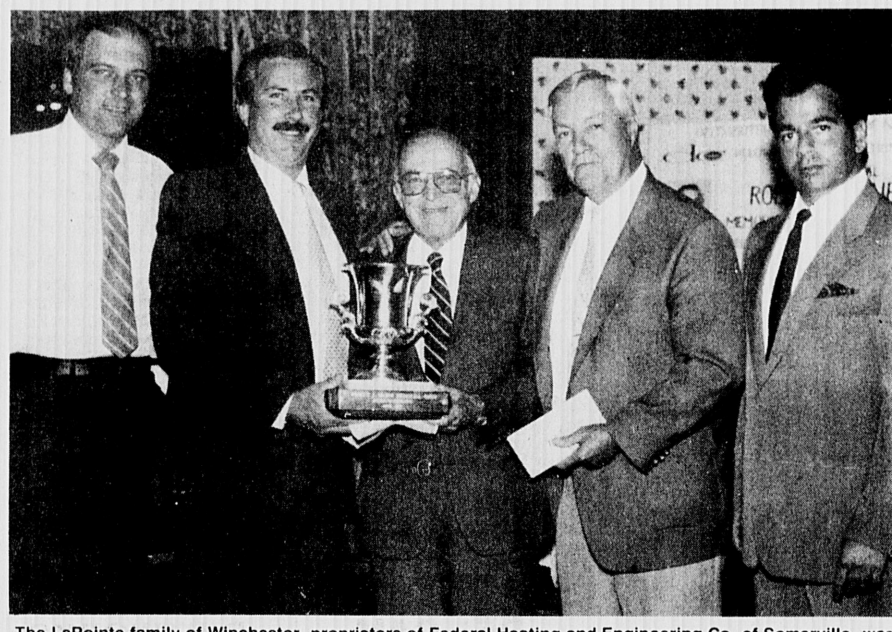

Tax-free gifts may be sent to the Free Care Fund, Visiting Nurse and Community Health, 87 Pleasant St., Arlington 02174.

For information, call Mrs. Betty Tricca, R.N., at 643-6090.

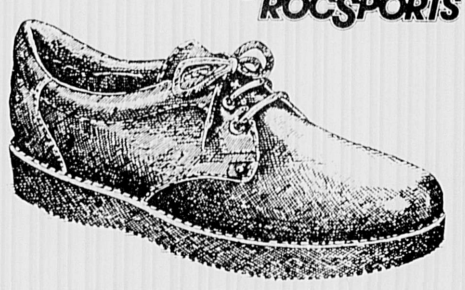

Winchester's visiting nurse agency was founded in 1899 by Mrs. Joshua Coit to provide not only home care, but to establish a school to train nurses. In 1912 the visiting nurses founded "a cottage hospital" and in 1917 the visiting nurses opened the Wnchester Hospital.

Winchester artists Maryellen Conway and Steven Shade have opened a fine art clothing store, "Artworks by Conway & Shade" at 600 Main St. In addition to their paintings, they have created their imagery on fashion clothing. The husband-and-wife team has toured the country and exhibits nationally. They are also known as leading Judaic artists. The new store is within Main Street Optical and is open 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily, noon to 5 p.m. Sundays. (Paul Drake photo)

The LaPointe family of Winchester, proprietors of Federal Heating and Engineering Co. of Somerville, was recently honored for winning the Carrier Air Conditioning Company's annual New England golf tournament. The winning foursome, from left, Gerry Pongonis, Brian LaPointe and Albert LaPointe of Federal and Edward Johnson of Anderson Air Conditioning, receives the trophy from Michael Kolligian of Carrier, center.

Colonial Travel Can Customize A Vacation To Fit Your Wants And Needs.

Whether your vacation takes you across the state, across the country, or around the world, whether your needs are more toward the economy vacation, or money is no object, or whether you prefer the excitement of the fast lane or serenity of seclusion, Colonial Travel, located at 564 Main st., Winchester, can customize a vacation to fit your wants and needs.

With more than 27 years of experience as travel agents between them, Colonial's co-owners Elaine Mahoney and Tony Sampson have tailored vacations for thousands of satisfied clients to all corners of the globe.

"What many people don't realize is travel agents don't charge a service charge," explains Elaine. "Our fee does not affect the price our client pays."

Instead, booking through a travel agent is not only easier, but it can also be cheaper. With access to plane fares, hotel rates, and car rental fees at their fingertips on computer, Tony and Elaine can assure you the best rates and can book a reservation simultaneously.

In addition to helping you get the best rates, Colonial can make your vacation more pleasant by meeting your needs with corresponding accommodations ranging from standard to deluxe or superior.

"Some people prefer to travel alone, while others want the security of a group," explains Elaine. "Some travelers want a more free schedule while others prefer a guided tour. In any case we will make the arrangements to fit their needs."

Some other benefis of booking through travel agents include their knowledge of special discounts, their awareness of the atmosphere, weather conditions and economic state of the place you are traveling to, and their ability to assist you in planning and getting ready for your vacation.

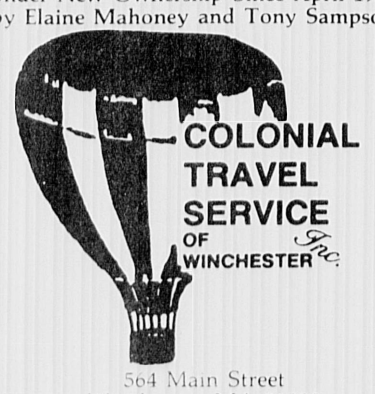

Tony and Elaine can assist you with passport needs, rate of exchange, and will make you aware of any other necessary information to make your trip easier and more enjoyable.

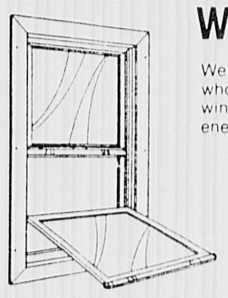

Has Colonial Travel seen any effects on European bookings as a result of the situation abroad?

"Bookings to Europe are down," explains Elaine, "but that has led to a noticeable increase in bookings to places like Hawaii, the Carribean, Bermuda, cruises, and U.S. destinations."

In any event people are vacationing and the smart ones are letting Colonial Travel find them the vacation they desire at the price they want to pay.

To have Colonial Travel arrange and fit your vacation to your needs, call Tony or Elaine at 729-4700 or visit their office at 564 Main st., Winchester. They are open Monday through Friday 9-5, Thursdays till 8 p.m., 11-3 on Saturdays, and both Tony and Elaine are available any other time by appointment.

Public Library open house set Sunday, Dec. 21

The Winchester Public Library invites everyone to a holiday open house at the Library from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 21.

The Saint Mary's Parish Choir, under the direction of James Moritz, will present a program of popular carols and holiday songs at 2 p.m. and refreshments will be served.

The library will be open during the reception, making it a perfect time to catch up on reading, or to check out a holiday cook book or album of Christmas music. Free copies of a holiday booklist are also available.

"Childhood and Imagination," an exhibit of art works by Winchester artist Ruth Lieberherr, will be on display as well. Best known for her acrylic and oil paintings, Lieberherr has focused on appliqued works, marionettes, and water color paintings of fairy tales for this exhibit. Also included is her new book, "The Caterpillar and the Butterfly."

The exhibit will run from Dec. 15 through Jan. 20 in the library's art gallery. The artist will host an opening reception from 5 to 7 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 18.

The Junior Library's series of December story times continues tonight with a Pajama Storytime at 7 p.m. Children 3-5 are invited to come in their favorite PJs and bring a stuffed friend or two. (But, as always, no bear feet.)

Another drop-in story time for 3-5 year olds will be from 1:30 to 2 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 18. For information, contact the Junior Library at 721-7140.

Housing authority to study option for construction

By CAROLYN DETTINGER and PAT ARCHIBALD
League of Women Voters
Observer Corps

Chad Maurer, town manager, reported to the housing authority Monday night about the town's option to have the Green Company, developers who have an agreement with the town to provide funds for low and moderate income housing, build five units of 705 housing for the authority.

The Green Company, Susan Barclay of the state Executive Office of Communities and Development, acting town counsel, the town manager and the housing authority will discuss the possibilities at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 17, at the housing authority office, 13 Westley St.

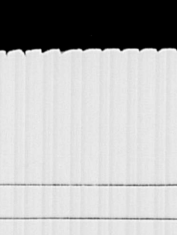

Mary Meader, chairman, appointed William McCarthy as the authority's representative to the "Long-range Planning Committee on Housing" created by town meeting vote last month.

New state regulations set quotas for the placement of minorities in elderly and family housing. For suburban communities, openings must be advertised in media seen by minorities. Winchester and a number of area authorities will advertise as a group because of the costs.

At present, there are no minority persons applying or on the waiting lists in Winchester.

Lifeline has fifth birthday

The Choate-Symmes Lifeline Program is five years old, an anniversary celebrated recently with balloons, birthday cake and refreshments.

More than 60 subscribers, responders, volunteers and other interested persons attended the birthday celebration at Symmes Hospital. With nearly 200 subscribers in 16 communities, the Choate-Symmes program is the largest in the state affiliated with a hospital. Presently, 58 hospitals provide the service in the Commonwealth.

Lifeline is used by subscribers of all ages. It is geared toward the frail elderly and those at medical risk, who live alone. If a health problem arises, the subscriber pushes a safety button worn around the neck or on the wrist. Instant communication is activated with the Response Center in the hospital's Emergency/Walk-In Care Center. In an emergency, a responder is dispatched to the subscriber's home or an ambulance is called, if necessary.

D'Orsis win gas station OK, sue board of appeals

favor of the plan.

The D'Orsis had the support of most neighbors, many of whom told the board of appeals a gingerbread bakery would cause less traffic and congestion than a gas station.

The D'Orsis have filed suit against the board of appeals in Middlesex Superior Court, claiming the board's failure to issue a special permit does not show that the requested change would be substantially more detrimental than the existing use as a gas station.

The D'Orsis also say the board failed to issue a decision within 75 days, as required by state law.

Monday, the D'Orsis appeared successfully before selectmen to get a license for underground storage of gasoline. Testing to assure the tanks do not leak will be required before the tanks can be refilled.

Gas stations can be closed only six months before state law requires removal of all underground gas tanks.

Selectmen decided to limit the gas station's hours to a period from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Selectman Frank Sopper, who voted against granting a license for underground gas storage but lost a 4-1 vote, said he opposed granting the license while the future use of the property is in dispute.

"Are you going to have a gas station or a gingerbread factory?" he asked.

Larry Murray, attorney for the D'Orsis, said they want to use the property for their cookie business but "the property has only one legal use now, and that's as a gas station, although we hope and expect that some day a better use can be realized."

Murray said an alternative to the gas station is "if the town will allow us to use the property as a gingerbread shop."

Welch said decisions of the board of appeals have no effect on the deliberations of selectmen about underground gasoline storage.

Murray said the D'Orsis would "voluntarily submit" to the restricted hours of operation for their gas station.

In another gas station matter, selectmen granted approval to John J. Bossi for expansion of his Exxon underground tanks at Main and Park streets from 12,000 to 18,000 gallons.

Selectmen said expanded capacity will mean fewer deliveries. Bossi said he plans to replace his current sign of 50 square feet with a smaller version, 27 square feet, that is more in keeping with the downtown area.

Holidays are multicultural

Some callers to The Winchester Star have placed "blame" for the school department's multi-cultural emphasis on particular people or groups, Ackerman is firm.

"If people are having an anti-Semitic reaction to sensitivity in the schools, I think they have a problem and need to think calmly and carefully about what public schools are for, about being part of a pluralistic society, and about what is right and fair...," he said.

Susan Villani, principal of Lincoln School, held a parent meeting Dec. 2 at which approximately 50 attended.

"Some parents came upset but left relieved when they had full information," she said.

"If we take things one step further," she said, "we promote awareness. For example, if we focus on love and giving, we want to show how it happens in Christian and non-Christian traditions."

Villani said her staff is not necessarily "letting go of things" but adding more to the holiday program. This gives more students the chance to take part in the season.

"We had a staff meeting and the staff feels comfortable with what is going on. I am not dictating what they may or may not do. Rather I'm saying they must be sensitive to what it is like to be a minority in the classroom."

Like Ackerman and Rahmeier, Villani agrees the holiday guidelines are working toward making the season "a positive thing."

Liquor licenses will be closely reviewed

crowd" but Lombardi was unconvinced.

"They drink apple cider?" he asked.

Town manager Chad Maurer said the proposed dance "is the kind of thing we're trying to encourage."

Lombardi said he has fought for town hall renovations on the project's oversight committees but "I'm not fighting to make it beautiful so that people from Watertown can jump up and down. And I'll guarantee people there are going to have booze."

Chairman Wade Welch said selectmen's own procedural rules say they won't vote on any matter without prior consideration but said he would also like to talk to the group's representatives.

"The town manager says we encourage this use," selectman Sopper said. "But do we encourage use by others or by Winchester residents?"

Representatives will be asked to appear before selectmen Monday night.

In other business Monday, selectmen:

- Appointed Michael J. Luise Jr. of 149 Highland Ave. to the fair housing committee.
- Accepted a contribution from the EnKa Society for the Winchester Historical Commission.
- Postponed consideration of a new draft of auction rules and regulations until the Dec. 15 meeting. Town counsel Douglas Randall is preparing new rules.
- Asked fair housing committee chairman Roger Berman to send them a copy of the town's revised fair housing plan for their review. Selectmen must approve the plan before it can be submitted to state officials.
- Approved an auctioneer's license for Another Era Antiques, which plans an auction Jan. 23 at the Sons of Italy hall.
- Deferred action on an auctioneer's license for Suzy Sullivan, who plans an auction Dec. 17 at 259 Swanton St. Selectmen said neighbors may object and also noted that the state license is issued to Mary C. Sullivan, not Suzy Sullivan.

High school proposal deferred

after the holidays.

Larocco agreed to rework the second proposal of the $11,000 budget provided by the state, saying, "I have no problem with that. Part of this is developing a sense of trust."

McCall Junior High School's six proposals totalling $4,672 were approved.

The requests from principal Evander French and the improvement council were as follows:

- $700 for the purchase of six 35mm cameras.
- $850 for a Hewlett-Packard plotter for industrial arts.
- $1,030 to support McCall's enrichment program.
- $540 to pay an instructor to teach an in-school physical fitness program for students who failed the fall test of cardiovascular fitness.
- $827 to hire a technical stage advisor to train students in set design.
- $725 for videocassettes and books for small group guidance counseling.

French said the remaining $138 would be held in abeyance in case of underestimated costs.

"I like all these proposals," O'Connell said.

Rappaport, Sweet Sue are terrific

REVIEW

You won't see a better show in this or any other season than I'm Not Rappaport!

As the calliope plays, Nat and Midge, two feisty octogenarians, bask in the warmth of waning Indian summer. The two men share a bench by a lake in New York's Central Park. A scantily-clad, pretty young girl passes by on the bridge overhead and Nat sighs wistfully that she's what he'd like were he not "sexually out of business."

Midge reflects that he's never had a white girl. When Nat asks why not, Midge notes, "I'm black." Apologetic, Nat rages, "You mean three days talking before I find out that you're black?"

Such is the savory flavor of Herb Gardner's tender, endearing, insightful and joyous comedy which could have run forever at the Colonial Theatre.

This heartwarming and loving play has all the brilliant artistic elements associated with the winner of three Tony Awards and all the component parts fit as snugly as a jigsaw puzzle.

There's riveting portrayals by its stars Judd Hirsch and Cleavon Little, who work together in as close harmony as two sides of the same coin; stellar contributions by the supporting cast and especially Cheryl Giannini; Daniel Sullivan's compassionate and sensitive direction; Tony Walton's amazingly authentic set design; Pat Collins' highly imaginative lighting; and Gardner's hilarious book that underscores the loneliness, frustration, vulnerability and persecution of the old and disabled and the problems and dangers confronting the elderly in the autumn of their lives.

Nat (Hirsch), agile of mind and sharp of tongue, is of Jewish/Lithuanian descent. He is a fearless, vital youth trapped inside the body of an old man; a courageous knight errant with many a windmill yet to conquer, whether it be a mugger, drug pusher, designing condo officer, or his wily but loving daughter Clara (Giannini).

Nat lives alone, has no sense of reality and needs supervision. With ill-fitting false teeth, eyeglasses for every need, legs ajar, an impressive brief case by his side, and his unsteady hand grasping his cane, Nat's thoughts often trail into the void.

Nat is an incorrigible rascal with an unflagging imagination, a con artist extraordinare, inventor of exquisite fabrications, with more tricks up his sleeve than Doug Henning. As he explains, "I just make certain alterations to the truth."

Midge (Little) is innocent and gullible. He is the superintendent of an apartment building (Nat dubs him "Super Emeritus").

Midge has outlived his usefulness at his job and the new managing agents seek to put him out to pasture. Plagued with cataracts and glaucoma, Midge argues that he wears thick glasses simply because he's nearsighted.

"You're nearsighted?" Nat jibes. "Helen Keller was nearsighted!... You can't tell a lamppost from a tree!"

As Nat spins his tall tales, he takes Midge in completely while changing his persona with each story.

He's Hernando, an escaped Cuban terrorist; an undercover agent with the code name of "Cobra;" and Iroquois Indian; Henry Schwartzman, then Sam Schwartzman; Dr. Frederick Engel; a former "Commie" member ("They replaced Marx and Lenin with Bergdorf and Goodman!"); a lawyer with the firm Rothman, Reisman, Rifkin and Bradley; and official of the Human Rights Action Committee, and the United Consumer and Portection Agency as well; a representative of the "floating Congressional District;" and the mobster Tony Donato.

Between drags of "grass" generously provided by Nat (a riotous scene) he reflects, "At 2 years old you stand up; at 70 you fall down again!" Midge reveals that he pays a punk protection money to walk him home, declaring, "That's social security!"

They reminisce nostalgically about old loves and old wives, patronizing children and Clara's threat to place Nat "in a home for the forgettable" where "the only way you can tell the live ones from the dead ones is by how old the newspaper is!" Nat is faced with three options: Clara's home ("exile in Great Neck"), a home for the aged ("Devil's Island"), or daily attendance at a senior center ("Kindergarten"). "That," he points out, "is aberration at the other end! We don't have sight, but we have vision!"

What's On The Boards

And when the pair break into a delectable dance routine to "Alabamy Bound," we know there's life in the old boys yet!

Sweet Sue a sweet evening of theatre

REVIEW

When Susan was a little tot and things weren't going just quite right, her daddy would take her by the hand, lead her over to the piano and play, "Every star above/Knows the one that I love/Sweet Sue/Just you," which would set the world right again.

But now Susan is middle-aged, has no daddy, nor a husband for that matter.

three ways to keep a friend...alive

Drive your friend home

You're having a party. One of your friends has had too much to drink and should not drive. To be sure your friend arrives home safely, you can drive him yourself.

Have your friend sleep over

Asking a guest to sleep over is another good way to keep a friend from driving. You won't have to drive and your friend won't have to return the next day for the car.

3 Call a cab

If you can't drive your friend home, you can call a cab. You may want to pay the fare in advance. That's one way to show you really care.

DRIVING DRUNK KILLS

It kills friendships. It breaks up families. It destroys happiness. It ruins lives. We can't say it any plainer than that. Get in a car with someone who's had too much to drink and you take your life in your hands. Get behind the wheel after you've had too much to drink and you not only endanger your own life, you jeopardize the lives of innocent people besides. If you drink, don't drive.

What To Do

'Demon rum' is problem No. 1

Alcoholism is the number one drug problem in America, according to the National Clearinghouse for Drug Information.

Approximately 9 million Americans abuse alcohol while 300,000 are addicted to heroin.

It may be difficult to see alcohol as a drug because 68 percent of adult Americans use it.

But alcohol works on the central nervous system as a depressant. In small doses, it acts as a mild tranquilizer. Higher levels in the blood, however, depress brain activity, reduce inhibitions and self-control, sharply alter behavior and personality and severely affect judgment and dull sensory perceptions.

Still higher levels of alcohol can anesthesize the deepest levels of the brain, and may result in coma — or even death.

Below are some facts on alcohol, its effects on the body and some legal implications of drinking.

- Alcoholism is a treatable illness.
- Alcohol is absorbed in the bloodstream; not digested.
- Only time, not black coffee or a cold shower, can sober one up. It takes about one hour for every drink.
- A 1.25 oz. glass of hard liquor is approximately equivalent in alcohol content to a 5 oz. glass of wine or a 12 oz. bottle of beer.
- Food consumed with alcohol slows down the rate at which alcohol is absorbed into the bloodstream, as well as the rate at which people drink.
- Alcohol consumption by driver or pedestrian may be related to 50 percent of automobile accident deaths.
- In Massachusetts, a blood alcohol content (BAC) of .10 is considered "under the influence" for traffic purposes; and at this level, it becomes illegal to drive. BAC is the ratio of the quantity of alcohol to the quantity of blood in the body.
- Even a BAC of .04 can seriously impair a driver's ability and judgement.
- A driver in Massachusetts can still be considered "under the influence," if his BAC is below .05. In this case, the testimony of a police office or other witness as to the driver's condition may be used in place of a Brethalyzer test.
- The state has an "implied consent law," which stipulates that, as a condition of driving, every motorist is deemed to have given his or her consent to a chemical test to determine BAC after being arrested. If the arrested driver refuses the test, he or she automatically has his license suspended for 90 days; regardless of a finding of guilt or innocence.
- A fetus may be inebriated or experience serious withdrawal symptoms if the mother has been drinking heavily around the time of delivery.
- Previously, only taverns could be held liable for damage or injury caused by persons "under the influence." Now, in some states, liability extends to such events as company picnics or college functions.

Drink. . .

By Ed Engel

Drank. . . DRUNK

Viewers learn how beer can cause intoxication as easily as hard liquor.

The Museum of Science, any evening: A burly bartender's hand reaches into the trash barrel, scoops out another complimentary beer and pours it for the beaming woman, now downing her third drink in less than an hour.

The woman, driving home later that evening, doesn't have much to worry about though. Not that three drinks in a hour isn't too much.

It is.

But the beers are alcohol-free, and the event is a party celebrating the opening of an interactive video exhibit on alcohol abuse.

Ben's Grille, on the museum's second floor, is the first exhibit in the nation to use interactive video technology to inform about the danger's of alcohol abuse.

By touching one of three video screens, the viewer plays bartender in owner Ben's (David Bailey) tavern and decides who should be given an extra drink — and who should stick with a Seven Up.

The player serves one of four characters: a collegiate jock, a pregnant woman, a delivery man and a nightclub singer.

Then he sees the consequences of his decisions.

For example, the singer, a reformed alcoholic, is performing before an agent that night.

Periodically, her story stops, and the player/bartender must choose whether to give her an alcoholic drink or a non-alcoholic beverage.

Or he may ask for more information on her mental and physical condition.

The success or failure of her evening depends on the choices the viewer makes.

With each character, health and safety risks become the major consequences of serving too many alcoholic drinks.

If the viewer gives one of them too much to drink, Ben appears on screen to tell him so — and why.

Of course, deciding what "too much" means can often be subjective.

So the exhibit also points out some facts and clears up some misconceptions that may make that decision more objective.

Besides actor Bailey's own explanations, "Ben's Grille" allows viewers to learn about alcohol-related terminology, the effects of alcohol on the body, legal implications of drinking, and organizations that can help with drinking problems.

Viewers learn how beer can cause intoxication as easily as hard liquor, how drinking can affect a fetus and how a drinking driver can be arrested in Massachusetts, even if his blood alcohol content is less than .10.

The exhibit is the brainchild of Dr. Thomas Peebles, chairman of MultiGroup Health Plan and Dr. Roger Nichols of the Museum of Science. They conceived the idea two years ago.

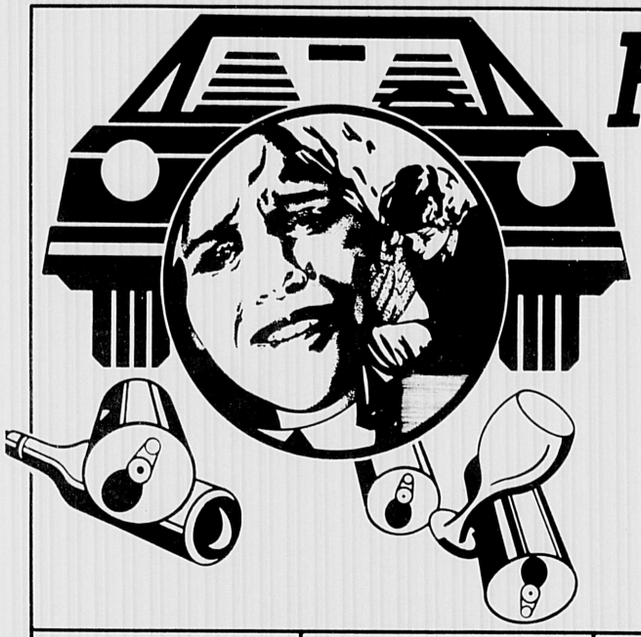

Century III Teleproductions designed the $200,000 exhibit.

Peebles says plans are being made to tour "Ben's Grille," possibly taking it into classrooms.

According to Nichols, the museum will use a stopwatch on the exhibit, to see how long players stay at the screens. Depending on the response to the exhibit, he says, "Ben's Grille" may then be modified for "maximum effecitveness."

"Substance abuse cost the U.S. $116 billion last year. Alcohol was most of that," Peebles says.

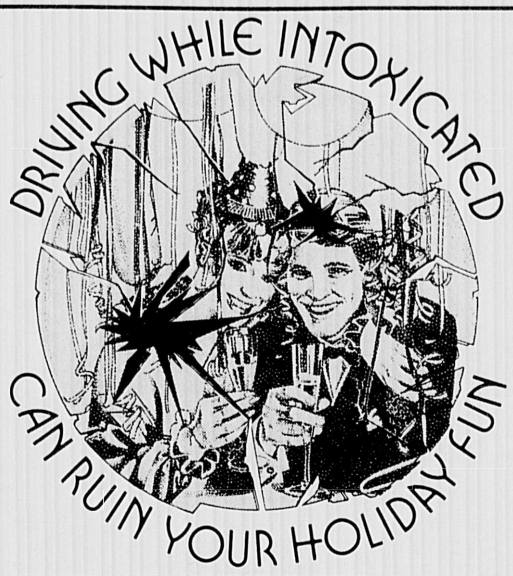

"If this program helps 10 people, it will have recovered its cost."

What's On The Boards

Susan is divorced and the mother of three grown children who are swinging on the tail of this country's sexual explosion, enjoying the bountiful harvest of free love.

And this is how we find Susan, in her home in the suburbs of New York, at the opening of A.R. Gurney Jr.'s new play Sweet Sue, in its pre-Broadway run at the Wilbur Theatre through Dec. 21.

Sweet Sue stars Mary Tyler Moore and Lynn Redgrave and features Barry Tubb and John K. Linton in a contemporary, provocative two-character, four-actor comedy that centers on an April/December romance between an older woman and a younger man.

What makes Sweet Sue unique is Gurney's treatment of structure, wherein he has Misses Moore and Redgrave representing different facets of Susan, and Tubb and Linton reflecting various aspects of Jake.

Sometimes the characters are at odds, sometimes they're in harmony, but at all times, the concept is intriguing and presents the action from two distinct perspectives — two faces of Susan, two faces of Jake, and two minds about almost everything.

The device allows for uninterrupted build of conflicting emotions simultaneously on stage and eliminates the need of marking time for costume or set change.

Gurney has fashioned an intensely absorbing play with subject matter that only a few years back would have raised eyebrows, but today this relationship between a 23-year-old youth and an attractive woman more than twice his age has you rooting for Susan, as she comes down the home stretch, to hit the finish line a winner, all the way.

Gurney's bittersweet "mating dance" opens at the final chapter of the story, then reverts to the beginning, where a knock on the door brings Jake into Susan's life.

Jake is her son Ted's roommate at Dartmouth and the pair plan to paint houses during the summer recess to earn a few bucks.

Susan sets up Jake in her studio in the guest house, the room she normally uses to design "hearts and flowers" cards for Hallmark, a labor that has put her three kids through college. But Susan aspires to be more than an illustrator at least once, accomplishing a work approaching the lofty realm of an artist.

Jake has mapped out for himself a summer project — to establish a meaningful relationship with a woman — something he has experienced total failure with in the past.

Jake, it seems, has been infatuated with Susan since he met her a year earlier during a visit to Dartmouth and her treatment of him as an adult. Susan enjoys his vibrant, energetic company and is not unaware of his lean and handsome physique.

Gurney handles the subject matter tastefully and his dialogue, as it explores love and sex and youth and age, is sharp and humorous ("The WASPs leave without saying goodbye; the Jews say goodbye without leaving!"). Under John Tillinger's tight, astute direction, the play moves along at a brisk pace, and Santo Loquasto provides an attractive, functional set.

All four performers — Mary Tyler Moore, Lynn Redgrave, Barry Tubb and John K. Linton — are excellent, and although there is little physical or facial similarity, it really doesn't matter. All in all, Sweet Sue is a sweet evening of theatre.

Mary Martin (Karen Murphy) and Ethel Merman (Toni DiBuono) are among characters parodies in Forbidden Broadway 1986, playing at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel. For performance and ticket information call 357-8384.

Holiday decor with candies,

December has arrived, the days are getting shorter, and suddenly it's almost here.

Christmas, a busy season of joyful noise and magic, pageantry and tradition, has a special appeal.

But why does it seem to come earlier every year? Before the old turkey wishbone is dry enough to crack, it's time to finish the shopping, start the baking, and unpack the decorations!

If your plans for some new decorations never materialized, don't give up yet. What follows are some hassle-free hints to brighten your home this holiday season.

Of all our Christmas symbols, the wreath, a circle of love and welcome, is the most popular.

Wreaths come in many sizes and are made from a varied assortment of materials, from the traditional to the exotic. Two unusual ones certain to cheer any home are the Candy Wreath and the Braided Macrame Wreath.

Just about this time of year, Candy Wreaths spring from bags of hard candy.

Made from four pounds of wrapped hard candies, each wreath measures over 12 inches in diameter.

Candy Wreath

Supplies needed: One 10-inch galvanized clothes-wire form (or two clothes hangers taped together with florist tape—one hanger won't do as the candy is rather heavy).

Florist wire (or other thin wire), 4 lbs. of assorted, wrapped candy, 2 yards ribbon, small scissors (a child's, blunt-end type works fine).

Cut a long piece of florist wire and twist one end around top of wire form several times.

Then proceed to attach candy by twisting the wire around it at one wrapped end. After attaching several pieces of candy, push together tightly. The wreath won't look full unless the candy is tight. Continue around form. Cover hook with ribbon and attach bow. Tie the scissors to an end of the bow and your wreath is finished.

With scissors whimsically attached to the bow inviting anyone who passes by to snip off a piece, a candy wreath is a decoration meant to be consumed. But it is so full of luscious hard candy that quite a bit must be eaten before it is missed!

If you like a more rustic look, a Braided Macrame Wreath is quick and easy.

Braided Macrame Wreath

Supplies Needed: one 12-inch ring, 3-ply jute cord, large bow, other decorations as desired.

Cut cord as follows: 24 pieces, 2 yards long, 1 piece, 9 yards long, 1 piece, 3 yards long.

With the 9-yard cord, cover the ring with square knots (see illustration) using the ring as the filler cord (what is usually two center cords). Match ends of the 24, 2-yard cords, and secure them mwith a rubber band about ten inches from the end.

Then divide into 3 groups of 8 cords. Braid these cords loosely, adjusting occasionally until the braid will lie flat and fit the ring. Lap ends of braid over each other and tie at lap with a small piece of the cord.

Pull the two ends down, bring together and secure slightly using the 3-yard cord and a wrap knot (see illustration). Do this close to the braid (the ends will look better if the two sections are a little uneven). Attach the braid to the ring in several places with pieces of cord.

Add Holly, calico or velvet bow, dried flowers and cones—just about anything that suits you. The braided wreath can also serve as a fall decoration simply by changing the ornaments.

Other craft projects for people in a hurry: miniature needlepoint figures to adorn a tree or gift, crocheted wreaths, and narrow door banners.

Macrame snowflakes make a charming addition to any yuletide tree or holiday decoration, or add to a package as a keepsake. Several designs are available—this one is made with gold, gift-wrap cord:

Macrame Snowflake

Supplies Needed: 12 pieces of gold cord, 14 inches long, ½ inch cabone ring.

Mount the 12 cords, folded in half, on the ring, using a lark's head knot (see illustration).

You will have 24 cords to work with, making 6 groups for a 6-sided snowflake. Take each group of 4 cords a tie a square knot. Then tie one alternating square knot (using two adjacent knotting and filler cords).

End with an alternating square knot sinnet (use two square knots). You may need a small dab of glue on the back of each knot to prevent slipping.

Trim filler cords about 1 inch and knotting cords a half-inch below the last knot. Attach ribbon, as desired.

You might try suspending these delicate snowflakes from your dining room chandelier, or a swag lamp, using invisible thread, narrow ribbon, or yarn.

It certainly wouldn't be Christmas without the Poinsettia, but there are many other plants with colorful foliage and winter blossoms that would make eye-catching, natural decorations. No time to decorate this year? Purchase a plant and set it on the piano, or on a crisp tablecloth in the dining room. Buy one as a treat for yourself! With proper care that Christmas plant will give pleasure through dreary winter days long after the holidays are over.

Poinsettia, A young plant will have bright green foliage all along the stem, and only a little pollen showing on the small, yellow flowers which are situated just above the colorful bracts. The poinsettia should be kept evenly moist; the more foliage it has, the more water it will need. Good drainage is a must and it should never sit in water.

What To Learn

can be easy plants, string

Avoid drafts or excess heat (watch forced-air vents) and don't put near the front door. Poinsettias like light, and morning sun is fine, but they do not do well if set near a window which receives afternoon sun.

Christmas Cactus. There are many hybrids, but the one that is most appealing is called "White Christmas" and white and lacy, trumpet-like flowers. Also available in salmon, pink and red, a Christmas cactus makes an elegant centerpiece.

With proper care it will bloom for six weeks. Give bright and direct light, but no sun and keep evenly moist. To keep it blooming, temperature should always be between 55 and 85 degrees.

Dieffenbachia. That's a long name for an easy-care plant commonly known as "dumb cane." There are many varities, but a special one for Christmas is appropriately entitled "Rudolph Roehrs" (pronounced "roars") with its highly varigated green and ivory leaves.

This plant does very well in low-light areas. Keep slightly moist; it likes to be a little dryer than the others, so be careful of overwatering.

This is also the peak time of year for plants such as Cyclamen, a bulb plant available in white, pink, salmon and red; the Kalanchoe, an easy-care succulent with its bright flowers and foliage; and the Christmas Begonia, in festive shades of green and white with red flowers.

Need a gift for a plant-loving friend? Try an amaryllis bulb, or paperwhites (indoor narcissus), and set the bulb in an attractive planter, thus giving your favorite indoor gardener a wintertime project.

When there is no time to make a centerpiece for that special party, try making table decorations using fresh, dried or silk flowers and often uses natural or recycled containers.

One small arrangment is effectively set in a recycled strawberry box.

When it's really down to the last minute, and you only have time to visit your local supermarket in preparation for the holiday feast, solve a few decorating problems right there in the grocery store!

For an old-fashioned yuletide, put the youngsters to work making cranberry or popcorn garlands.

Or fill your favorite bowl with a colorful assortment of fruit and nuts, encircle the base with greenery and anchor a nutcracker on top. A simple, inviting centerpiece!

Don't forget candles — an arrangement of small, scented candles in brightly colored goblets will light up your holiday. Add some greenery for a quick and inexpensive decoration for a mantle or an end table. Some of the glassware you may already have in your pantry: a small, etched glass is a perfect size for a 15-hour votive candle. Surround this with holly and ribbon and you have a dainty centerpiece to adorn a small spot.

Finally, as you approach the checkout line, your cart overflowing with holiday goodies, grab the package that guarantees a cheerful Christmas: Mistletoe!

Garden in Woods sets workshops

Add a special touch to holiday festivities by creating your own decorations.

Learn how to combine fragrant evergreens, colorful berries, Christmas herbs, and eye-pleasing dried materials to highlight your home this year.

The Garden in the Woods, Hemenway Road, Framingham, sponsors home-decorating demonstrations on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 5, 6, 12, and 13 at 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. each day.

For more information phone (617) 877-7630 or 237-4924. Preregistration required; fee $5, $4 members.

On the first two days Beth Bullock will show you how to create living wreaths from native plant material including Partridgeberries, Cranberries, Wintergreen, lichens, and Hemlocks.

These small table decorations are charming personal gifts for friends and family.

Because they are lovely for three to four months, they are a special reminder of the holiday season throughout the winter.

On Dec. 12 and 13, Laurie Dawes will demonstrate Boxwood and Artemisia Christmas trees, wreaths, door swags, and table decorations.

As a final touch Dawes will show you a special technique for creating handsome bows. Her demonstrations include a wide variety of styles from antique to contemporary.

Both Bullock and Dawes will display some of their decorations at the gift show at the Garden in the Woods, Dec. 1-13.

turbing, and blisteringly funny play, David Rabe brings us into the self-absorbed world of Hollywood. Performances are Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m., Sunday at 2 and 7 p.m., with selected Wednesday and Saturday matinees. Call (401) 351-4242.

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

Color shapes of a landscape are given definition and motion by polarized light in the Polages of Austine Wood now on exhibit at Gallery on the Green.

Light polarized for color

The interaction of color and light has been a dominant theme in formal painting concerns over the years.

Most painters represent light through color pigmentation. Color, that is, and color relationships both create and stand for light in paintings.

Artist Austine Wood has chosen to reverse the process, using light directly in her work to create color. Like the pure bands of the spectrum that may be seen in a rainbow, or through a prism, colors in Wood's "polages" are made visible through light refraction.

Polage is a word coined by Wood from "polarized collage," the medium the artist has been developing since 1967.

Clear cellulose laminations of different thicknesses are handcut and composed within a pictorial field. Their color is visible only through the interaction of polarized light.

The laminations may be illuminated from behind with polarized light, or viewed through a polaroid filter. No dyes or pigments are used.

Many of Wood's Polages now on exhibit at Lexington's Gallery on the Green are displayed in light boxes, in which motors turn polarizing disks behind the artwork. The gallery also provides hand held polarizing filters, allowing viewers shared participation in the works.

One has only to think of a kaleidoscope to know the fascination and endless visual possibilities of shifting shapes and continuous pattern in Wood's Polages.

The artist, though, is able to go far beyond the symmetry and chance patterning of a kaleidoscope's shapes.

Images emerge momentarily enveloped in a creamy yellow configuration that moves smoothly to a iridescent green, then a diaphonous purple-blue.

Suddenly a dark shadow appears. A shape is changed. A figure's shoulder and head become a large bird whose wing spread tips the edges of its circular format. A new image, a new context, another mood and different set of shapes and colors are as sharp and memorable and fleeting as dreams.

Gallery on the Green is located at 1837 Massachusetts Ave. and is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Call 861-6044.

SELL HOME YOURSELF?

I'm sure you've heard it said: "Why should I sell my home through a REALTOR? I can sell it myself and save a lot of money." Right?.....Wrong!

This kind of thinking usually turns out to be financially unwise. The prospects will usually start by mentally deducting the commission and then start negotiating from there. On the average, a homeowner saves little or no money when he sells his/her own home. In fact, the opposite is often true. A lot of time is wasted showing homes to unqualified curiosity seekers and many possible sales are lost because the owner did not possess the experience to financially structure a viable sale in today's fast-changing money market.

As a private seller you're at a great disadvantage in the intricate areas of financing, negotiating and protecting yourself from all sorts of do-it-yourself pitfalls. You've got a strong investment in your home. It makes sense to list it with a REALTOR. He or she will sell without any disappointment and for the best price and in the shortest amount of time.

Historic Shores Give Berth To An Incomparable Community.

A spirited parkside community has been launched on the banks of the Mystic River. Boasting superb views over the river, the expansive parkland next door and the Boston skyline beyond, this site lies two blocks from Medford Square and minutes from I-93 and downtown Boston.

The 89 townhouses at Shipside Green are uniquely sited around beautifully landscaped greens opening out to the park and river's edge. The architecture provides three distinct floor plans, each with a fireplace and its own striking view from a balcony or private garden. Occupancy is scheduled for early summer 1987.

A select number of condominium residences are now being offered for purchase at pre-construction prices beginning at $1e0,000.

For more information regarding Shipside Green's initial offering, call 396-4200, Monday-Friday 9 to 5

MIKEY, HERE'S your cheer! If it was not for your mother you would not be there. 12.11j

"Twas the month before Christmas,
Santa sat by the fire
He needed more elves,
But didn't know who to hire
He sipped his hot chocolate with a sigh of dismay
So much work to do in so very few days!
Then what to his tired old eyes should appear,
But this week's "What's Up" section and he got an idea!
He opened it up with a jolly Ho! Ho! Ho!
He dialed 729-8100!
"The kids are so good" he said "So few have been bad!"
Saint Nick had to place a "HOLIDAY HELP WANTED" AD!
With each tiny applicant Santa's confidence grew,
As he happily conducted each elf interview!
His inventory grew as they stocked all his shelves,
His workshop now bustling with busy elves!
Santa sat back and counted the days till his ride,
So relieved that he'd called CENTURY CLASSIFIEDS!

Task Force meets angry parents on Christmas issue

By JANINE DIGIOVANNI

Emotions ran high at Monday night's meeting of the Task Force on Cultural, Racial and Ethnic Awareness as 40 parents demanded an end to the vagueness surrounding "guidelines" for holiday observances in public schools.

One parent voiced her concern as others in the audience nodded agreement. "I think the initial concern isn't that we don't respect your judgment," she said, addressing the committee, "but that the lack of publicity leaves something unanswered, saying religion is not something to be discussed at all in the schools."

Christmas parties have disappeared from the high school and elementary schools have "holiday programs." Santa Claus was not invited to one school's program but he showed up anyway.

"The real concern is the avenue in which we're going . . . it's emotional, but the real concern is the children's lives, how they grow, how they live, and learn about differences," a parent said.

Throughout the meeting the major concern appeared to be a lack of news parents have received about the holiday "guidelines."

"It would be easier if there were a list of do's and don'ts, but there isn't," David Ackerman, director of curriculum at Winchester public schools, said.

"My purpose tonight hasn't been to reprimand," a parent said. "But to tell you . . . we don't want to separate the children . . . to pit them against one another. And everything came about so quickly. Suddenly we were removing things from holiday programs."

Susan Villani, principal of Lincoln School, protested a parent's complaint that schools are doing nothing for the holiday season.

"There is ample evidence that things are going on in the school," she said. She described a project involving inter-cultural themes.

"Peace is lovely," a parent continued. "But can't you emphasize that on Labor or Memorial Day? Right now the schools are devoid of religion.

"If you have a Christmas wreath or Hanukah lights, you know instantly what they mean. I don't see these things at all in the schools. What's wrong with symbols? Why are you removing these things from the schools instead of adding on, explaining different traditions?

"I'd love to have my daughter learn about Hanukah as well as Christmas. I just don't think what you're doing is the American way."

Another parent spoke about ambiguity. "No one knows anything," she said. "What has happened is that very few people know what is going on, and the town is not involved."

"But no decisions have been made," a task force member interrupted.

> "I'd love to have my daughter learn about Hanukah as well as Christmas. I just don't think what you're doing is the American way."

"Last year I saw religion in the schools. Now I don't see anything. I don't think your group of 22 people has the right to do this. You'd find less conflict if you let us know what is going on." That parental opinion met with approval from the audience.

Only 10 members of the task force were present Monday night.

Holiday guidelines distributed at the last meeting briefly instructed teachers to use "sensitivity and discretion" in terms of holiday preparation. Learning time was not to be interrupted.

The guidelines were then either distributed or not distributed, according to the individual school's discretion.

Jane d'Entremont, president of the Muraco School Parents Association, said, "We weren't encouraged to run them off and give them to parents. In the absence of having those copies, certain areas are fuzzy."

Task Force member Roseanne Gallery objected. "It was a school-by-school decision. You were encouraged to make it available. If you wanted to hold a discussion in your school, then it was up to you."

Another parent requested a survey or some other means of voicing parents' opinions. "Since we don't have guidelines, gossip is developing. It's important that each parent have some input."

"You haven't answered me yet," an angry parent addressed the committee. "Is the symbolism in the schools being made void? What is the fear of bringing religion into the schools? This is the only time of the year when religion is an issue."

William T. Jervey, task force and school committee member, said, "the reason for the task force being formed was to encourage sensitivity, to promote this sensitivity. Do we have a positive environment for all children?"

Another parent had concrete suggestions. "Provide parents with some information about the committee. For example, who are you as a committee, why are you on the committee? I think the rumors would stop if we had some information about you as a whole. And what is your religious affiliation, because in a town that is 75 percent Christian, shouldn't that be represented on the committee?"

One mother complained that her child is learning about prejudice for the first time. Indeed, certain religious groups are targeted, like the Grinch, for "taking Christmas away from our children."

One mother who came into The Star's office said, "It's a beautiful time of year for everyone. Why are they doing this? I just don't understand."

The task force stayed calm Monday. "We have not made any decisions, only offered suggestions and told staff to use common sense and sensitivity," members said.

You must be aware that there is a predominant opinion here this evening," a task force member said, insinuating that the time for vocalizing opinions had ended. "We're grateful for your response, but we hope you understand there are others who have very different responses than you do."

Ackerman said, "This committee is advisory. All that is going on is a re-thinking, a heightened awareness."

'Hill' area residents decry parking woes

There's no place to park on Vine Street, Elmwood Avenue or Park Street — and the situation is getting worse.

Johanne Doenges, a Vine Street resident, told selectmen Monday that something must be done.

He pointed to construction projects, including the 23-unit building nearly complete at the corner of Park and Elmwood, and said parking will be even tighter.

Doenges also complained that town trucks sand other roads in flat areas before "the hill" area.

Sopper claims liquor rules go unenforced

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Selectman Frank Sopper charged Monday that rules governing Winchester restaurants with liquor licenses are "still being challenged."

Sopper said, "People tell me one of the restaurants is still operating as a cocktail lounge."

His unattributed comment led to continuation of a philosophical debate about the role of selectmen. Owners and managers of establishments holding liquor licenses sat as a captive audience.

Sopper lectured the group about the dangers of alcohol and the responsibilities of dispensing it.

"It was never the intention of the town to create night clubs or cocktail lounges," Sopper told restaurant operators in a prepared speech. Rules to prohibit such operations were drafted.

"Two restaurants interpreted the rules differently, so we changed them to be more specific," Sopper said. "But the rules are still being challenged."

Selectman Judie Muggia objected. "According to the police chief, there have been no recent violations," Muggia said.

"People tell me one of the restaurants is still operating as a cocktail lounge," Sopper said.

"I want to see it in writing," Muggia said. "A written violation or complaint in the police log. I'm not interested in innuendo, accusation or anonymous comments.

"On behalf of these people, I want to see their accusers in this room. I haven't seen any but two (past) violations," she said.

Selectman Mark Lombardi said chairman Wade Welch "shouldn't let one selectman accuse another of doing things improperly."

Without comment, selectmen unanimously approved renewal of the liquor license for Nicholas Buonopane, owner of Winchester Wine and Spirits.

But conversation quickly returned to the conduct of selectmen.

Selectman Robert Deering said, "If members challenge the conduct of the meeting, with the conduct of the last few weeks and the comments I've gotten in last week, well, enough said."

Chairman Welch said "selectmen can attack each other. It's always open season."

Lombardi said Robert Rules of Order say the chairman "shall conduct the meeting with proper decorum. It's not fair for one member to attack another about something that happened two meetings ago."

"Let's get through the liquor licenses," Welch interrupted.

Sopper, who asked last week to have all applicants personally appear before selectmen because "there's a

'Contract' on lawyer alleged

By CONNIE PAIGE
Special to the Star

The Middlesex District Attorney's office is looking into charges that two parties to a multimillion-dollar estate case took out a contract on a Winchester lawyer who claims the estate owes him $150,000.

First assistant district attorney Thomas P. Reilly confirmed Dec. 11 he was investigating the claim of a former bank robber from Waltham that he was paid $1,000 up front by Ronald Tocio and Harold Allen Jr., allegedly to murder attorney Kevin P. Curry.

In an exclusive interview, the bank robber, Joseph T. Mealey, explained that he only wanted the money and never intended to murder Curry.

"I'm a bank robber, not a murderer," Mealey said.

Reilly's office began the probe after Curry obtained a temporary restraining order yesterday in Middlesex Superior court prohibiting Tocio and Allen from interfering with Curry's "personal safety, privacy and civil rights."

The order was issued based on Curry's complaint that Tocio and Allen fit Mealey's description of the two men he claims hired him to kill Curry.

Mealey has described the two men who he says hired him, but still does not know for sure their identities.

Tocio, a Woburn resident, labeled the accusations against him "ridiculous." He said he knew "nothing" about the restraining order. "This is the first I've heard of it," said Tocio, a police officer in Arlington who is not currently working on the force because of a disability.

Allen, a former member of the Arlington Housing Authority, could not be reached for comment.

Mealey, 33, said he has been in and out of prison since 1950 for numerous bank robberies and was last released after five years in Walpole on Nov. 6, 1980.

Mealey alleged in his interview that on Nov. 17 of this year he was drinking in a Somerville bar when a man he had known for about a year only as "Harry" asked if Mealey wanted "to make some money."

"I want you to whack somebody, and I'll give you $1,000," the man known as "Harry" allegedly told Mealey.

The next afternoon, "Harry" picked up Mealey in a Lincoln driven by a friend introduced as "George," and the two of them allegedly took Mealey to Curry's Winchester home, Mealey said.

One of the two men suggested that "maybe you could whack him here," Mealey said. During the trip, "Harry" gave Mealey a Smith and Wesson .38 revolver for the murder and $800, he said.

Upon consideration, Mealey claimed, he decided to use the money for a trip to Reno, Nevada, where he stayed and gambled for several days.

He returned home Dec. 5, he said, prepared to disclose his story. The next morning, he contacted Curry.

Curry attempted to persuade Middlesex District Attorney L. Scott Harshbarger to get involved in the matter by sending a letter dated Dec. 8, giving descriptions of the two men who had hired Mealey. "Those descriptions," said the letter, "correspond to Harold Allen Jr. and Ronald Tocio."

On Dec. 10, Mealey submitted to a polygraph test conducted by state police connected to the district attorney's office. The polygraph, according to Mealey, was to determine whether he was telling the truth about the alleged contract on Curry's life.

Reilly could not comment on the results of the test.

Curry's complaint in support of his motion for a restraining order repeated the claim that Mealey's descriptions of "Harry" and "George" matched those of Harold Allen Jr. and Ronald Tocio respectively.

Curry's motion also alleged that the contract on his life was related to a series of recently consolidated court cases, now being heard in Concord, connected to the estate of Tocio's late cousin, Woburn auto mechanic Lance S. Luther.

Both Curry and Tocio have a stake in the outcome of the estate case.

Curry formerly represented Luther and was trustee of some of his property.

Curry is suing Tocio, a former executor of Luther's estate, and Allen for alleged "fraud and embezzlement" in the management of Luther's money, according to Curry's motion.

Curry has billed the estate for $150,000 in attorney's fees.

Tocio, according to Luther's will, stands to inherit some of Luther's property if Luther's son dies.

AIDS is No.1 deterrent to high school sex

By JANINE DI GIOVANNI

In a recent poll of high school students taken by Planned Parenthood League of Massachusetts, 65 percent claimed the strongest reason not to have sex was the fear of getting AIDS or herpes.

Some parents may consider that fear a good thing, but the fact remains that "fear of AIDS" ranked higher than fear of pregnancy or having parents or peers find out about their sexual activity.

In the wake of a recent statement by Winchester police youth officer that 70 percent of junior high students actively engaged in either sex, drinking or drugs, perhaps education is called for.

Sex education in Winchester schools is currently limited to five grades and taught as part of the health curriculum.

"Sex education is another way to break the low use of birth control and the high rate of teen pregnancy," Susan Newsom, spokeswoman for Planned Parenthood said. "Kids who are sexually active use birth control more often if they have good communication with their parents."

Consider the facts from a nationwide poll conducted by Planned Parenthood. At a press conference at WGBH-TV attended by three Winchester High School students, some disturbing facts were revealed:

> Three out of 10 teenagers between 12 and 17 have had sex. In a given year, one in 10 teenagers will become pregnant.

Half of young women have had intercourse by the time they're 18 years old, and slightly less than half of sexually active teenagers never use birth control.

Three out of ten teenagers beween the ages of 12-17 have had sex.

In a given year, one in ten teenagers will become pregnant.

In 1984, 479,647 babies were born to young women under 19, yet fewer than one teen mother in four intended to become pregnant.

Faye Wattleton, president of Planned Parenthood, expressed a deep concern about the lack of communication between parents and children. Substantial evidence says teenagers who discuss sex and birth control with parents, or who have had sex education at school, are less likely to become pregnant.

Another major concern is the effect the media have upon teenagers. Most teenagers who do not use birth control cite reasons such as recklessness, embarrassment, cost prohibitation, or simply being "swept away" by sexual desire, a feeling not unlike one that Krystl on "Dynasty" would have.

Planned Parenthood also said fewer than 40 percent of students in the U.S. could be said to have received a sex education which included information about where to obtain contraception.

Yet, teens who have had sex education courses are more likely to use effective birth control than teens who have never taken a sex ed course.

There is also a vicious cycle in which low sexual information — with a resulting greater risk of pregnancy — is simply one more way socially disadvantaged teenagers are left behind.

The way to break this cycle is to have formal sex education in schools, spokesmen said. Greater sexual knowledge is shown by teenagers who have discussed sex with parents or at school.

Parent-teacher communication seemed to be the under-utilized resource that has large potential for improving the situation.

In Winchester, there is a need for a revaluation of the health/sex education program.

Jan Dolan, head of the physical education program, is involved in application for a "Comprehensive Health Education and Human Services Grant" which will provide funding for someone to see what health education Winchester has and what needs to be re-installed.

"If the grant were received," Dolan said, "it would be a grant to look at what we have and plan for what we need."

Currently Winchester has a health-related human sexuality presentation in grades five and six. Films are shown and questions are handled by the teachers.

Grades seven, eight and nine also study comprehensive health with one-quarter of the work related to human sexuality.

A high school official, who asked not to be named, has expressed concern over the lack of emphasis in Winchester's program.

"We definitely have a problem with teen pregnancy," the official said, "and there is definitely something lacking in the program."

'Hill' area parking woes outlined to selectmen

"We have no guest parking and no all-day parking," he said. "People park within three feet of hydrants. I called the police department, an officer came and asked people to move. But a few minutes later, other people parked in the same place.

"When I called the police again, they said sorry, but he's too busy," Doenges said.

Selectmen said the neighborhood is not part of a parking study underway.

Town manager Chad Maurer pointed out the "dilemma" of needing parking for resident and business area.

"It's probably the worst section in town for parking," selectman Frank Sopper said. "It's an intolerable situation. But I don't have an answer."

Sopper said problems with construction vehicles blocking roads and sidewalks confirm the need for a town employee to be hired to keep track of construction projects.

Wade Welch, chairman of selectmen, agreed Sopper's proposal should be discussed and put it on the agenda for the Dec. 22 meeting of selectmen.

Doenges, however, said most of the parking shortage in the neighborhood is not caused by construction. "It's the merchants, not the construction workers, Frank," he told Sopper.

Selectmen agreed to ask the police department to enforce parking and traffic regulations more strictly in the area.

Band needs last-minute help for Gator Bowl trip

A goal of $120,000 for the Winchester High School marching band trip to the Gator Bowl Festival in Jacksonville Dec. 26 is in sight but last-minute contributions are needed.

The band consists of not only the musicians, but also the Flag Corps, the Rifle Squad, the Tumblettes, and the Cheerleaders. This organization of over 160 involved one student among six at the high school.

The band was selected through audition to participate in Gator Bowl Festival competition. This will be the third such competition in which the band has participated, bringing honors and awards home from the Cherry Blossom Festival in 1983 and the Peach Bowl Festival in 1985.

In addition to the parade and field competitions of the festival itself, the band will perform with 16 other bands from across the nation at the post-season collegiate Gator Bowl football game in a massed-band pre-game show together.

The band also has been selected as one of four to perform in the half-time show at the game. Both of the shows are expected to be broadcast nationwide over CBS.

While in Florida, the band also will march in the parade at Disney World, and perform at Epcot Center. The five-day trip will be extremely busy for the students and 20 chaperones. Rehearsals, performances, competitions, and parades will leave the group only part of one day to enjoy the activities of Disney World. The trip has been planned to be primarily a learning opportunity for the band.

A committee has been raising funds since last year. Beginning with a cheese and sausage sale, and running through a WHS Band "Pops Concert," the Gator Gala, a raffle, an auction, and a "lip-sync", the committee and the students have been busy. The students themselves and their families have been required to pay approximately half of the costs for this trip.

"In these next few days we must raise approximately $10,000 more to meet the campaign goal," said Sandy Rodgers, chairman of the fund-raising committee. "Many residents and businesses have already made contributions to this project but we need some significant donors to step forward at this 11th hour. I believe the pride which the town has in the band, together with the educational value this trip will be for the students, will elicit the necessary philanthropy from others in town."

The Kickin' Gator has nearly gone the distance for the high school band's trip to the Gator Bowl. The fund-raising committee still needs about $10,000 toward its $120,000 goal.

REAL ESTATE TODAY

Ann Blackham C.R.B.

GETTING BETTER

During the eaarly 1980's, second mortgages were almost a necessity in selling a home. That was when money was tight, interest rates high and seller-financing was almost a MUST. Fortunately things have changed for the better. Today, the mortgage market has stabilized, resulting in adequate supplies of money at affordable interest rates.

Does this mean that today's seller should forget about the second mortgage? Not in all circumstances. If you expect to receive a lot more money than you'll need to purchase your new home, a second mortgage can be an excellent financial move. It can provide you with a secure investment yielding a return higher than most stock, bond, municipal fund or money market investments can match. In addition, the offer of seller financing may result in your receiving a higher price from a buyer who would prefer to make a smaller down payment.

The nicest part about it is that today, the decision is an option rather than a mandate.

No. 1 in Winchester because we care . . . It's more than just a business with us. . . it's you and the professional service we provide for you that is the cornerstone of our continued success . . . that's why more buyers and sellers select ANN BLACKHAM & CO. to be their Real Estate broker.

Dwyer honored by Nurses Association

Margaret E. Dwyer

Margaret E. Dwyer, head nurse in the medical ambulatory care unit at Winchester Hospital, is this year's recipient of the Massachusetts Nurses Association (MNA) Loyal Member Award.

The award was presented at the MNA District V annual meeting. Janet M. Dunphy, executive director, stated, "This distinguished award recognizes and expresses appreciation to a member whose consistent contributions and interest demonstrate support to District V over a number of years."

Making the presentation, Betty Almeida, chairman of the awards committee, said Dwyer "has exhibited conscientious commitment and dedication to the organization and the ongoing goals of the nursing profession.

"She has earned this award by her many contributions to this association." Quoting from the nominations, she read, "She does not just attend meetings. She becomes thoroughly involved in activities of the committees on which she serves and the activities of the organization as a whole. She has attended many continuing education programs, semi-annual and annual meetings, and special events."

Others said of her, "She encourages others to become involved. She participates with zest and enthusiasm in District V. She approaches her work and her committee involvement with a positive attitude and an enthusiasm that is contagious. She has an insatiable appetite for learning and a bottomless swell of goodwill in everything she does.

Her ideas and her leadership expertise have been instrumental in making positive changes. She is an asset to the nursing profession and a loyal and committed member of District V."

Accepting the award, Dwyer expressed appreciation to her colleagues for their support and their recognition of the amount of volunteer time one must contribute in order to be effective. She also spoke of the professionalism that one gains from active involvement.

"We as nurses need to support our professional organizations. When we do, we also benefit from the cohesiveness and the opportunities this provides to broaden our scope," she said.

A graduate of The Malden Hospital School of Nursing, Dwyer has been a member of the nursing department at Winchester Hospital for eight years. She lives in Arlington.

Massachusetts Nurses Association is affiliated with the American Nurses Association. District V is the largest of the district association with 7,000 members and includes the Greater Boston area. Its members represent all aspects of nursing practice and nursing education, and cut across all levels of nursing management.

Class of 1936 donates $312 to Scholarship Foundation

Fred McCormack, former owner of the McCormack Apothecary and President of the Winchester High School Class of 1936 recently presented the Winchester Scholarship Foundation a check for $312.

The check represented the balance of funds collected from the Class of 1936 for their 50th high school reunion.

McCormack, who is now retired on Cape Cod, spent many years supporting the young people of Winchester with his involvement in community activities. He was also renowned for employing the young people who were in need of a job. His efforts to encourage his class to donate to the Winchester Scholarship foundation is appreciated by the foundation, whose goal is to provide benefits to the college-age students in Winchester.

The Foundation encourages other classes to follow the lead of the Class of 1936 with their contributions.

Selectmen, school board favor switching parking lot and tennis courts

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Selectmen and school board members agree: the high school tennis courts and rear parking lot should trade places.

Getting the job done won't be as easy, however.

School board members last week responded to concerns of Spruce Street residents and selectmen about speeding in the neighborhood near the back parking lot entrance.

The lot can not be closed, said school committee acting chairman Michael Ronayne, because it is used by faculty in the daytime and is the only lit area for those using the gym at night to park.

Ronayne said the school department "sympathizes with area residents who are annoyed with speeding cars" and will install two speed bumps on the access road from Spruce Street "as a short-term, immediate, though not complete, solution."

School committee members finally endorsed a plan to switch the tennis courts, which are sinking into the peat and have been officially closed, with the parking lot in question.

The new parking lot, Ronayne said, would allow the "main" door to the gym to be used. It is not used because it is not near a parking lot.

The town's capital planning committee is scheduled to review the switch proposal at its Dec. 23 meeting.

Selectman Frank Sopper said Monday that area residents aren't "annoyed" by speeding cars but instead "fear" for their children's lives.

He said selectmen should close the back entrance but his motion was not seconded.

"The school committee did the best they can," selectman Judie Muggia said. "Switching does take time."

None of the selectmen, however, thought speed bumps in the parking lot's access road would slow down speeders.

Selectmen agreed to tell the school committee of their continuing interest and to ask police to increase patrols in the area.

Residents of the neighborhood appeared before selectmen in October, asking for early relief.

Dover Grille told to solve garbage problem for license

By GEORGE DERRINGER

The Dover Grille will have to improve its garbage and rubbish removal procedures before its common vicutaller's license will be renewed.

Selectmen renewed the licenses of 15 other establishments which sell food for on-premises consumption Monday night but accepted the recommendation of health director Joe Tabbi to withhold renewal from the Dover Grille.

"The health department has received complaints regarding the rubbish and garbage store procedure of this establishment. Only today, we did find that the condition of the garbage and rubbish storage had reached the point where it did create a nuisance," Tabbi said in a memo to selectmen.

A plan for removal of garbage will have to be submitted to the board of health before Tabbi will reverse his recommendation, he said.

Selectmen also renewed the food vendors' licenses for 12 establishments which sell food for consumption off-premises. Only one drew comment.

Selectman Mark Lombardi said Concord Caterers should be reminded that its license renewal "does not mean approval of on-site sales." The store is seeking permission from the planning board for a retail store at 10 Lowell Ave.

Automatic amusement device licenses were renewed for four fraternal organizations, again unanimously.

An auctioneer's permit was granted to Suzy Sullivan. Selectmen will continue to review new rules and regulations for auctioneers at their Dec. 22 meeting.

Lombardi said every organization, including charitable groups exempt from the requirement that auctioneers be state-licensed, should have to get approval from selectmen before conducting an auction.

Selectman Judie Muggia asked, "Are we legislating something that hasn't been a problem?"

Lombardi say the rules should be very specific, even for charitable, religious and fraternal groups.

"Suppose somebody donates the contents of his house to a religion that doesn't observe Sunday," Lombardi said. "So they have an auction. If we can, let's draw stricter rules."

Town counsel Doug Randall will bring tighter rules for consideration Dec. 22.

In other business Monday, selectmen:

• Approved a Boston Edison conduit to be installed on Salisbury Street, about 275 feet southeast of Wildwood Street, for a distance of about eight feet.

• Signed a new contract with the fire fighters' union. The two-year pact calls for 4.5 percent increases in pay with a minimum of $22,069 this year.

• Approved a staging permit for 9-11 Elmwood Ave. subject to conditions which include no parking on both sides of the street, no overnight vehicle parking and no working in the street itself.

Local musicians to to appear on TV on Christmas Eve

The musical program will begin at 11:10 with selections from Handel's "Messiah," Part I, for soloists, chorus, orchestra.

At midnight the service will begin and will include "For Unto Us a Child is Born" and "The Hallelujah Chorus," also from "Messiah." Bishop Johnson of the diocese will speak.

Laura Weylman

Weylman will lead Dartmouth

Junior Laura Weylman of Winchester has been voted co-captain of the 1987 Dartmouth College women's soccer team.

"Laura has a great work ethic and she's a leader by example," Dartmouth coach B.J. O'Hara said. "She a fine athlete and person. With Laura and other co-captian, Jane McBride, we'll have a nice blend of leadership."

Weylman tied as the third-leading scorer on the Dartmouth team this year with two goals and four assists for eight points. The Big Green recorded a 6-6-2 overall mark and 3-3 Ivy League slate.

Weylman was a letterwinner in soccer, indoor and outdoor track and earned 11 letters while captaining the soccer and track squads at Winchester High School.

She was voted as the most improved player on the 1985 Big Green squad after helping Dartmouth to a 5-8-1 record.

She is also a member of the women's track team.

A biology major with career aspirations in medicine, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walther T. Weylman of Winchester.

Tucci will be in Assumption record books

Steve Tucci, a Winchester High School graduate, has begun his fourth year with the Assumption College Hounds hockey team and is heading toward the team's record books.

Tucci entered his senior year at Assumption as the fifth leading scorer in the Hounds' history with 138 points (69 goals). Although it's unlikely he'll reach the top of the overall scoring leaders, Tucci has scored nine goals in the first 11 games this season, bringing him within three of the Assumption goals-scored record.

Tucci is majoring in business management and is expected to break the goals-scored record in January when the Hounds resume play after exam break.

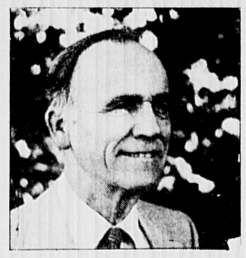

Badminton club cancels sessions

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

CONDOMINIUM FEES

Smart condominium buyers question the monthly fees for maintaining the project's common elements. In examining these charges, it's important to consider what is included.

In projects that offer many services and recreational facilities, fees may be higher. Doormen, telephone answering services, tennis courts, swimming pools and landscaping all increase the costs of running the condominium. Buildings with elevators may be more costly than garden apartments or townhouses. If units are metered separately for heating, air conditioning, gas and electricity, the fees will be less than in projects where utilities are inclueded in the fee. Finally, most condominium associations are far more conservative than individual homeowners in budgeting for major improvements on repairs, and they're likely to include a healthy reserve fund in the condo's budget.

If you are considering a condo purchase, ask your Realtor if you can examine the association's most recent budget. This will tell you what's included in your fee, and you can make sure that reserve funds will cover any planned improvements.

For professional advice, call Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors. Our number is 729-7000, or just drop by our offices at 33 Thompson St., Winchester. We're happy to serve all your real estate needs.

The Winchester Star

COMMENT

Secrecy no help here

By now it should be obvious. The Task Force needs to start over.

Last spring, charges that racial discrimination was used in casting of a play led to creation of a "Task Force on Racial, Cultural and Ethnic Awareness."

So far, so good.

The task force went awry when its meetings and those of its subcommittees weren't generally publicized. The general public became suspicious. Parents, unable to even find out who is on the task force, were naturally afraid the wool would be pulled over their eyes.

The common perception is that the religion subcommittee wanted to ban Santa Claus, a symbol of Christmas though hardly a Christian symbol, from public schools.

Fir trees, making of decorations and Christmas carols would also be taboo, although meaningful songs like "Jingle Bell Rock" could apparently stay.

Vague guidelines were issued to teachers, who were left to interpret them and hope their actions would be "sensitive" to concerns of parents.

The task force is now lost in a sea of suspicion. Charged with promoting "awareness" of differences in Winchester's populace, the task force seems to want to pretend that everyone is "gray."

By "grayness," we mean a papering-over of the fact that Winchester people are very much different — different colors, national origins, cultures and religions.

Our differences are good, not bad. Let's talk about the racial, cultural and ethnic patchwork quilt we call America.

Pretending that religion doesn't matter won't help. If the task force wants to promote awareness, it will encourage discussion of all our differences, including religion. It will not ignore Christianity or Judaism; neither will it ignore other religious and non-religious choices.

To start over in a very touchy area, the task force needs to come clean, conduct all of its discussions with the community (not for the community) and make sure everyone knows exactly what's going on.

Secrecy fosters the very kinds of stereotypes and suspicion the task force was created to combat.

— George Derringer

More than meets the eye on Regents bill, Kraus says

By SEN. DICK KRAUS
Vice Chair, Committee on Education

On Oct. 10, 1986, I went to a hearing regarding the so called "Howell Bill" which would exempt members of the Board of Regents from the conflict of interest law.

I assumed I would be faced with a piece of bad legislation — special interest legislation designed only to benefit a friend of a powerful legislator.

Nick Paleologos, the House Chair of the Education Committee, and I were the only two legislators to attend, so needless to say we got the full brunt of the testimony given that day. After several hours, it was clear to me that much more was at stake than the behavior of Mr. Howell.

In fact, after hearing the testimony and then discussing the matter at length with lawyers representing interests on both sides of the bill, I concluded that we have created a monster in Massachusetts in which we hold public higher education hostage to private education.

The legislature has passed laws saying it is just fine for individuals to sit concurrently on the Board of Regents and on Boards of Trustees of private institutions of higher learning. further, the legislature has required the Board of Regents to allocate degree programs, scholarship aid, and other resources between public and private institutions.

There is scarcely an issue that comes before the Regents that does not directly or indirectly impact the private institutions. So it is the legislature that has created a conflict of interest, not the actions of any one individual.

In fact, records of the Board of Regents show that it has been routine for those simultaneously sitting on private boards to vote on matters directly affecting their private institutions. There are hundreds of such votes recorded.

These votes involve every single one of the 15 persons affiliated with private institutions while serving on the Board of Regents. That is half of all who have ever been Regents. Apparently none, except Mr. Howell, has ever abstained from voting because of possible conflict of interest.

Because of this, the Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts was prepared to file a brief in support of Mr. Howell on the grounds that the Ethics Commission was selectively enforcing the conflict of interest law.

I cannot believe that all 15 Regents who were simultaneously affiliated with private institutions (some are men and women of the cloth) have been rogues. I believe that they all, Mr. Howell included, were doing exactly what they believed the legislature and Governor expected them to do.

I can only conclude that it is the legislature which has created this conflict for those citizens who accepted a position on the Board. I therefore believe it is the legislature's responsibility to remove this inherent conflict.

It is unfair and unethical to allow these people to be persecuted for earnestly trying to do the job the legislature created for them. That is why I voted for the bill which would absolve past and present Regent's members who have done their best with an impossible mandate.

As to the future, I also have submitted legislation for the 1987 legislative year which seeks to eliminate future conflicts by forbidding simultaneous service on the Board of Regents and Massachusetts private boards.

This is only fitting as persons sitting on boards of public institutions of higher education have always been excluded from the Board of Regents because of a perceived conflict of interest.

In order to allow for input by trustees of public and private boards, I am proposing an Advisory Board to the Board of Regents. Advisory Board members would be members of both public and private boards of higher education and would be able to consult with and advise the Board of Regents, but they could not participate in decision making.

With the passage of the recent "Howell" bill we will have absolved previous and current Regents from an inherent conflict created by the legislature. With the passage of the proposed Kraus bill we will eliminate the inherent conflict for the future and will protect the integrity of higher education in Massachusetts.

"Christmas At The State House"

By SEN. JOHN F. PARKER
Republican Floor Leader
State House, Boston

T'was the night before Christmas in the Senate and House,
Not a legislator was stirring; not even a mouse.
Their stockings were hung by the rostrums with care,
In hopes that favorite bills would soon be there.

The members were sure they had nothing to dread,
As visions of sugar plums danced through their heads.
All they needed was action before the leaders took leave,
Hoping to get their bills through this Christmas Eve.

Bulger rules the Senate and Keverian the lower branch.
It's up to them if bills have any sort of a chance.
They're two jolly elfs, full of laughter and song,
They expect colleagues to know it's best to go along.

With the Speaker and President the big game of the day,
Is to sidetrack legislation; get it out of the way.
Some bills filed by members would surely wreck the bank,
So the best way to go is to drop them in the tank.

They run afoul of Common Cause and the liberals to boot,
Who want every bill voted on; nothing down the chute.
It can't come out that way the leaders sternly speak,
The Duke would be in a rubber room in about a week.

The leaders play the game when a bill has its faults.
On to Ways and Means and other burial vaults.
10,000 bills shouldn't go to the Governor they say,
About 700 is enough through the Orders of the Day.

Ways and Means is under seige to report Santa Claus Bills.
The hue and cry is always to cure more human ills.
But Voke and McGovern keep the goodie bag tied tight.
They play Mr. Scrooge or the budget is out of sight.

There's no question the members are weary and tried,
Their ears are ringing and their patience expired.
Twelve months of oratory, bluff, bluster and delay,
Has bolstered the argument for prorogation in May.

In mid-session the House struck a different pace,
Help Rep. Jim Collins win the Chancellor's race.
Things were going fine until Mr. Dukakis stepped in.
Then it was curtains for good Representative Jim.

Speaker Keverian was Collins' big man in the fight,
And he didn't take the loss like a pussycat might.
George flexed his muscles and took to the floor,
Defending Jim Howell whom the Duke gave the door,

Coupled with a vote for Collins and an Ethics fluke,
Howell as a Regent was in trouble with the Duke.
Keverian having none of the charges being aired,
Filed a Howell relief bill in the House he chaired,

The bill went all the way to Dukakis in his lair,
Who hesitated then vetoed it as patently unfair.
Speaker Keverian jumped the veto; overrode it with ease.
President Bulger did the same on a one-vote squeeze.

Things aren't so cordial at the State House as of now,
George and Bill have chastized Dukakis and how.
He's gritting his teeth and asking Santa for a lift.
"Get them off my back," could be his hopeful gift.

If Governor Mike hears the carollers serenading below,
And rushes to the window to catch the big show,
It could be Keverian and Bulger singing in the night;
"Merry Christmas Mr. Duke, but stay out of our sight."

BEACON HILL

The House. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 5 roll calls from late sessions during the week of December 1-5. There were no roll calls during the week of December 8-12.

BCH(H 6369)- House 99-32, gave near final approval and sent to the Senate a bill authorizing the city of Boston to borrow money for the renovation and replacement of major portions of Boston City Hospital (BCH).

Supporters said that without passage of the bill, the chance to renovate BCH will be lost.

Opponents said the bill is irresponsible and loose and does not even list the amount of the proposed bond issue.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

Solid Waste(H 6521)- House 117-7, gave near final approval and sent to the Senate a $250 million package for a solid waste management program designed to ease the growing shortage of solid waste disposal sites.

Supporters said the bill provides a new siting procedure and funding for a grant program which will help this growing problem.

Opponents said the bill is flawed and does not give local communities enough power.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Siting(H 6521)- House 77-48, rejected an amendment to a section of the solid waste bill which includes language providing that any determination made by the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) regarding the suitability of a location for a landfill facility will be binding upon the local board of health in its overall consideration.

The amendment changes the language to remove the binding provision and provides only that local boards consider DEQE's report.

Amendment supporters said this protects communties and gives local health boards final control.

Opponents, noting the bill contains safeguards, said the amendment weakens the package and will result in no sites.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Legal Fees(H 6521)- House 75-44, rejected a solid waste bill amendment requiring applicants for facility sitings in a city or town to give the local community one percent of the estimated cost of the project to be used for appeals, legal fees and environmental assistance.

Amendment supporters said this would help cities and towns in disputed cases and would also fund environmental studies.

Opponents said the amendment is unfair because it would cost applicants a substantial amount of money.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. Saltmarsh voted yes.

Surtax(H 6487)- House 107-6, gave final approval and sent to the Senate a bill immediately repealing the 7.5 percent surtax.

Supporters said the repeal will save $135 million.

Opponents said the money should be used for worthwile programs and argued the state cannot afford the revenue loss.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Church-state: no domination

TO THE EDITOR:

About 300 A.D., when Constantine declared the church legal, ecclesiastical power soon found an opportunity to rise up and seek to dominate the state. Later, when King Henry, for personal reasons, resisted church policy in England, he declared the state the authority over the church.

From these two extreme positions our forefathers set out for a land where neither church nor state would make laws regarding the other. Indeed, our constitution states clearly that "congress shall make no laws establishing religion nor prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

Public spiritual expression is the reward of separation of church and state.

Public suppression of spiritual expression is the result of official establishment of laws against the church.

Public life is an extension of our private lives. Public and private are not two lives, but two dimensions of the same life.

However well meaning the school department may have been in its recent decision to eliminate the celebration of Christmas in the public schools of Winchester and replace it with a nameless "holiday celebration," they were unconstitutional.

This is an issue that reaches far beyond a mere Christian celebration. It is just one of many traditions and time-honored beliefs this nation will see disappear in the next few years unless people speak up.

Secularistic pluralism — or humanism — which is at the root of the Christmas controversy, has one basic goal — to re-define life for American society. And the definition always originates with them.

Look, for example, at the Dec. 11 article in The Star, " Schools study multi-cultural holiday option."

May we ask you, did you receive a questionaire requesting your vote whether you wanted to maintain our 200-year-old Christmas tradition, or did you have a "task force" decide what was best for your children?

Not only did the school officials redefine our well-defined Christmas season for us, they replaced it with their own subjective philosophy.

Beginning with changing the name from "Christmas" to "holiday season," they moved to eliminate all public mention of the nativity and replace it with a more appropriate theme of peace and love. In a word, they decided for us what is best for our children and the community at large.

If congress shall make no laws prohibiting the free exercise of religion, I doubt that the Winchester school committee is legally correct in eliminating the definition and public celebration of Christmas in a tax supported institution.

In America there is room for everybody. Our constitution insures it.

Loop rental rates will have to vary

TO THE EDITOR:

In my letter last week, I urged that the Woburn Loop be rented rather than sold. Title would remain in the town, against the strong probability that the Loop's future use as a thoroughfare becomes essential.

I ruined the letter, however, by an ill-considered afterthought.

Having suggested that space should be rented "at a nominal price," I should have placed a period.

Instead, I added, "say $1 per square foot per annum." Considering what I have to pay over town, in Boston, or at the airport per hour, $1 per year seems, offhand, to be reasonable enough.

When I had to think it over, however, I began to realize just how unrealistic my suggestion actually would seem.

There must be upward of 150,000 square feet of space in the Winchester section of the Loop. Only a few relatively small sections will ever be in serious demand.

Competition for these few desirable sections will soon enough determine what the market will bear — without any gratuitous suggestion on my part!

Top prices for the "good parts," moderate prices for those in slightly less demand and a penny or two for the great bulk of the remainder.

If it turns out that the average price, good, bad and indifferent, for the whole 150,000 square feet is around 10 cents per square foot per annum, then it follows that the town would take in somewhere around $15,000 per year, year after year.

And remember, the town still owns the land!

I hope this effort will serve to set the record straight. I certainly did not intend to imply that I thought the town could get $1 per square foot for the whole 150,000 square foot area. Megabucks is over on Beacon Hill, not here in Winchester.

BEACON HILL

The Senate. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local senators' votes on two roll calls from late sessions during the week of December 1-5. There were no roll calls during the week of December 8-12.

Drunk Driving(S 2230)- Senate 32-0, approved its own version of a bill imposing tougher penalties on drunk drivers.

The House passed a different version and the bill was sent to a conference committee.

Supporters said the bill is a major attempt at getting tough with drunk drivers.

Opponents said the bill is flawed and could present serious constitutional problems.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Senator Richard Kraus voted no.

Drunk Driving Amendment(S 2230)- Senate 29-6, rejected a drunk driving bill amendment to a section of the bill which provides automatic license suspension for anyone who registers a blood alcohol level of .10 or higher only if the person is under 21, has been previously convicted or has caused bodily injury.

The amendment would eliminate the conditions and allow suspension for a level of .10 or higher.

Amendment supporters said the bill discriminates against persons under 21 and said the amendment toughens the bill.

Opponents said the amendment goes too far and noted this section of the bill addresses two major problems—persons under 21 and repeat offenders.

A Yea vote is for the amendment which allows for suspension of the license of anyone with .10 or higher. A Nay vote is against the amendment.

Kraus voted no.

Enjoying the season: or, visions of bluejeans and paintdrips

By TERRY MAROTTA

It never fails: each Christmas you vow you'll do things different: get the work done early and enjoy the season; deck the halls and rest ye merry.

But when the 25th comes, it finds you in the kitchen, somehow, deep-breathing into a lunch bag, while 30 guests and relatives wander like the Undead back and forth in your living room, waist-high in the ruins of shredded gift paper.

Each year I swear, "THIS time I'll get it right;" but each year the day finds me in the full flower of holiday panic.

Take '85.

It was Christmas Eve, a special day designed for sniffing fir-scented air and watching bits of tinsel shimmer and waft in the gentle gusts of household traffic.

What were my husband David and I doing on this hushed and fragrant day?

Wallpapering the bathroom, of course.

We'd begun the job back in November, and I'd be darned it I'd let Santa come find us still so beset by the Bad Elf of Procrastination.

The whole upstairs was filled with curling bits of sandpaper; paint-bushes lay in advanced states of rigor mortis; a fine mantle of spackle-dust covered the whole.

As if that weren't enough, our fourth-grader and her two chums had invited their parents to our house to hear a concert of holiday music on their flutes and clarinets. They came to the front door in lipstick and neckties. We trailed down from the john, in bluejeans and paint drips. What's wrong with this picture?

Two years ago, I tried a new weapon against holiday panic, and told David that if I were going to get stuck buying all 800 presents, HE would have to help wrap them; we'd do it together. But since the Procrastination Elf IS his patron saint, after all, no wrapping, not a jot of it, had occurred before - you guessed it - Christmas eve.

We locked ourselves in the attic with 36 giant rolls of gift paper and started in on the piles. Our three children milled mournfully downstairs as the hours ticked by. We wrapped hard and we wrapped fast. Under the best of circumstances, David is not a good wrapper. He waits 'til 8:00 Christmas morning to wrap what he's giving me, for example. By then the paper's all gone, of course. So my gifts come to me rolled in newspaper and taped shut with Band-Aids. They look like a demented gorilla wrapped them. This particular year, everyone's present looked that way. TWO demented gorillas had done the job, snipping and taping furiously, up under the eaves.

The next year, though, I was smart: I wrapped as I bought. I started in October. Bought and wrapped and stashed as I went, bought and wrapped and stashed. The baby helped, sweetly and busily bustling from package to package. It wasn't 'til the 24th, when we hauled them all out of hiding in the dark of night, that we realized: none of them had tags. The sweet busy baby had ripped them all off. We spent THAT Christmas eve peeking up the cuffs and down the shirtfronts of two hours worth of presents - unwrapping them, for all and intents and purposes, to figure who they were for.

And this Christmas?

Well, this Christmas we feel pretty hopeful.

There are no makeovers in process in any of the rooms; no moon on the breast of the new-fallen spackle-dust. As far as I know, no one is invited over for Yuletide tootlings on wind instruments. And, wonder of wonders, the presents are bought, wrapped, tagged and stashed - one full week before the great day.

Christmas Eve approaches. Will all be calm? Will all be bright? The signs are very good.

My little girl did come home from school today with large and poxlike blossoms on her face and chest. The oven thermometer is showing signs of losing its mind again.

But Christmas will come, all the same. The Great Day will take us as it finds us. And I, for one, mean to greet it with open arms.

Winchester Hospital needs people for Lifeline program

WANTED: Special type of person interested in helping others. Must be responsible, have good telephone presence and good interpersonal skills. Must be able to read maps, move furniture and crawl on the floor. Good eyesight and willingness to learn about electronic equipment essential. Hours vary. No pay.

Winchester Hospital has found several "special" individuals who meet these qualifications. They are the Lifeline volunteers—the installers and the telephone contact people who help to make the program possible.

"Others" in this case are individuals who, because they live alone and have a medical or physical condition, have become Lifeline subscribers rather than give up the independence of living in their own homes.

Lifeline connects a subscriber's phone with the emergency response monitor in the Winchester Hospital emergency department, giving users the security of knowing that help is always available.

Joanne Dyson, head nurse in the emergency department, said, "We have had several calls from a patient who falls out of her wheelchair. If it were not for Lifeline, we don't know how she would get help. All she does is push the call button every subscriber wears.

"As soon as the alarm sounds, we identify the caller and look up his or her Lifeline information, which is on file in the hospital emergency room. We try to call to determine what is wrong. If there is no answer, we call one of the responders who lives nearby and previously agreed to respond in case of emergency.

"On the few occasions when we cannot reach a responder, or the subscriber has a life-threatening medical condition which might necessitate calling an ambulance, we immediately call the fire department, who goes to the rescue."

Dyson said that once the subscriber is back in her wheelchair, she always calls to thank the nurses. "We have gotten to know her, and she knows us. Because she lives alone, it is a tremendous help for her to know that we are here."

Dyson spoke of another subscriber, a woman with a heart condition, who had been on the system only a few days when she pushed her help button. "She was lying on her couch and couldn't get up. I tried to call her, and when I couldn't reach her, I called her daughter, who said, 'Something must be wrong. I'll go right away.' Within a short time, mother and daughter arrived by ambulance and the mother was admitted with a myocardial infarction. Her daughter was so grateful that her mother had agreed to have Lifeline."

Dyson said the emergency department doesn't receive many trouble calls, but "when we do, we're glad to be able to provide assistance. Answering those calls doesn't interrupt our care of our other patient at all."

Dorothy Roemer, discharge planning coordinator, told about another subscriber, a woman who was constantly falling. With each fall, she was admitted to the hospital. Since becoming a Lifeline subscriber, she hasn't had any more trouble.

"The only change is that she now has Lifeline. It is as if there are invisible eyes watching her. She is one of the best examples I know of someone who truly benefits from feeling the security that the system provides," Roemer says.

Roemer emphasized that subscribers do not have to be confined to their homes. "Some of our subscribers work all day. One—a gentleman who works fulltime—had a heart attack. At night, he wants to know that should something happen, he will be able to summon help.

A Winchester man who lives alone and has a heart condition, got Lifeline because his daughter, who lives in California, said it would make her feel better.

John Null, right, of Winchester, a volunteer installer for the Lifeline program of Winchester Hospital, is greeted by another Winchester resident, a Lifeline participant for the past two years who is not identified because he lives alone.

Referrals come from various sources. According to Roemer, who is credited with building the program to 62 subscribers, "Most come from family members. Others come from physicians, and many read about the program in the newspaper."

In addition to Winchester and Reading, subscribers live in Stoneham, Woburn, Andover, Malden, Medford, Melrose, Somerville, Lexington and Wilmington.

Volunteers come from many of these same communities. In Winchester, John Null is an installer.

According to a recent article in Parade magazine, Lifeline (which was developed by a Watertown engineer) serves 90,000 Americans, most of them elderly and alone. It also serves infants at risk of SIDS (Sudden Infant Death Syndrome) and handicapped persons of all ages. Last year, the system responded to 45,000 emergencies. There is no way of telling how many lives it may have saved. Subscribers pay a monthly fee of $15.

For more information, call 729-9000, ext. 3104.

Jennifer Barry, center, was one of two airline ticket winners given prizes by Tony Sampson and Elaine Mahoney of Colonial Travel Service of Winchester. The travel agency donated tickets to any destination as prizes in a raffle to benefit the high school band's trip to the Gator Bowl.

Airline tickets given to winners of raffle held by marching band

Two lucky couples will travel roundtrip from Boston to any destination in the United States as a result of winning the recent raffle held by the Winchester High School Marching Band.

The winners are Michael Ferri of Saugus, and Jennifer Barry of Winchester. Their names were drawn by Priscilla Miller, director of the band, at the band's auction.

Two first-place prizes were donated by Colonial Travel Service of Winchester. The pairs of airline tickets are on American Airlines and Eastern Airlines.

New owners Elaine Mahoney and Tony Sampson, recognize the important role the band plays in the school lives of the students involved, as well as the town in general.

"We were glad to be able to help the band this way," said Mahoney. "Everyone likes to travel, and as a travel agency we thought these prizes would be a good enticement for people to support the band by buying raffle tickets."

Jack Looney was coordinator for the raffle. "The kids in the band really went all out for this raffle," said Looney. "They each sold tickets as individuals. And then they went out in groups to 'blitz' the town. There was a lot of enthusiasm for this project."

All this enthusiasm brought in approximately $7,000. This took the Band one step closer to its fundraising goal so they can go the the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville Dec. 26.

POINSETTIA

Flower of the Holy Night

The Poinsettia, best known as our traditional Christmas decoration and centerpiece is really fairly new to this country. It wasn't until 1828 that Joel Robert Poinsett, the first United States ambassador to Mexico, introduced it to America. But the association with Christmas actually started much earlier.

Legend tells of a small Mexican village offering gifts to a crèche one Christmas Eve. A small boy, having nothing to give, knelt outside to pray. Where the boy had knelt immediately grew a beautiful plant with brilliant scarlet flowers. And thus the poinsettia became known as the Flower of the Holy Night.

At Mahoney's we've been raising our very own unique crop of The Flower of the Holy Night for over a decade. We have more than 30 greenhouses specially designed to meet the demanding and exacting procedure required to yield over 70,000 of New England's most beautiful poinsettias every year.

Our poinsettias are propagated from a special variety of cutting. They produce a heartier plant with brilliant longer-lasting flowers (bracts). You can choose red, white, pink, or a single pot with a combination of all three.

We carefully regulate the growth of our poinsettias to keep them from becoming too tall. By doing this the plant concentrates its energy on developing many more flowers and a denser, deep green foliage. You'll immediately see the difference. They're rounder, fuller and more healthy looking and make for more beautiful gifts and more graceful centerpieces.

Rounder, fuller, more healthy looking with more flowers and dense, deep green foliage.

Each poinsettia comes with an informative care sheet and, for no extra charge, you can have your poinsettia wrapped in the traditional red or green foil, or placed in a handsome basket.

Raising the most beautiful poinsettia is very demanding but, when you grow 70,000 of them each year, you become very good at it.

lot about (liquor licenses) that I do not understand and I'd like to have some answers," moved approval of all restaurant and club liquor licenses.

Without questions or discussion, his motion passed unanimously.

Ninety minutes later, discussion of the role of selectmen resumed.

"I'd like to respond to Judie's earlier comments," Sopper said. "She demands the names of the complainants. But I thought last week we decided the public didn't have to give their names to make complaints.

"It's not the duty of the public to be policemen or zoning enforcement officers. If those people do their jobs, the selectmen will have less to do," he said.

Deering said he shares Muggia's feelings.

"There has been no formal complaint about liquor," he said. "The papers we have here show the police department, the building inspector and the board of health have no problems. And I have personally not received any citizen complaints."

During his prepared speech to liquor licensees, Sopper said he realized they were concerned because they were asked to personally appear before selectmen for the first time in many years.

"The rules have been changed, regarding the duties of public officials and employees," Sopper said.

"A liquor license is a very serious responsibility, allowing you to dispense alcohol, an addictive, mind-altering drug.

"Abuse of this drug is most tragic, causing accidents and alcoholism, a disease which attacks first the brain, then the whole body and eventually causes death," Sopper said.

Sopper referred to a pending suit against the town in which the plaintiffs claim the selectmen were aware of a situation and did not act. Vincent J. Marquardo, 20, died at 2 a.m. New Year's Day, 1984, in a jail cell after he was arrested by police and charged with operating under the influence.

"Until four or five years ago, public officials were immune. Now they can be held personally liable (for their official actions)," Sopper said.

The first-year selectman said he wants all the town's liquor rules and regulations enforced.

"To the clubs, I urge you not to allow anyone to leave intoxicated. And you should have a program to help any of your members who have a problem with alcohol abuse," he said.

The Winchester Star

WINCHESTER STAR

"It's hard to imagine the magnitude of a clock in a tower, and then look at a delicate, tiny device small enough to be worn around a woman's neck," Crochetiere said.

Time not on his hands: Tufts professor fascinated by clocks

William Crochetiere is fascinated by machines. And to him, the old-time clock is the quintessential machine.

Crochetiere, chairman of Tufts University's engineering design department and a Winchester resident got a chance to visit the cities that created the object of his hobby this summer when he was appointed one of two scholars-in-residence at Tuft's summer school in Talloires, France.

He visited regions of Switzerland and France where the watch industry thrived, and built a working clock out of paper to demonstrate one of the clock's internal mechanisms for a summer school seminar, and was woken up by a clock in the local bell tower.

But the best part for Crochetiere was Le Chaux-de-Fonds, Switzerland, where one of the biggest clock museums in the region is located.

"It was great! Not enough time ...what to see?" Crochetiere wrote in a diary of his trip to Talloires, jokingly titled "The Exploits of a Scholar-in-Residence."

"Listened and watched the carillon ring at 3 p.m. Watched a slide show on the history of the clock, and tried to take pictures of some of the displays. Time was up. Couldn't even decide on a book. Must come back again," he wrote.

While Crochetiere has several books on clock history, he said pictures just don't do justice to the clocks he saw in the European museums. "You can hear them ticking, and imagine the tension and forces being transmitted through them," he said.

"It's hard to imagine the magnitude of a clock in a tower, and then look at a delicate, tiny device small enough to be worn around a woman's neck," Crochetiere said.

Most modern clocks aren't machines, and they don't interest Crochetiere, although he wears a digital watch (and calls himself a traitor for wearing one) so he can time himself when he runs.

It's old-time machines like the big, clunky adding machines Crochetiere likes best. "They had a certain beauty and simplicity," he said. "If they break down, it's obvious what was wrong with them. Now you can't do anything without an oscilloscope."

Quartz clocks are cheaper and more accurate than their earlier counterparts, but he says the appeal of mechanical clocks is that "you can take the back off and see things move."

Crochetiere likes to explore the history of machines, follow them through history to see how they started, changed and became what they are today. "The clock is a classic example because it has a beginning, maturity and decline that is very well-documented," he said.

The clock mechanism called the escapement is particularly interesting to Crochetiere. It is the device that provides the start and stop motion that allows a clock to tick off the seconds.

He has a threory, he says, that "technologies don't die, they just resurtace in different forms." But one exception to his theory is the clock's mechanical escapement— to Crochetiere's knowledge, it has never been used in any form for anything else.

While Crochetiere does enjoy books on clock history, he doesn't own many clocks. He does have a pocket watch and a shelf clock he says he is in the process of repairing, and he has taken a course on antique clock repair.

As with most engineers, Crochetiere's real love is designing, building and fixing things. He says one of his earliest recollections of when he was growing up in Lawrence, Mass., was trying to convert his wooden toy train into an electric train by wrapping wire around it and plugging it into the wall.

"I blew a fuse. I remember it because my father was angry with me. I'm surprised I didn't electrocute myself," he says.

He also remembers working on some of his mother's kitchen applinces when he was older. But his apprenticeship at General Electric's machine shop in Lynn was a turning point, he says.

"Learning how to take a drawing of something and figure out which machines you needed to make it was a real revelation for me. People take those things for granted—it was fun to create something.'

Crochetiere participated in the apprenticeship through an undergraduate Tufts program that allowed student engineers to get an associate's degree in four years while working at the plant, which made turbines and jet engines, during the day and attending classes at night.

He attended Tufts two more years to get his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering in 1962 and then went on to Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, where he earned a master's degree in engineering and a Ph.D. degree in biomedical engineering.

"There I was working on the human machine, getting paralyzed limbs to move," he says. Crochetiere did some of the pioneering work that led later to an Ohio doctor's well-publicized use of computer-controlled electrical impulses to allow paraplegics to walk.

Crochetiere, who will celebrate his 20th year on the Tufts faculty in 1987, also was the driving force behind the Rehabilitation Engineering Center on the Boston campus. The center, now led by his former student, assistant professor Richard Foulds, uses computers and robotics to help handicapped people develop vocational and daily living skills.

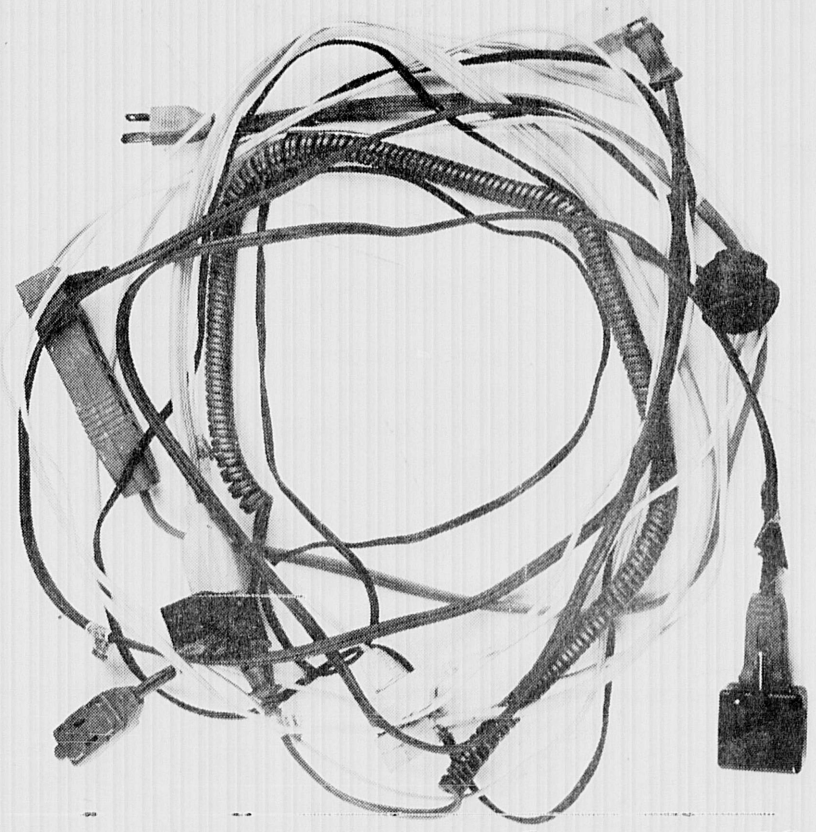

In addition to working on clocks, machine shop tools, computers and houses (Crochetiere built a house in Maine and worked extensively on his Winchester home), he has restored a 1953 MG in British racing green and he has two other antique cars that he plans to restore.

"I wanted to build things," Crochetiere says. "I guess that's why I became an engineer."

Don't over-extend yourself this holiday season.
If you have extra lighting needs over the holidays, don't attach more than one extension cord to any single wall outlet. An overloaded circuit can overheat wires, causing a potential fire hazard. Outside, make sure your extension cords, and lights, are designed for outdoor use. Indoor lights aren't properly insulated against wet snow, and using them outside could cause fires. Finally, make sure all the electrical products used are Underwriter's Laboratory (UL) approved for maximum safety.

Quartz clocks are cheaper and more accurate than their earlier counterparts, but he says the appeal of mechanical clocks is that "you can take the back off and see things move."

Crochetiere likes to explore the history of machines, follow them through history to see how they started, changed and became what they are today. "The clock is a classic example because it has a beginning, maturity and decline that is very well-documented," he said.

The clock mechanism called the escapement is particularly interesting to Crochetiere. It is the device that provides the start and stop motion that allows a clock to tick off the seconds.

He has a threory, he says, that "technologies don't die, they just resurface in different forms." But one exception to his theory is the clock's mechanical escapement— to Crochetiere's knowledge, it has never been used in any form for anything else.

While Crochetiere does enjoy books on clock history, he doesn't own many clocks. He does have a pocket watch and a shelf clock he says he is in the process of repairing, and he has taken a course on antique clock repair.

As with most engineers, Crochetiere's real love is designing, building and fixing things. He says one of his earliest recollections of when he was growing up in Lawrence, Mass., was trying to convert his wooden toy train into an electric train by wrapping wire around it and plugging it into the wall.

"I blew a fuse. I remember it because my father was angry with me. I'm surprised I didn't electrocute myself," he says.

He also remembers working on some of his mother's kitchen applinces when he was older. But his apprenticeship at General Electric's machine shop in Lynn was a turning point, he says.

"Learning how to take a drawing of something and figure out which machines you needed to make it was a real revelation for me. People take those things for granted—it was fun to create something."

Crochetiere participated in the apprenticeship through an undergraduate Tufts program that allowed student engineers to get an associate's degree in four years while working at the plant, which made turbines and jet engines, during the day and attending classes at night.

He attended Tufts two more years to get his bachelor's degree in electrical engineering in 1962 and then went on to Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, where he earned a master's degree in engineering and a Ph.D. degree in biomedical engineering.

"There I was working on the human machine, getting paralyzed limbs to move," he says. Crochetiere did some of the pioneering work that led later to an Ohio doctor's well-publicized use of computer-controlled electrical impulses to allow paraplegics to walk.

Crochetiere, who will celebrate his 20th year on the Tufts faculty in 1987, also was the driving force behind the Rehabilitation Engineering Center on the Boston campus. The center, now led by his former student, assistant professor Richard Foulds, uses computers and robotics to help handicapped people develop vocational and daily living skills.

In addition to working on clocks, machine shop tools, computers and houses (Crochetiere built a house in Maine and worked extensively on his Winchester home), he has restored a 1953 MG in British racing green and he has two other antique cars that he plans to restore.

"I wanted to build things," Crochetiere says. "I guess that's why I became an engineer."

Don't over-extend yourself this holiday season.

If you have extra lighting needs over the holidays, don't attach more than one extension cord to any single wall outlet. An overloaded circuit can overheat wires, causing a potential fire hazard. Outside, make sure your extension cords, and lights, are designed for outdoor use. Indoor lights aren't properly insulated against wet snow, and using them outside could cause fires. Finally, make sure all the electrical products used are Underwriter's Laboratory (UL) approved for maximum safety.

McCall teachers hold coffee

The staff of the McCall Junior High School resource room, led by Barbara B. O'Connell assisted by Josephine Newell and Sarah Mullen, with members of the parents' association, recently sponsored a morning coffee and discussion for parents and staff.

The meeting was the first of a series to improve communication and understanding of special education issues at McCall.

Bartlett has holiday spirit

Bartlett School parents, staff, and friends gathered in the foyer Dec. 10 for the 16 annual "Holly Party."

After a social hour, donated items were raffled with proceeds benefitting the Barlett School Development Fund. Donations included poinsettias from Mahoney's Rocky Ledge, a Christmas tree from Spence Farms, a Christmas cookie box, bottles of "cheer," a fruit basket, and Jason's Beauty Salon gift certificate.

Each day Bartlett children take chances on children's toys and games donated by parents. Winners will be announced at an all-school gathering in the auditorium Friday, Dec. 19, after which parties will be held in all classrooms. Again proceeds benefit the development fund. This year parents have voted to use these funds for new playground equipment.

In the spirit of the season parents and children are filling boxes in the foyer with used toys to be sent to a women's shelter in Roxbury. Funds from the classroom donations boxes will be sent to Globe Santa and the Tom Dooley Refugee Hosptial in Thailand.

The sub-primary class visited Fairlawn Nursing home Dec. 11 and brought gifts and sang to residents. On Dec. 18, grades five and six will sing at the Winchester Nursing Home and grades seven and eight will sing at Fairlawn.

The Bartlett Drama Club presented scenes from Dickens Christmas Carol to the school children in the morning and to parents in the evening, Dec. 16.

Patricia Swartz, Elizabeth Ladd and Lindsay Wasserman wear costumes and painted faces at the Winchester Cooperative Nursery School "circus."

Circus lives at nursery school

The circus came to town last week. After completing a unit of study on creative dramatics, using the circus as a theme, the three- and four-year-olds at Winchester Cooperative Nursery School staged a circus for family, friends and students in the pre-kindergarten class.

Following a costume parade, children performed feats of derring-do as clowns, acrobats, "motorcycle" racers and "lion" tamers, to the delight of the popcorn-munching audience.

Winchester Cooperative Nursery School, founded in 1968, offers programs for 3- and 4-year-olds and pre-kindergarteners in which parents and children participate in a cooperative learning experience.

There are currently openings in the 5-morning and 4-afternoon pre-kindergarten classes for children who were four years old by September 1986. For information, call Phyllis Murphy at 729-6270 or the school at 729-2003.

David Sullivan and Nathaniel Fisher relax at the Winchester Cooperative Nursery School "circus."

Hosts sought for 'Up With People' cast

Host families are needed for international cast members of the "Up With People" show planned by the Northeast Metropolitan Regional Vocational High School in Wakefield.

Thomas Markham, superintendent-director of the school which serves Winchester students, spoke to Winchester selectmen Monday night, seeking support from townspeople.

Shows will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 13 and 14 at the school. BayBanks Middlesex has underwritten the cost.

"Up With People" is a two-hour musical show which looks ahead to the 21st century, envisioning floating cities, interstellar travel, songwriting computers and a global community of mankind.

Cast members will arive Jan. 10 and leave Jan. 15. Hosts will provide bed and breakfast for cast members from many nations.

For information, call the school at 246-0810.

Indoor track attracts individual competitors

By BRENDAN FARRINGTON

As the winter sports season comes to Winchester High School, most people will focus their attention on the more glamourous sports of basketball, hockey and wrestling, but most of Winchester's hardest working athelete's will go largely unnoticed.

The boys and girls indoor track teams begin their winter season Saturday against Belmont, and it is likely the work and effort of their athletes will not cause much excitement in Winchester.

Track is an individual sport. The pressure the participants face is not in the form of team accomplishment, but in individual performance. The athletes are on their own, pushing hard to accomplish their best.

As far as Winchester's success is concerned, team records are not as important as the personal achievements of each team member. Win or lose, as long as the athletes did there best and were able to participate, the meets are successful.

Coaches Tom Kline (girls) and Steve Norton (boys) have kept that attitude in Winchester and have made the indoor track teams a sport anyone in the high school can enjoy if they are willing to make the effort. There are no losers on the teams and no one sits on the bench.

"People get so wrapped with scores and top performances they forget about all the little extra things that really matter," Kline said.

The "little extra things" are not so little. They are the satisfaction each athlete gets from each performance, the hours of practice to improve running times, and the development each individual makes on and off the track.

These things tend to get overlooked by outsiders when a meet is lost.

Coach Norton sees other "little things" on his team.

"I have to work, so I don't get to the high school exactly at 3:30, but when I walk up to that gym, the kids are already working hard and those are the little things that mean a lot to a coach."

Track participants are not your average athletes. Some have not competed in other sports, but find themselves working harder and accomplishing more than other sports participants.

"It's not easy and they stick with it," Norton said, "My kids are going out and running ten miles. I defy anybody in that school who is not a runner to be able to handle that, and I have freshmen who love it."

Track participants are probably the most satisfied athletes in high school because they find satisfaction within themselves. There may not be any Super Bowls or championships in line for the Sachems and Sachemettes, but there will be an inner reward just as valuable.

As long as that's remembered, Winchester will have two more winning teams, even if the records don't show it.

Sachem wrestlers compile 47-3 mark

By BRENDAN FARRINGTON

The Winchester High School wrestling team has compiled a 47-3 record over the past three years, making it one of the top teams in the Middlesex League.

This year's team will no doubt be strong. The question is if the 1986-87 Sachems can match the success of the last three seasons.

The Sachems have some outstanding wrestlers, but have lost several seniors to graduation, including All-Stars Alex Puchulu and Anthony Mercado, and have lost some quality as a whole.

Meanwhile other teams around the league are coming back even stronger, including Woburn, the team that tied the Sachems for the Middlesex League title last year.

Winchester will not lose its status as a top team but will have a tougher time on the mats this winter.

The Sachems were scheduled to begin their season yesterday against Concord-Carlisle and were expected to be successful.

Winchester is fairly well balanced as a team and still has a good line-up of talent. Bill Murphy, Greg Doherty and David Carter are returning Middlesex League All-Stars and coach Larry Tremblay sees a lot of other talent on the team.

Tremblay said the team has a good attitude and has been working hard for the winter season. The wrestlers should still provide one of the stronger teams of Winchester's winter sports program and will still be a challange to their opponents.

The Sachems will wrestle Saturday against Brockton and Plymouth-Carver at Brockton.

Stackpole on All-N.E. team

Winchester High School graduate Jeff Stackpole has been named to the 1986 All-New England Football Conference Honorable Mention Team after helping the Westfield State College Owls finish with the best record of their football history.

Stackpole, the son of Phil and Alice Stackpole of 1 Standish Lane, led the Owls with 21 receptions and accumulated 269 yards on the season.

Buckley wins Colby letter

Karen Buckley of Winchester, a senior government major at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, recently received a varsity letter in women's field hockey.

Playing the position of sweep, she helped lead her team to a 6-4-1 overall record.

Buckley is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth T. Buckley and a graduate of Winchester High School.

Thilly, Hare score at judo tournament

As it turned out, Thilly worked for only a combined total of 20 seconds in two matches and never went to the mat at all. In both matches an experienced larger opponent attacked with a backward push to the right.

Both times Thilly took two steps backward and to the left, spun under his opponent and threw with ippon seionage or shoulder throw for a full point to instantly end the match.

The matches ended so quickly that one pundit from Peabody had not finished commenting on his concern for Thilly's chances when the resounding whack of the back on the tatame mat cancelled his concern.

In the novice section of the 7-8 year olds (yonen) division, Brendan Hare of Ambrose Elementary School captured third place. Hare began his first New England tournament with a good show of basic skill. He quickly moved in with a right handed hip throw, scoring yuko, followed by some well-balanced mat work, and ended with a well set scant hold for a 30-second hold down.

His second match also showed him faring well but while on the mat, Hare pushed the "auto destruct" button so frequently used by beginning competitors and was himself held down.

The third match in repecharge ended similarly. However, his losses were to boys who finished first and second and the scoring of judo tournaments, apparently devised with IRS consultation, found Hare edging out a third-place finish and receiving a tasteful commemorative trophy.

Brendan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Brendan M. Hare, Indian Hill Rd.

Willy Thilly of McCall Junior High Shcool and the Tohoko Judo Club won his sixth consecutive New England judo championship Dec. 7 in Danielson, Conn.

After turning 13 Dec. 5, Thilly competed in the 88-pound shonen division for ages 13-16. Shonen division adds the shimi-waza or "sleeper" holds to the set of throwing and grappling techniques taught to younger players. Local judo aficiandos believed Thilly's skill in grappling techniques would give him a strong chance against older competitors but there was real concern about the strength differential between 13 and 16 year-olds.

Winchester judo fans may wonder how 13-year-old Adam Finn fared but Finn was laid low with viral pneumonia last week and, though on the mend, was removed from competition by maternal admonition.

The Winchester delegation now consists of two judoka (Finn and Thilly) who compete nationally and three (Hare, Abatzis and Desmond) in novice divisions. Interested boys and girls are invited to visit a regular practice at 7:30 p.m. Fridays on the second floor at 156 Highland Ave., Somerville or call 776-9060 for information. Beginning adult and family instruction is also offered.

Marshall, Cromwell and Vozzella get honor

Winchester High School football coach Manny Marshall was named the Division 1 Coach of the Year by The Boston Globe.

The Globe also named Wincester's running back Darin Cromwell and offensive lineman Mike Vozzella to its 1986 All-Scholastic football team.

Marshall led the Winchester Sachems (11-0) to a Super Bowl championship during the 1986 season and has compiled a 134-50-8 record in his 20 years here.

Cromwell rushed for 942 yards at 6.7 yards per carry for the season, despite missing two and a half games due to injury. He scored 138 points, making him Winchester's all-time leading scorer.

Vozzella averaged five unassisted tackles and had nine sacks while helping the Sachems to the Super Bowl.

Mary Frances Wright

Wright is Tufts' phys ed coordinator

Mary Frances Wright of Winchester, has been named interim coordinator of physical education at Tufts University in Medford.

Wright, an associate professor of physical education, has been associated with Tufts for more than 40 years and has taught fencing at the university since 1977.

A fencing specialist, she has made Tufts the only New England university to offer sabre instruction as part of its physical education program.

She replaces Mary Sturtevant, who has been promoted to the new position of director of health education. In her new job, Wright will be responsible for arranging all physical education curricula at the university, and she also will serve as curator of Tufts' Jackson Gymnasium.

"Mary Fran brings a wealth of experience to her new position," said Rocco J. Carzo, director of athletics. "her knowledge of the university and of our department will make her an excellent coordinator."

SENIOR NEWS

New officers serve Winchester Council on Aging

Due to the resignation of Helen Dame, chairman of the Council on Aging, some changes were necessary.

Lawrence Beckley, former vice chairman, has become the chairman to fill the unexpired term. Robert Ericson, still actively involved in business will be vice chairman until the March election. Vincent Berger stays as treasurer/clerk and Isabel Grasso continues as secretary for the Council.

The vital work of the Council on Aging will continue to be effective in the efficient hands of the new leadership roles.

Reports given at morning coffee

At the get-acquainted morning coffee for desk volunteers to meet with members of the transportation committee, on Dec. 9, progress reports were given by Ruth Ayres, chairman of information/referral committee and Kim Archibald and Mary Peterson, co-chairmen of Transportation Committee.

Barbara Ciampa, program administrator, discussed the construction activities with possible effects on programs for the next few weeks while the building addition is connected with the main portion of the center.

Refreshments were served and members of the desk volunteer and transportation committees met each other personally. Some people on each committee conversed by phone but had no opportunities to meet those with whom they talked.

Flim-flam program gives caution

The Winchester Seniors Association's Education Committee was extremely fortunate to obtain a number of busy professional people, both in and outside of the town, for participation in the "Flim-Flam" program.

Participants included: Robert Nickerson, president of the Winchester Savings Bank; Sue Hickey, director of consumer assistance; Georgeann Abbanat, assistant general counsel of the Commission on Banks; and Kevin Mawn, safety officer of the Winchester police department; Edwin Goodwin, president of the Winchester Cooperative Bank; and Detective Joseph Perritano of the police department.

The panel presented first-hand information about fraudulent schemes foisted upon seniors every day. The large audience expressed appreciation for the valuable service rendered by the panel.

Refreshments were provided by Robert Nickerson and gifts of sponges and 1987 calendars, along with vases of beautiful carnations, came from Edwin Goodwin. Some flowers were taken to seniors who are housebound, much to their enjoyment during this holiday season.

New Jenks Memorial building

Evelyn Jenks was an important participant at the dedication ceremony of the New England Baptist Hospital's $34 million main building designed to fill the niche between teaching and research, specializing in orthopedics.

The Dec. 8 Globe showed our wonderful Jenks Senior Center friend and benefactor cutting the ribbon at the opening of the Jenks Memorial Building. Evie is pictured with Mayor Ray Flynn and Raymond C. McAfoose, president of the hospital, as they dedicate the new main building.

The extreme generosity of Evelyn Jenks, not only to Winchester seniors, but to people in many walks of life, is indicative of her interest in and devotion to the welfare of humanity.

Hobby show set next month

Where are all of our talented friends who have interesting and creative hobbies? Only a meager list gives evidence that hobbies play a significant role in the lives of our members. The exhibit will be from 1 to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 7.

Join us in displaying collections of things, needlework, knitting and other handwork including tailoring. Many do much with ceramics, sculpturing, woodcarving, hand made jewelry, oil painting, watercolors, writing original poetry and stories, and other leisure time activities. This list is only a beginning of things you are doing that are of great interest to others.

Call the Jenks Senior Center at 721-7136 to add your name to the list of participants.

Ruth Ayres, chairman of the information referral desk, Kimball Archibald and Mary Peterson of the transportation committee.

Jenks Senior Center orchestra

We are ready to rehearse for the opening celebration as soon as we can obtain more violinists. Please ask friends, young and old, to share their talents at this history-making event.

Movie of the month

From 1 to 4 p.m., Friday, Dec. 19, the picture to be shown is "The Tuttles of Tahiti." A charming light comedy about an eccentric family living in a South Sea island paradise. It stars Charles Laughton in one of his lesser known roles and features Jon Hall and Florence Bates. The public is invited. Refreshments are always served.

Elders reminded of SSI benefits

Elder Affairs Secretary Richard H. Rowland has alerted Massachusetts elders about changing eligibility standards for SSI. He stressed benefits and services Supplemental Security Income (SSI) provides to its recipients and urged eligible elders to apply.

"Supplemental Security Income can be a valuable resource for many elders. It provides recipients with additional income and opens doors to a wide range of essential services. Medicaid enrollment is automatic, and fuel assistance and foodstamps eligibility is more easily established when one is an SSI beneficiary," said Rowland.

"It has been estimated that thousands of elders haven't applied for SSI because they think that they are not eligible, or because they aren't aware of the associated benefits of the program. These elders are missing out on some critical benefits," he said.

To be eligible for SSI, a person must be 65 or older, or disabled or blind, have limited resources and income, and meet certain other requirements. Beginning in January 1987, the resources limits will be $1,800 for an individual and $2,700 for a couple. The payment or income limits in Massachusetts will be as follows: for those aged 65 or older — $488.82 for an individual and $731.72 for a couple; For blind persons — $509.74 for an individual and $997.48 for a couple; and for disabled beneficiaries — $474.39 for an individual and $710.06 for a couple. If an applicant falls into more than one category, he or she is eligible for the higher payment.

Even though the Social Security Administration runs the SSI program, SSI is not the same as Social Security. Even if elders have no Social Security coverage they may be eligible for SSI. The Secretary explained that SSI is a Federal income maintenance program providing monthly payments to U.S. citizens who are aged, blind, or disabled and who have little or no income and resources.

Once an elder's eligibility for SSI is established, he or she begins receiving Medicaid coverage immediately. Medicaid provides full medical care coverage.

Elders may apply for SSI by calling or coming into their Social Security Office. Those who need help with filling out the application can contact their Social Security Office, Council on Aging, or Elderly Legal Services Office. For more information on SSI, please contact your local Social Security Office.

What is your hobby?

A wide variety of very interesting and exciting hobbies is pursued by Winchester seniors. The education committee will sponsor a hobby show from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Jan. 7 at the Jenks Senior Center to show what creative people do doing leisure hours.

Local seniors are urged to display a special hobby to stimulate others. As visitors roam around the exhibit tables, they will be there to answer questions and to encourage the pursuit of a hobby.

Plan to participate. Call 721-7136 and submit name, telephone number and the nature of the exhibit. The committee looks forward to its first hobby show. This very early notice to help seniors be ready for Jan. 7.

Jeanne Tahnk does it with style, elegance, and taste

Jeanne Tahnk's Gourment Kitchen

In her new restaurant, in her cooking school, or catering a corporate luncheon, private cocktail party, or intimate dinner for two...Jeanne Tahnk does it with style, elegance, and taste.

After any interaction with Jeanne Tahnk one comes away knowing at least three things. One—Jeanne loves people. Two—Jeanne loves to cook for those people. And three—From preparation to serving, to garnishing and decorating, to making food taste and look delicious—Jeanne Tahnk sure can cook.

It is, perhaps, an injustice to use the word cook to describe what Jeanne does. Between the preparation involved, the exciting way her food is served, and the eventual mouthwatering masterpieces, it seems more appropriate to use words like composing, or nurturing to describe her culinary works of art.

Jeanne's exuberance and love for people and cooking have lead to success in several areas. Since 1974 she has conducted cooking classes in various types of cuisine ranging from Chinese, Japanese, and Sze-chuan, to Italian, Indian, and American, French and Greek.

Jeanne has also gained tremendous notoriety for what has come to be known as one of the most professional catering businesses in the area. From a party of two, to a group of 500 people, Jeanne and her expert staff will make your small get-together or special occasion party or affair, or corporate luncheon or dinner, an event that will be not only remembered for its gastronomic perfection, but the ambiance Jeanne creates with music, flowers, and decorations will complete the culinary experience.

"Every party is different and I look at each one as a stage performance," Jeanne explains. "In addition to the food we create an atmosphere with decorations, music, light, and flower arrangements."

Although Jeanne can offer a complete 10-12 course Sze-chuan or Chinese banquet at your next party or corporate function, she can offer any type of cuisine. Some of her luncheons or catered affairs have included vegetable dip trays, an international cheese platter, fresh spinach salad with lemon dressing, assorted sandwiches, hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, oriental and pasta salads, homemade chocolate chip cookies and pastries, and for beverages—a mulled cider and punch.

The possibilities are limitless and Jeanne will discuss with you and offer suggestions to be sure your party is one to remember.

To fit your needs Jeanne can even put on an entire oriental feast that is Kosher.

If you haven't been afforded the opportunity to partake in one of Jeanne's culinary wonders, and haven't been part of one of her cooking classes over the past 15 years, you may have experienced Jeanne's electric personality and exuberant love of cooking through the miracle of television. Jeanne has appeared many times on several television programs and has cooked with the likes of Julia Childs.

What might be considered the culmination of her teaching, catering, and television success is Jeanne's restaurant at 910 Main St., Winchester—Jeanne Tahnk's Gourmet Kitchen.

Jeanne describes her cuisine as somewhat "cross culture." In addition to some entrees which would be considered native Oriental dishes, Jeanne takes some meats and fish which are native to North America and gives them an Oriental flair.

For a dinner appetizer you can choose from a list of around twelve which includes the likes of crispy egg roll, crab meat puff, scallop, wonton, or terriyaki beef or chicken skewer. Or you might feast upon hot spicy chicken wings, honey ribs, tempura sweet potato, or almond chicken. And in season you can tantalize your tastebuds with steamed mussels or cherrystones, in black bean sauce.

Your main course leaves you with just about as difficult a decision as the appetizer. The menu can vary but a sampling of choices includes honey roast duck, ginger shrimp, lemon chicken, Sze-chuan beef, garlic chicken, or Jeanne's special Lo Mein, boneless leg of lamb, and sauteed scallops.

Each dish is cooked to order and served with stir-fried vegetables, and garnished artistically.

Most entrees are also served with an appropriate sauce which accompanies the dish in a small bowl. The sauces are unique, flavorful and are perfect compliments to the entrees.

For dessert, you might choose a fresh fruit flan or almond cookie, or your taste might lean toward almond cream or ginger ice cream. No matter what you choose, all desserts are made at the restaurant and all will more than please your palates.

No matter what appetizer, entree or dessert you choose, be ready for a gastronomic treat a little different from any other orientai meal you have had. The atmosphere, preparation and great tasting food add up to more than dining out; a visit to Jeanne Tahnk's is best described as a fine dining experience.

The curtain goes up on Jeanne's culinary performance Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights from 6-10 and Jeanne will no doubt be playing to a packed house and be asked for many encores for a long time. And for a command performance at your party or function you can get the same exciting and delicious gourmet dinner if you so desire.

Jeanne Tahnk's Gourmet Kitchen is also open for lunch Monday through Saturday 11-3, serving a variety of oriental and American dishes, sandwiches and platters. Gourmet Lunch boxes are also available for large groups or when you and a few friends are attending a concert, outing or having a picnic.

Whether it's a banquet for 500, a corporate luncheon, a small cocktail party, or an intimate dinner for two, Jeanne Tahnk will make it one you will remember for not only its delicious food, but also the atmosphere she creates with music, lights and decorations. At any of these catered affairs you can receive the same gourmet cuisine offered at Jeanne's restaurant or whatever your party calls for from sandwiches to cheese and crackers. In any event, you will receive the same special components that add up to a special affair—lighting, music and decorations. You will also receive pleasant service and an attention to detail and perfection which has made Jeanne Tahnk famous in her field.

At her new gourmet restaurant, at your home or function hall; put your dinner, lunch or party in Jeanne's hands. Then as so many have in the past 15 years, just sit back and...ENJOY.

Republican women hear Avi Nelson

The Women's Republican Club of Winchester held its annual meeting Dec. 10 with a luncheon at the Winchester Country Club.

Club president June Cannon introduced the guest speaker, Avi Nelson of WEEI Radio and a Channel 5 TV commentator.

Nelson s views on the current political situation, locally and nationally, and the role of the media in politics were vigorously expressed and enthusiastically received.

In the business meeting, election of new officers was followed by the consideration of amendments to the constitution and by-laws, as presented by the by-laws committee, in order to update the club's guidelines.

These changes have already been approved by Alice Morrison, president of the Massachusetts Federation of Republican Women.

During 1986 the Women's Republican Club of Winchester has welcomed as new members Mrs. John (Mary) Beaton, Ms. Debbie Dimes, Mrs. Richmond (Helen) Gardner, Mrs. John (Joyce) Henson Jr., Ms. Pauline M. Hill, Ms. Margaret Hodgson, Ms. Joanne Hoffman, Mrs. Louis F. (Lucia) Katz, Ms. Julia Z. Koulet, Ms. Joan Patricia Plante, Ms. Cheryl Richardson and Ms. Karen Spieler.

Rolland Robison Memorial Fund established

A memorial fund to honor the memory of Rolland V. Robison, 60, chairman of the board of Semicon, Inc., who died Dec. 8, has been established at Winchester Hospital by his brother, James E. Robison of Armonk, N.Y., and his sister, Mrs. Myrtle Roby Raymond of Orange, Conn.

The gift "will have a significant impact on fostering the quality of medical service at Winchester Hospital through continuing research and service," said hospital president Eugene E. Loubier.

The fund is unrestricted, Loubier said, which "makes it an especially important resource in which others may participate in supporting new opportunities as they arise."

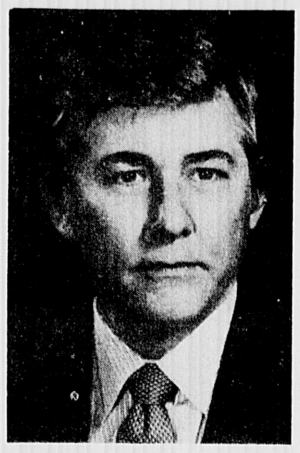

Robison's brother and sister said, "Rolland V. Robison, with extraordinary insight and courage, accepted the ultimate resolution of his terminal illness with courage and confidence strengthened by his faith in the quality of medical care provided by Winchester Hospital."

Robison, a resident of Winchester since 1950, was a 1952 graduate of Harvard Business School. For the past 25 years he has been president of the Burlington-based manufacturer of semiconductor components.

He leaves his wife, Mary Jean (Schempp) and two sons, David V. and Robert V., all of Winchester; a daughter, Judith Ann Hudson of Clayton, Mo; and three grandchildren.

Woburn Bank gives $1,000 to hospital

The Woburn National Bank has become a member of Winchester Hospital's "Red Rose Society" through a recent $1,000 donation by the bank to the hospital. The society is one of the hospital's "giving clubs" which honor individuals who have contributed.

The "Red Rose Society" is named in honor of the late Gilbert H. Hood, who once referred to the hospital's Hood Wing as his "single red rose" a tribute to his mother who said, "I would treasure a single red rose during my lifetime more than an entire basket of flowers when I am gone."

Bank president R. Wade Johnson reflected on the hospital's commitment to area residents throughout the past 75 years.

"In 1987, the hospital will celebrate its 75th anniversary," Johnson said.

The donation will be used for a vascular lab to help detect heart attacks and strokes, "staycare," a hospital run daycare for children who because of illness can not attend their regular daycare, and a maternity suite renovation project which will provide the most up-to-date personalized care.

R. Wade Johnson, president of Woburn National Bank, gives $1,000 to Winchester Hospital development director Diane Malcolmson-Keeffe.

Planned Parenthood says education cuts pregnancy rate

"There isn't a total program on AIDS or sexually transmitted diseases," Dolan said, "not as any part of the curriculum."

Dolan said, "We don't have everything in place but every hope of getting things in place to add to our existing curriculum."

Through November, 104 cases of AIDS have been reported in Middlesex County alone. No figures for single towns were available.

Perhaps that figure doesn't touch Winchester residents' lives directly, but with the disease rapidly spreading outside the homosexual community, it may be wise to begin educating children about the dangers of sexually trasmitted diseases, many educators and health officials believe.

Last month, surgeon general C. Everett Koop began advocating educational programs as early as the third grade, with "age appropriate" lessons to be determined.

Third grade may seem too young to begin educating children, but Planned Parenthood's Wattleton said, "We must recognize that we have to prepare our young people at an early age, which we're failing to do.

"Sexuality involves a much broader theme than intercourse," she added. "We can teach children that there is nothing bad or distasteful about our sexuality. Much goes into the shaping of our sexual development early on. We have to start in our communities to communicate with children, parents and school administrations.

Although the issue is controversial, it is important enough for the state to form a state AIDS curriculum, and for Boston public schools to inititate a program.

Wattleton said teenagers who are involved in exra-curricular activites, those with higher grades and those with open and communicative parents are more likely to use birth control.

Winchester High School guidance counselor Constance Trickett and students Katie Carroll, Christin Collins and Susan Roll attended a Planned Parenthood press conference to discuss the results of a poll about teen sex, pregnancy and birth control Tuesday morning in Boston. (Marc Schlossman photo)

She urged schools to examine their sex education programs more closely.

"Children don't discuss sex with their parents because they're afraid to," she said.

With the aid of the survey, Wattleton suggested avenues to increase teen awareness of the danger of unprotected sexual activity, one of the main factors encouraging parents to create an environment in which sex can be talked about freely.

Another is to promote more sex education in the schools, especially as AIDS explodes into one of the major crisis of the 1980s. The crisis is not limited to homosexuals any more.

"Teens want to communicate," Wattleton said. "The time has come for America to recognize its need to promote sexual education in grades 1-12."

(Editor's note: Statistics in this story are taken from a Harris poll released Tuesday in Boston during a press conference attended by three Winchester High School students.)

What To Do

Bargain shops with good

Boston is the land of the bean and the cod and . . . the bargain!

Whether in search of leather goods, shoes, designer clothes, bedding or furniture, Boston and its metropolitan area beckon the savvy and adventurous shopper with offprice items galore.

Since the early 1900s, the Boston area has been home to factories churning out a wide range of goods—from Chinatown, to Lawrence's textiles, to Lynn's shoes. Even as the region's economy shifted from manufacturing to service, metropolitan Boston remained a mecca for top-quality merchandise at wholesale prices, via factory outlets and stores selling direct to the customer.

Today, during a swift sojourn through the city, shoppers can satisfy just about all of their sartorial and recreational appetites at several conveniently-located spots.

One of the most famous establishments, even with local browsers and buyers, is Filene's Basement. Located at Boston's Downtown Crossing shopping district and in several suburbs, this store's attraction is a unique markdown policy: 25% after 12 selling days, 50% after 18 selling days, 75% after 24 selling days. The inventory includes surplus, overstocked or slightly damaged apparel, shoes, cosmetics, accessories and giftware. The merchandise, with original labels still attached, runs the gamut from Sears to Saks Fifth Avenue and provides something for every budget. It's the perfect spot to locate that one-of-a-kind item at a singular price, with all manner of clientele riffling, side by side, through racks and tables piled high. It's an eclectic atmosphere and an equalizing experience.

For those with a yen for designer clothing and accessories at a calmer pace, a foray into the Chinatown section of Boston could yield paydirt.

John Barry Ltd., at 75 Kneeland St. offers 25 to 50% off women's sportswear, suits, coats, dresses and jeans, while Lizzie's, located in the same building, provides complementary leather goods and handbags at 30 to 60% off.

If men's suits are on the shopping list, Cardin and Givenchy are 20 to 50% off at Designer Clothing Ltd., in its convenient location on Devonshire Street, in the heart of the financial district.

Outfit the kitchen and living room at Eastern Butcher Block, adjacent to the Boston Tea Party Ship on the waterfront, with first-quality furniture at 40% off. And, don't forget to pick up bedspreads, linens and towels for the rest of the home at Oshry Brothers, Inc. on Washington Street, easily accessible from the city's subway.

Fulfill artistic impulses at Utrecht Linens of MA., where all sorts of art supplies are available at reduced prices, and soothe tired feet at Kids Shoes Factory Outlet at 960 Harrison Ave. Finally, pick up all those miscellaneous odds and ends at the Sears Catalog and Surplus Store, on Park Drive in Boston's Fenway area.

These and many more options for the off-price buyer are located no more than 30 minutes from downtown Boston. Most outlets are open weekdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and many also offer evening, Saturday and Sunday hours.

What To Do

Bloomie's:
Happy 100th

By Susan Curtis

It soothes the nerves, tickles the fancy, covers the body, fills the home, cleans out dusty imaginations, and stuffs presents under the Christmas tree while painlessly draining money from even the most tightly held pocketbook.

It is Bloomingdale's — a distinctive and innovative department store this year celebrating its 100th birthday.

Today, 16 Bloomingdale stores dot the country. Yet to me, as a stubbornly transplanted New Yorker, there really is only one Bloomingdale's, known to loyal consumers as Bloomie's.

It is to this building-stuffed block, spanning 59th and 60th Streets in Manhattan, that I return in thought, deed and charge account.

Aside from offering a stunning visual, even sensual environment coupled with product lines that don't stop, Bloomie's is a yardstick which lets me readily remember and measure points in my life.

I was 16 when I received my first "professional" paycheck, earned after two weeks in a summer job as a clerk at Citibank, then known as First National City Bank.

I was quite impressed with the trappings of this position — a slinky high rise edifice on Park Avenue, a paying job that did not involve runny-nosed 3-year-olds, and all those seemingly adult colleagues.

Here I learned to drink coffee, black, and wear pointed high heels without fits of dizziness.

Upon cashing my first REAL pay check, then a staggering amount, I went immediately across the street to Bloomie's.

Within 20 minutes, the money was gone.

In its place I held two shopping bags containing, in part, two hats, several satin headbands and a pair of aqua pedal pushers. (Sandra Dee had nothing on me then.)

The ecstasy of this expenditure pales, however, with the recall of the demise of a major relationship.

It was in the men's department, flanked by terrycloth bathrobes and Polo ties, that I broke up with a "serious" boyfriend.

At the time, he worked at Bloomie's as a salesman — only a stop, he was sure, en route to discovery as a rock and roll singer.

Theatrics, accusations, and insults bounced off the glass shelving and mirrored walls as we battled and broke each other's hearts.

Passers-by wantonly ignored or cheerfully participated, ("You tell him, honey!") as only New Yorkers can.

Through college and early adulthood, Bloomie's was an event — a handy, purposeful outing for friends.

The call, "Let's meet at Bloomie's" had very little to do with shopping as such. Rather it was a fun place to go, to be.

When I became engaged, of course I selected yummy merchandise from Bloomingdale's.

One unrequested Bloomie's gift arrived — an electric hot tray on wheels.

'My daughter's godmother, a true Bloomie fan, outdid herself in tribute to the baby. Three huge boxes arrived housing 12 dresses for ages three months through two years.'

At the time Jack and I were living in a shoe box apartment in Brooklyn and stored our clothes in boxes under the dining room table, which was in our bedroom.

The rolling hot plate simply didn't fit — in the apartment or in our lifestyle.

So, the first available Saturday, we went to Bloomie's to exchange it. Here, faced with a vastness of glittering goodies, we launched the the first official argument of our three-week-old marriage.

I opted for lace curtains and he desperately wanted a sculpted, stainless steel hanging lamp.

Standing in the sleek home furnishings area, we learned a lesson: compromise.

We bought both — far extending the exchange value of the flying hot plate — and further confusing any decor our tiny home might have.

Years later, we had our first baby — a bald, blue-eyed cutie who visited Bloomie's in a front-pack on our way home from the hospital. (I couldn't face my tired maternity attire and was far from fitting clothes of seven months earlier).

My daughter's godmother, a true Bloomie fan, outdid herself in tribute to the baby. Three huge boxes arrived housing 12 dresses for ages three months through two years.

"I simply couldn't help myself!" she shrieked of her Bloomie's binge.

I blame her still for my now nine-year daughter's distinct and not inexpensive interest in clothes.

Bloomie's, through the years,

Bloomingdale's celebrates centennial

Sharing the 100th birthday spotlight with Lady Liberty, the history of Bloomingdale's tells a tale of America's trends and tastes — in fashion, architecture, transportation, food interests, culture and lifestyle.

Bounded by Lexington Avenue, and Third Avenue, it is perhaps the best example of the way in which architecture reflects this evolution, as it is the only New York building uniting the aesthetic philosophies of Albert Buchman and Starrett & Van Vleck, the two architectural firms responsible for the design of most of the city's department stores (some no longer in existence.)

Bloomingdale's 60th Street brownstones reflect New York in the early 19th century, when all shopping was done in specialty stores — small, dark row houses which looked exactly like the residences around them, sold only one type of item, and catered to the neighborhood within walking distance.

However, this entire concept of retail stores changed after the construction of the Crystal Palace in 1853, built for the first New York World's Trade Fair.

Not only did it display a wide variety of goods under one roof, but the roof they were under was something truly extraordinary — a marriage of the newest technologies: cast iron and vast expanses of plate glass.

Among the grandest effects of the Crystal Palace were its many and momumental arches. From that time until World War II, arches were consistently used for entrances.

Just as the splendid Pennsylvania Station arch was called "an imperial gateway into the city," department store arches became the symbolic entranceway into the abundance and equality which America promised.

Bloomingdale's originally opened shop in 1872, in a row house at 59th Street and Third Avenue.

But in 1885, Lyman and Joseph Bloomingdale broke ground for their new store at 59th Street and Third Avenue.

It was constructed of cast iron and brick, with eight huge display windows and a massive central arch as the entrance.

While the small specialty stores had kept their best merchandise in the back, to be brought forth only for their rich and favored customers, the new Bloomingdale Brothers would become a shining example of the new concept of retail—the department store—where a wonderful array of goods, from food to furniture to the latest

Wizard of Oz, move over!

The Nutcracker is back in town!

It seems impossible that year after year The Boston Ballet and its impresarios artistic director Bruce Marks and associate artistic director Bruce Wells find ways to improve upon a production that is already perfect — but they do.

The current version of this extravaganza, at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts for 39 performances through Jan. 4, is the most sensational ever.

The magical holiday event has become as eagerly awaited as Santa's climb down the chimney, attested to by the fact that more people (140,000) see The Boston Ballet's yuletide mounting of The Nutcracker than any other in the world! It is a gorgeous extravaganza, a wondrous delight for both young and old!

If you haven't seen The Boston Ballet's version of this enchanting fairy tale (inspired by E.T.A. Hoffman) for the past three seasons, lots of exciting surprises await. New and glorious choreography for the Snow scene closes the first act; Act II is virtually all original, with new and wildly simulating acrobatic choreography for the Arabian divertissement and restaging the gorgeous grand pas de deux as well.

(The choreography is based upon the original Ivanov-Petipa composition.)

A new opening scene is added to Act II, plus new dance versions of the Spanish, Marzipan and Hoop interludes and The Waltz of the Flowers, and the hilarious battle between the soldiers and the mice, all outfitted in new, comic costumes. All the new material works marvelously well and adds a good deal of humor.

The 23rd annual production of The Nutcracker involves 36 members of the Company, 15 member of Boston Ballet II, and over 150 children in assorted roles (three alternating casts).

The principal dancers seem virtually entranced by Tchaikovsky's beautiful and lyrical score and the gorgeous treatment it receives under the baton of music director Ottavio de Rosa, and they perform with a "joie de vivre" rarely witnessed on the ballet stage.

All the scenic magic by Herbert Senn and Helen Pond remains, and the elegant, crisp costumes designed by David Walker could not be improved upon had Louis Comfort Tiffany designed them himself.

They are as stunning and vibrant as ever.

The scenery is outstanding; the Dickensian street scene outside the homes of Herr Silberhaus and Dr. Drosselmeyer that opens the show; the lovely interior of the Silberhaus ballroom in blue and gold, with cathedral doors and windows and the elaborate rococo rotunda ceiling; and the magnified version of the same room like something out of Alice In Wornderland.

There's the traditional "on stage" snowfall that truly creates a winter wonderland; the all-white reindeer-drawn sleigh introduces The Snow Queen and King; the breathtaking Christmas tree that grows 45 feet high; the hot air balloon that transports the Nutcracker and Clara to the spellbinding Palace of Sweets, bathed in ethereal ice cream-colored pastels of pink, mauve and raspberry; Mother Ginger and her huge hoop skirt that cloaks her brood of children; the beautiful Sugar Plum Fairy and her Cavalier; and the celebrated Nutcracker himself.

The logistics are mind-boggling.

The Christmas tree has over 700 painted limbs and leaves and is decorated with over 300 nerfball ornaments and more than 200 handmade tuffeted and sculpted ornaments.

Over one-third ton of white flameproof confetti snow falls during the run.

Fifty pounds of dry ice are used during each performance to create the fog during the clousd scene opening Act II.

In addition to regular spotlights, over 500 miniature bulbs light the set for the Christmas tree, the snow scene set, and the Palace of Sweets.

Costumes used number 360. Twenty pairs of pointe shoes are used every performance and the cost of the pointe shoes used during the run exceeds $30,000!

Marie-Christine Mouis is exquisite as the Sugarplum Fairy, along with her partner Deven Carney as the Cavalier.

Denise Pons, aided no little by Christopher Adams and Roy Reid, had the audience gasping in the stunning Arabian divertissement. Lovely Leslie Jones contributed a brilliant turn as the Dew Drop Fairy and Karl Condon was appropriately flamboyant as the Hoop soloist.

Notable outings were also contributed by Vadim Strukov as the mystical Dr. Drosselmeyer, Tony Collins as both the comical Grandmother and Mother Ginger, handsome James O'Connor as The Nutcracker, Christina Cicconne as Clara, Todd Hall as the funny Mouse King, and Laura Young and William Pizzuto as The Snow Queen and King.

Special cudos to Susan Ring and Susan Larson, who kept the traffic flowing onstage, and to Craig Miller for his most effective lighting.

These days, the yellow brick road leads directly to the Wang Center.

The Cratchit family celebrates Christmas dinner at the Nickerson, above, while Catherine Dupuis and Michael Scott study their gifts in the TBS musical double bill now through Dec. 28.

Trinity's A Christmas Carol Top-Notch!!

Trinity Repertory Company's production of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol has its hallmark stamped all over it: quality. Needless to say, it's top notch.

It's easy to understand why year after year this yuletide favorite plays not only to SRO audiences, but beyond its seating capacity as well.

Trinity does not stint in any area of A Christmas Carol. It is invested with total care and expertise. It smacks of imagination and innovation. The cast includes many of their headliners. It is the entire package that impresses.

The Upstairs Theatre has been completely revamped, with ramped seating surrounding better than half the playing areas depicting the many locales in this holiday delight, and the actors utilize the entire facility.

Soule has captured the flavor of Victorian London perfectly (like old prints of merry old England), peppering his multi-level set with ramps, staircases, little balconies sandwiched in various seating areas, skylights, doors and pane-glass windows, and a trap door.

The set expertly depicts Scrooge's bedroom, the interior of the Marley-Scrooge shop, Bob Cratchit's home and that of Scrooge's nephew, Fred, and the streets of London at Christmas in 1983, all beautifully implemented by exacting set dressing.

William Lane's handsome and authentic Dickensian costumes compliment Soule's scenery perfectly, and John F. Custer's creative light design heightens the excitement of the overall production.

Ken Bryant's new and innovative staging is ingenious and his pacing of the hour-long (no intermission) fantasy moves like a runaway express.

Bryant's direction captures the spirit totally and brings tremendous drama and suspense to the mounting which is riviting, at times frightening, and always effective.

The sterling adaptation of this classic through Dec. 27, an annual tradition in southern New England, is by artistic director Adrian Hall and Richard Cumming, with original music by Cumming, Trinity's composer-in-residence. Under their expertise, the play has been implemented with madrigals, carols, folk and group dances, and a fun game of 20 questions.

Ed Hall makes the perfect Scrooge; Howard London and Barbara Meek add zing and humor; and most sensitive efforts are rendered by Timothy Crowe as Bob Cratchit, David PB Stephens as Fred; Brian McEleney as Marley; and Barbara Blossom, Laura Ann Worthen, Richard Ferrone, Susan Trout and Janice Duclos.

What To Learn

Books may be best kind of gift for child

Stuffed in a corner, among piles of Barbies, G.I. Joes, and laser guns, might be a very valuable gift for children — a book.

It doesn't beep, move by remote control or grow hair, yet it can fuel personal and educational success, says Amy Cohn, marketing director of The Horn Book Magazine, a monthly review of children's literature.

Books help to develop emotional strength, she says, as children weave through pages of human drama, adventure, trial and triumph.

During a recent reception, Cohn led a group of 60 adults back into their own sense of childhood wonder.

Through selected readings, she identified key components of successful children's literature and reviewed several publictions for children of pre-school age through sixth grade.

Books succeed, says Cohn, because of "wonderful characters" who, through fanciful but credible escapades, capture and nourish the heart.

Cohn cited some favorite characters, including the young monkey, Willy, who learns about himself in the story, "Willy the Wimp" by Anthony Browne.

Other noted characters appear in the pages of Katherine Holabird's "Angelina on Stage" and William Steig's "Brave Irene."

Children respond to books which deal with everyday experiences — on their level.

A prime example which, she says, "hits them where they're at," is the Bernard Waber's "Ira Sleeps Over," the tale of a young boy's anguish over whether or not to bring his cherished stuffed animal with him on a sleep-over.

Today's literature for children presents a tender comingling of art and text, as seen in the book, "Sheep in a Jeep" by Nancy Shaw.

Children enjoy humor, says the Horn Book magazine expert. They easily relate to stories such as "Henry Reed's Think Tank" by Keith Robertson and "The Jolly Postman" by Janet and Allan Ahlberg.

Autobiographical books also entice young readers. One appealing adventure is found in Ronald Dahl's "Going Solo," based on years spent by the author in Africa.

Earnest readers in the elementary grades will tingle to the tale "Wait 'Til Helen Comes" by Mary Hahn. According to Cohn, it is this year's best ghost story. "Don't read it alone," she warns the tenderhearted.

Books bring the spectrum of life and death safely into a child's world.

"When the time comes to talk to your children about birth," says Cohn, "you couldn't do any better than the book, 'Being Born'."

This book, by Sheila Kitzinger, with factual presentation and stunning pictures, "captures the magic and miracle of birth."

The lonely fear and confusion is easily, securely explored through "Dinosaurs Divorce," a new book by Laurie Krasny Brown.

A poignant drama, presenting "tremendous courage and survival," is experienced in the pages of "The Children We Remember," by Chana Abells, an unforgettable essay about children who lived and died during the Holocaust.

Myths and legends offer other insights into the human experience. Young readers can enjoy Susan Cooper's "The Selkie Girl" and "Hot Hippo" by Mwenye Hadithi and Adrienne Kennaway.

Cohn encourages parents to let their children have fun and experiment with words. Poetry, she says, shares human experience in a moving, magical form.

A positive first encounter with poetry is offered in the pages of "Read-Aloud Rhymes for the Very Young" by Jack Prelutsky. Children in grades four through six will enjoy "Piping Down the Valleys Wild" by Nancy Larrick.

All members of the family can journey through the poetry in the collection, "One At A Time" by David McCord. Many of these poems, both funny and sad, says Cohn, "bring adult readers in touch with things they may have forgotten."

Holiday shoppers, in search of successful children's gifts, might do well, then, to walk beyond the flashing, dazzling and amusing delights of toyland and browse instead among the aisles of local bookstores.

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

The lively shapes and a richly textured surface of Rob Wilstein's acrylic on paper, Moon, Moon Moon, characterize all his paintings on exhibit at Newton Free Library Gallery. (photo by Marc Schlossman)

Paintings have verve

A navy-blue fish floats blithely downward among bristly green underwater growth and pale pinks and blues; a boxy red tent hovers over a dark ground, enveloped by a creamy thick sauce of paint into which are scratched child-like mandala suns and the happy words "Big Top"; two birds are stopped in graceful flight motions, awash with the light and air of the space that surrounds them.

Even when Ron Wilstein's subjects have potential for the threatening, they are painted with a gentleness and joy that preclude any menacing overtones.

The cropped shark-like shape in Pearly Whites, and the sharp and pointy teeth that fill its wide open mouth are like the patterns that decorate shelter, clothing and shrines of other and earlier cultures: they form a picture-symbol representing an element in the cosmos no more or less benign than, perhaps, man himself.

Likewise the lively blue silhouette of a wolf's head against a dark and fiery background of red and yellow and deep, deep blue in El Lobo does not threaten so much as it acknowledges imagery that is elemental, and somehow reassuring in its mythical/visual associations.

In addition to big, simplified shapes of the natural world, Wilstein's configurations include nameless toys, architectural forms and happy combinations of circles and rectangular fragments, interacting in a lively spatial dynamic.

An even dozen of Wilstein's acrylic paintings hang in the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., through Dec. 29. They are all the same size and are all rich in texture.

Color changes from work to work, rarely making reference to natural and atmospheric light, but always integral to the total picture and always expressive.

The full palettes of Moon, Moon, Moon and Zoid are in contrast to the limited and whitened palettes of Toys and Night Sky. All are equally effective, mostly due to Wilstein's approaching the painting as a whole entity in which all elements combine and contribute to its expresssion.

"My paintings develop as I paint, without a preconceived notion of the final image," says Wilstein. "In this way I feel connected to the abstract expressionists of the '50s and '60s and on into the present."

Wilstein's predilection for expressionism is evident and is carried through with imagination, energy and a fine sense of form. His paintings, though, cry out for larger surfaces. The richness and activity of the paint and its imagery would be well served by a bigger arena for what seems to be the artist's natural configurative scale.

See the works from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday. Call 552-7145.

Tips for top faces

Makeup, clothing, shoes —here are beauty tip offers that can create a whole new look for you.

Wardrobe Booklet

"Ever wonder what professional cover girls tote around in their large satchels to keep them picture perfect . . .?" asks Beauty Maneuvers from Top Faces, a fold-out freebie flyer. Most of us realize that those models carry good-looking genes and pack terrific dedication into their satchels. We may feel we desperately need those particular beauty products, but we can all learn a thing or two from those "fabulous faces."

And that's what Beauty Maneuvers provides - tips from the experts. The flyer advises you on the professional way to clean your face and to apply makeup. The pros also have a few tips for those over 30 who haven't given up yet. For dark circles under the eyes, "apply tint in little dabs under the eye with the weak ring finger (so you won't stretch the skin)." We'll bet you didn't have that tip in your beauty satchel.

Directions: Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ask For: Beauty Maneuvers from Top Faces.

Bloomie's brings back memories offered the perfect one-stop rescue operation.

I recall one late afternoon at work when I learned of a command performance that evening.

I blanched as I inventoried myself.

Coffee-sprinkled blouse, witness to a too-rushed morning. Run stockings. And a comfortable old friend of a skirt which now screamed "boring".

Then the face looking from the mirror. It has that wretched undercoat of too many long hours and no make-up.

What to do? Panic? Plead sick? Change jobs? Acquire amnesia?

Ten minutes and two subway stops later, I entered Bloomie's and played Cinderella.

With luck, purchases were on sale — dress, shoes, even dangly earrings.

Stops for samples at the glitzy cosmetic counters furthered the transformation: concealer for under-eye ruts, color sprinkled on sunken cheeks, eyes lined and enlivened with more samples.

I was prepared, presentable and, of course, more in debt.

Yet, in pre-mortgage, pre-children days, such escapades were allowable, affordable and always delicious.

(Now they give me chest pains and guilt. Too many purchases demand attention first.)

Necessity shopping (winter coats, sweat socks, belts, and colored pantyhose) is not something I elect to do with limited leisure time.

It ranks as an activity close to folding laundry. My wardrobe, therefore, is chaotic.

I marvel at the wonderfully put-together people I often see. Colors flow, accessories work, outfits balance personality and purpose.

Bloomie's somehow kept me looking civilized — although was it not the only department store in this slice of midtown Manhattan to claim my monthly payments?

There were the other B-stores: Bonwit's) the best for lingerie, they say), Bergdorf's (tweeds and professional sophisticated attire) and Bendel's (trendy before trendy was hot).

At Christmas, the battle of the Fifth Avenue generals began, with fanciful windows luring shoppers inside: Lord and Taylor, Sak's and Altman's.

And, for the glorious conquest of bargain-shopping, I can't forget Loehmann's in the Bronx and those discount warehouses on the scruffy Lower East Side.

Boutiques and specialty stores joined in the race for hard-earned pay: the jazzy stores slinking up Madison Avenue and the kooky, crammed-in corner stores of Soho featuring a non-stop array of "you name it."

Always there is Macy's, with its endless shopping list of choice.

I'll be in debt emotionally for years to come to this retail giant for some of the greatest thrills and spine ticklers of my youth: the Thanksgiving Day Parade and the city's best Santas.

My move to the Boston area removed me from this bulky old friend.

Sure, there are fine stores here. And visits to the Bloomingdale's in Chestnut Mall prove comforting.

Yet the New York Bloomie's is a touchstone for me.

Return visits there bring me closer to shadowy reflections of myself.

fashion, was on display for all to see and admire.

The big, open spaces, brightened by natural light from the windows, beckoned with a seemingly limitless abundance of merchandise. They were an irresistible attraction to rich and poor alike.

Thus, department stores became the new communal gathering places.

It was this phenomenon which gave rise to the term "palaces of the people," coined by Emile Zola in his Au Bonheur des Dames.

The second important factor in the growth of department stores was the evolution of transportation, which meant that instead of serving only the immediate neighborhood, a store could be reached by virtually anyone.

Here, the Bloomingdale Brothers had luck on their side. In 1886, the horse-drawn trolley already ran along Third Avenue as well as across 59th Street, and the new coal-fired Third Avenue Elevated Train had a major stop at 59th Street. (Both were electrified in 1902-1903.)

Then in 1915, by unique good fortune, the 59th Street stop of the Lexington Avenue subway was placed inn Bloomingdale's basement.

Never one to ignore destiny, Lyman Bloomingdale proceeded to mount the greatest advertising campaign of the era.

His slogan "All Cars Transfer to Bloomingdale's" graced everything from the 59th Street El stop, to 5,000 sun umbrellas, which he gave to street vendors and drivers of horse-drawn wagons.

He also commissioned well-known cartoonist Richard F. Outcault to create a character to "drive the trolley to Bloomingdale's."

The charming young Buster Brown (originally called BB, for Bloomingdale Brothers) and his dog Tige became so popular that they eventually acquired their own comic strip.

The department store also brought about major changes in the looks and lifestyles of both men and women.

In an era when the rich employed tailors while the poor and middle class mostly depended upon their own sewing skills, the department store offered reasonably priced, well-made, ready-to-wear to all people.

The department store also contributed to "women's liberation."

It offered working women employment beyond the sweat shop or factory, and it gave middle class women a respectable gathering place outside the home. In fact, in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, department stores featured large, elaborate and very comfortable ladies' lounges.

Bloomingdale's entry into the world of fashion actually began decades before the store's 1886 opening.

Bloomingdale's celebrates 100th birthday

From 1853 to 1910, Napoleon's elegant empress Eugenie was the reigning queen of fashion.

It was she who invented the hoopskirt, to conceal her "tiresome" pregnancy. When it became all the rage, Bloomingdale's Hoopskirt and Ladies' Notions Shop opened in New York. It was a roaring success.

By 1872, the hoopskirt was losing popularity, and the Bloomingdale Brothers abandoned it to open their new East Side Bazaar, carrying a variety (very unusual in the era of specialty stores) of ladies' fashions.

In the 1880's, when the bicycling craze rendered the then fashionable bustle impractical, Bloomingdale's immediately adapted its styles to the changing times.

In 1910, dance star Irene Castle, whose gowns hung in loose folds (with no corset!) was every woman's idol, and Bloomingdale's quickly presented the new "softer look."

And so it went.

In her book, Bloomingdale's, (Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 1980), Maxine Brady says that from the beginning, Bloomingdale's had the knack of "getting in on the wave of something new... . and recognizing that nebulous moment when a new style rolls in to nudge out the old."

But it was the year 1947 which marked the most dramatic turning point in the store's history—in general, and certainly in fashion.

Instead of offering the latest fashion at the most reasonable prices, the new image projected was: exclusivity, excitement, sophistication.

As part of a gigantic media event to launch its new image, Bloomingdale's presented "Woman of Fashion 1947."

Claire McCardell, Adele Simpson, Davidow and Pauline Trigere were among the designers who created the first exclusive "Bloomingdale Collection" which was donated to the Costume Institute of the Metropolitan Museum of Art—the first collection of modern costumes ever to be housed at the Met.

The year 1966 ushered in the era of Katie Murphy, fashion director extraordinaire.

More than anyone before her, she was willing to take outrageous risks, and it was her idea to sell "fashion as a total look" which sold out all of Bloomingdale's miniskirts (to Jacqueline Onassis, for example) while in other stores they were left hanging on the racks.

Murphy also believed in designers.

She courted the famous and nurtured the unknown.

In 1969 Women's Wear Daily reported that "Bloomingdale's will go anywhere — to Paris, Copenhagen, and even Timbuktu — to find designers who are truly talented and who really understand what young people want in fashion."

In the same era, Bloomingdale's was at the forefront of the most revolutionary change in modern retail history.

The concept, credited to Elsa Shiaparelli, was that of a shop-within-a-shop: a boutique.

Bloomingdale's "Paradox" became one of the most famous department store boutiques in the world.

Then, as now, it was the New York showplace for the international avant-garde of designers and Bloomingdale's "discoveries."

Among Bloomingdale's discoveries was a young man named Ralph Lauren.

After featuring his unusual menswear ties, Bloomingdale's encouraged him to design women's ready-to-wear, which the store introduced.

Later the store launched his first fragrance, home furnishings and menswear collections.

Bloomingdale's also launched Norma Kamali and Perry Ellis (both his men's and women's wear) and for the first time in America: Kenzo, Sonia Rykiel and Fendi ready-to-wear.

Designers to have their first shops at Bloomingdale's include Ralph Lauren, Perry Ellis, Halston, Calvin Klein, Yves St. Laurent and Genny.

Bloomingdale's also promoted the idea of the merchant as creator.

If something they believed in was not yet available, they simply had it made.

A fashion journalist covering the Paris collections once saw something new that she wanted immediately — knickers.

But, since they were for the next season, they were not yet in the stores, even in Paris.

Upon returning to New York, she found exactly what she wanted at Bloomingdale's — black velvet knickers.

Curious, she asked the salesperson when Bloomingdale's had received them.

The reply was, "Oh, we had 200 pairs of velvet pants made into knickers over the weekend."

In the same vein, Bloomingdale's has traditionally presented the fun and the whimsical.

In 1973, Bloomingdale's Lee Fabris wanted the Bloomingdale's name on panties to launch an intimate apparel promotion.

But she felt that the name was just not quite right for her trendy young customers.

So she stamped with with her own favorite nickname for the store . . . and the Bloomie's logo was born.

Ivers & Stein Realtors

WE'LL MANAGE!!!

If you own an apartment house, you will have hired a management firm to relieve you of the duties of collecting rents, arranging for maintenance and repairs, finding new tenants, paying the bills.

If you own a condo or a single or multi-family house, however, you have to assume these time-consuming burdens yourself. If you do not live in the neighborhood, you may find these tasks quite a chore at times.

So, let us manage! Our rental manager will manage small rental properties at very modest monthly costs. When you are leaving the area temporarily and wish to rent your own home, or are the proud owner of a profitable two or three-family property you wish to keep without retaining the hassles, call our management agent, Lois Ardito.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

Expressions

THIS CHRISTMAS season will not be happy for everyone. There are people out there dying and relatives who are up against the wall because they want their loved ones home with them in their final hours. Hospice is by far the greatest source to guide you along the way, coping and just being there when you feel so desperately alone.

I want to thank my special case worker, Jacque Lapidus and the whole Arlington Hospice staff, including Dr. Liberus for all their help.

And to people who are afraid to face the inevitable and refuse to visit the sick I say just keep in mind when you visit that the sick person that you see was once vital and active and see them as they were, not as they are. It really makes a difference.

"Twas the month before Christmas,
Santa sat by the fire
He needed more elves,
But didn't know who to hire
He sipped his hot chocolate with a sigh of dismay
So much work to do in so very few days!
Then what to his tired old eyes should appear,
But this week's "What's Up" section and he got an idea!
He opened it up with a jolly Ho! Ho! Ho!
He dialed 729-8100!
"The kids are so good" he said "So few have been bad!"
Saint Nick had to place a "HOLIDAY HELP WANTED" AD!
With each tiny applicant Santa's confidence grew,
As he happily conducted each elf interview!
His inventory grew as they stocked all his shelves,
His workshop now bustling with busy elves!
Santa sat back and counted the days till his ride,
So relieved that he'd called CENTURY CLASSIFIEDS!

Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit – alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts – is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

*Ask for Autobahn or Audi Limited Warranty at our Parts Department.

Big sellers this year range from bracelets to lingerie

By JANINE DI GIOVANNI

The season to shop is coming to a close but Winchester shops have been ready for holiday shopping madness.

At Topsy Turvy on Main Street, fashions for infancy to size 14, sales clerk Mary Ann Crockett said big sellers this year are stuffed animals, especially the Gund collection. For the older children, trendy clothes such as long sweaters and oversized clothes are good sellers.

The other obvious choice for the holidays seems to be red velvet suits and outfits for children, Oshkosh overalls and outerwear and Christmas nightwear.

Crockett said novelty items, such as underpants for infants that say "My first Christmas" or "I believe in Santa" are also big sellers.

Evana, recently opened on Main Street, has sold out on lingerie, manager Julie Andreliunas said. The shop is also selling a lot of accessories, costume jewelry and holiday dresses.

Evana sells Anne Klein II, Ellen Tracy Jessica McClintock designs as well as shoes, stockings, sweaters and nightwear.

Andreliunas reports that husbands have been coming in Evana to shop for their wives.

Cruise wear, for those lucky enough to be traveling after the holidays, is also a big seller.

At Simms II Jewelers, owner Artie Bennos said the biggest seller is the "tennis bracelet", which became popular after Chrissie Evert Lloyd wore it.

The diamond link bracelet which starts in the $1,000 range has a catch so strong that Evert Lloyd didn't lose it once during her matches.

Bennos is also selling a lot of precious stones, rings, bracelets and earrings. Although the "panic buying" hadn't set in by last Friday, Bennos reported a solid season of buying.

Larry Davis at Davis Fine Foods on Church Street is busy shipping gift boxes all over the continental U.S.

He also said the big sellers are the traditional European Christmas items, such as German cookies and English plum pudding, as well as the usual standby chocolate truffles, cheese boxes and other fancy food gifts.

Specialty items in Davis' range from Jack Daniels-soaked whiskey cake to batter-coated crunch peanuts, as well as cranberry orange relish, tins of imported cookies and big Bavarian pretzels.

Rowley will study in London

Elizabeth Rowley of Winchester has been chosen to participate in Boston University's London political internhip program this spring.

While in London for the 14-week program, Rowley will study the British political system and international politics, and will work as an intern with a British official or political group.

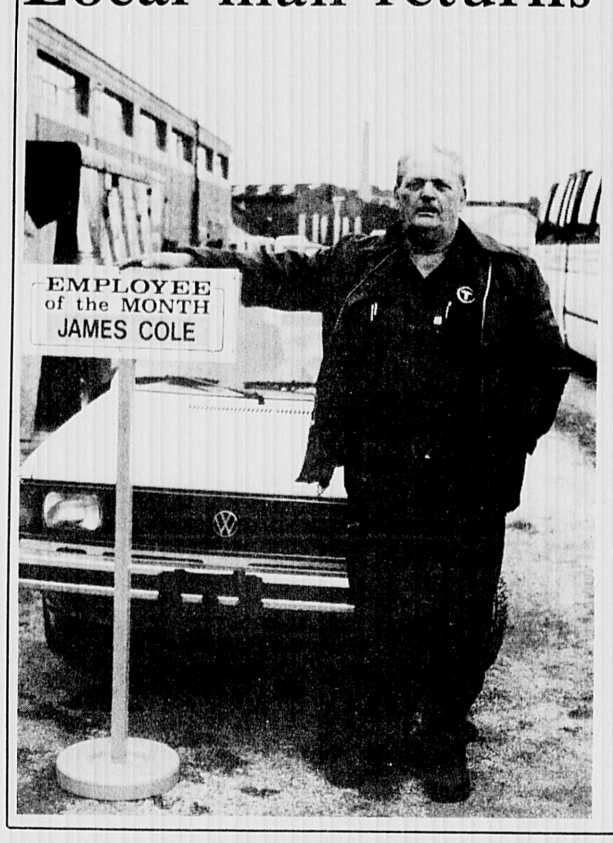

Rowley is a junior majoring in political science and economics at the University of Vermont. She is currently the director of the university's student legal service. The daughter of Dr. William Rowley and Margaret Moyninan, she is a 1984 graduate of Winchester High School.

Local man returns $7,100

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Merry Christmas, James J. Cole.

Cole, a 25-year employee of the MBTA, has been named the MBTA's employee of the month for his honesty and hard work.

A machinist in the "fare box cage" at the MBTA shops in Everett and a Winchester resident for 15 years, Cole recently found $7,100 left behind by a Wells Fargo employee on a bus.

Cole returned the money.

"It's refreshing to know there are still honest people in the world," said L.L. Gleason, superintendent of the main repair shop in a commendation. Gleason said Cole's recognition as employee of the month is both for his "excellent performance in all assigned projects" and for his honesty.

Cole will get a special parking space at the Everett terminal while he and his wife will also get a free dinner for two at Legal Seafoods.

Cole also received a letter of thanks from Wells Fargo.

But Pat Cole said her husband's "real Christmas present" will be this story.

Happy New Year.

Town to fete state champs on Jan. 4

Winchester selectmen will honor the high school's three state championship athletic teams with a public reception at 2:15 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 4, at the school.

The public is invited to express thanks and appreciation to the football, girls' soccer and boys' soccer teams.

A brief ceremony of recognition will follow, including speeches and an introduction of team members.

Video shop gives film to high school

Cross Street Video owner Frank Beres has donated the film "Contract for Life" to the Winchester High School drug and alcohol awareness program.

The Walt Disney home video stars Knotts Landing's Stephen Macht and is based on the true story of Bob Anastas. Anastas is a high school coach who started Students Against Drunk Driving (S.A.D.D.) with his students when two of his top athletes were killed in an alcohol-related incident.

The video has won several awards for outstanding achievement.

The focus of S.A.D.D. is the "Contract for Life," a signed agreement between parents and teenagers that neither will drive after drinking but will call home for alternate transportation.

Beres said he was impressed by the video.

"We're a Winchester business and we feel we owe something to the community. When this came in, I felt that it could be used directly with the students," he said.

Beres said the video may be previewed by anyone in the community at no charge.

Full text of draft religion committee report given

Parents and other Winchester citizens have asked at recent meetings to see the much-publicized guidelines given to teachers for holiday programs.

The guidelines, contained in a draft report to the full Task Force on Racial, Cultural and Ethnic Awareness from the subcommittee on religion, address several issues.

Most controversial has been the section dealing with holiday programs.

Schools have been criticized both for having "too much religion" and "too little Christmas" in their programs in recent years.

Here's the complete test of a memo sent to Winchester public school staff members by Charles L. Mitsakos, superintendent of schools. Included are both the Nov. 17 report from the religion subcommittee and two brief, formal documents, the first a school department policy and the second a school department regulation:

To: Winchester Staff
From: Charles L. Mitsakos, Superintendent of Schools
Subject: Draft Report on Religious Holidays in the Schools

As you may be aware, a task force appointed by the school committee has been working to assess the extent to which current school norms and practices contribute to the development of mutual respect and a sense of community among people of different cultural, racial, and ethnic backgrounds, and to recommend a plan of action for bridging the gap between what exists and what is desirable. The task force will be working throughout the year in preparation for a formal report in May.

One dimension of intergroup sensitivity that the task force has been addressing is the manner in which religious holidays are handled. A subcommittee on religion in the schools has been meeting throughout the fall and on Nov. 17 submitted a progress report to the full task force.

The task force has reviewed the sub-committee's statement and asked that it be shared with you, in order to indicate the group's current thinking and to solicit your reactions and suggestions. These may be submitted via any of the staff members serving on the task force — David Ackerman, Susan Bokil, Bonnie Holmes, Larry Rinaldi, or Susan Villani.

Although the task force is not recommending formal policy changes for this year, there are two existing policies directly pertinent to the issues under discussion, and I have attached these also, for your information.

To: Task Force on Cultural, Racial, and Ethnic Awareness
From: Religion and the School Subcommittee
Subject: Progress Report — November 17, 1986

Members were appointed to this subcommittee (henceforth to be referred to as "the committee") in preparation for the Task Force meeting of September 22.

Under the general heading of "Develop guidelines for instruction and activities pertinent to religious differences," the committee had two assignments to be addressed "before December":

— Review Music Department's guidelines for holiday programs; and,

— Develop guidelines for holiday-related classroom activities.

As of this date, the committee will have met seven times, in addition to doing individual research and drafting, and has accomplished the following:

— Met with Lynne Rahmeier, Director of Music for the Winchester Public Schools, to review Music Department guidelines, policies, and procedures, especially with respect to holiday/December programs.

— Invited, via school newsletters, all elementary school parents, teachers, and principals to share their views with us on the subject of our assignment, either in writing or at a special "hearing" with us on November 4.

— Held a "hearing" on November 4 at the Lynch Administrative Center. Approximately 45 citizens, representing all five elementary schools, attended and about 15 spoke, expressing a wide range of points of view.

The hearing was covered and reported in the Woburn Daily Times of November 6.

— Drafted recommendations, included with report, for 1986 holiday-related activities.

We have also received 15 letters to date, from all five elementary school districts.

The points of view in meetings and in letters have been diverse and well expressed. Some have spoken of the Constitutional doctrine of the separation of church and state; some, of the democratic principle of majority rule. Some have expressed the belief that Christmas and all religious content should be removed from the activities of the schools. Some feel that there should be a sharing of many different religious celebrations and customs.

It should be noted that concerns over these issues have been raised by those who are Christians and those who are not — with varying points of view among each group.

Prior to the establishment of the Task Force and this committee on Religion and the Schools, the Department of Music had addressed the subject of seasonal music programs in a policy statement, which stated in part: "...the programs should encompass a theme broader and more inclusive than Christmas, e.g., light, peace, gifts and giving. They should draw from diverse cultures, rather than strictly Christian, and be sensitive to the population of the individual school. While some carols are appropriately included in such a program, they should not be the only material, nor should they be the highly doctrinaire carols." (11/25/85)

And in May 1986, also prior to the establishment of this committee, the Winchester Inter-Faith Council and Inter-Faith Association voted a position of "hope that the Winchester Public Schools will not conduct observances of religious holidays and in effect celebrate the faith of a majority to the disadvantage and embarrassment of any minority....We enjoy our community's growing diversity and expect that the school system can be increasingly sensitive to the subtle complexities of our rich heritage."

Our recommendations for 1986 are set forth as follows:

(1.) We should all be working toward a mutual understanding that there is a diversity of beliefs among us, deserving of mutual respect. Not that "some are different," but that we are all members of a diverse whole.

Therefore, it should never be assumed that a given holiday is, or should be, celebrated in every home.

(2.) Specific curriculum suggestion:

a. Seasonal music programs: The School Department published a policy in 1985 and reconfirmed it for 1986. We recommend that the schools continue to work within the present policy for 1986 and observe the manner of its implementation and its effects within each school.

b. Art projects and other classroom and homework assignments: Assignments could either be general, such as, "Make a winter decoration for your home," or, "Write a story about what you are going to do during vacation;" or offer a choice, such as, "Write a story about how you feel on (choose one) a) the first day of vacation, b) the last day of vacation, c) Christmas Eve, d) New Year's Day."

Therefore, no assignment would be exclusive, such as "Make an ornament for a Christmas tree," or, "Write a story about how you feel on Christmas Eve."

(3.) In each school, look at the December school activities in light of the questions which have been raised about including religious references and celebrations as part of the public school traditions.

This committee will continue its study, including communicating with other school groups and reviewing the 1986 holiday/December activities, and will make further recommendations for 1987 and beyond.

Board of appeals grants approval for cookie store

John and Janet D'Orsi will soon be able to open their cookie shop at the site of the old Kenneth Binding gas station on the corner of Forest and Washington streets.

The board of appeals approved a "certificate of non-compliance" for the cookie shop Dec. 16.

The D'Orsis propose a new building with a retail cookie store which would also make gingerbread houses. About half of the business is conducted in the store, D'Orsi says.

Last week, the board granted D'Orsi's appeal from the zoning officer's refusal to issue a certificate of non-conformity with the town's zoning by-law.

Lawyer Lawrence Murray reprsented the couple. He said that a request for a certificate of non-compliance is "totally distinct" from a request for a special permit.

In light of the board's approval, D'Orsi said he will withdraw his current suit against the board of appeals in Middlesex Superior Court.

Murray said the standard for granting a certificate of non-compliance is more liberal than for granting a special permit, requiring only a finding that the change "shall not be more substantially detrimental" rather than that the change "is equal to or more appropriate for the neighborhood."

Oppenheimer, sitting as an alternate member on the board with regular member Looney and alternate Amy Wanger, said the existence of two separate processes — special permits and certificates of non-compliance — suggested that they were to be used in different situations. He said certificates are intended for minor changes and special permits for qualitative changes.

Sitting board members also noted that the certificate process does not use the word "change" and that gasoline stations can and do sell cookies and snack food. If the certificate were granted, they said, the board could impose stringent conditions on the operation of the proposed cookie store.

Unanimously, board members voted to grant the certificate and imposed conditions governing hours of operation, parking spaces, buffering along the sidewalk, traffic flow, hours of deliverty, type of baking equipment, trash collection, signage and lighting.

The D'Orsis were denied permission for the cookie store at the board's Sept. 16 meeting when members Jack Looney and Salvador Porras voted against it, citing potential traffic problems. Alternate member Robert H. Oppenheimer voted in favor.

Selectmen Mark Lombardi and Frank Sopper also argued against conversion to a cookie store.

The Stoneham couple got one more vote Oct. 14, when a new meeting was held to replace the Sept. 16 gathering, declared illegal because it was held on election day.

On that occasion, Looney and Oppenheinmer voted in favor but alternate member Virginia Hoefling's negative vote prevented approval. Unanimity is required.

About 50 residents of the neighborhood attended, arguing that a cookie store would be a better use of the property and create less traffic than a gas station.

Action on a petition to sub-divide the property at Lot 20 and 21 McCall Road was postponed. All abutters will be re-notified.

The petition of Edward F. Desmond to install a swimming pool and equipment too close to the property line at 40 Hutchinson Road was unanimously denied without prejudice by regular members Looney, Porras and Ferdinand S. Pacione because of a lack of detailed information.

A petition from Joseph E. and Rose Marino to repair and add bathrooms to a two-family house at 11-13 Lakeview Road was granted by Pacione, Porras and Wanger.

Co-chairmen Diane Culver, left, and Joan Kingsbury will lead the 1987 Winton Club Cabaret show, "Hooray for Hollywood," on the town hall stage Jan. 26-31. Auditions for the show are scheduled at 7 p.m. Monday, Jan. 5.

Preparations begin for Winton Club cabaret show

Reserve a date to dispel January blues. Winton Club's 66th annual Cabaret to benefit the Winchester Hospital is scheduled Jan. 26-31 in the town hall, just before the auditorium closes its doors for a long-deserved renovation and face-lift.

Scarcely had the music and applause from last year's show subsided when co-chairmen Diane Culver and Joan Kingsbury launched preparations for "Hooray for Hollywood."

They had organized their committees, secured the services of both director Christopher Brown and musical director Eddie Madden, who have contributed so much in the past years.

Culver and Kingsbury bring particular expertise to their commitment as chairmen this year because they have each served on almost every one of the numerous committees involved in this yearly all-out effort, as well as being active onstage participants with both singing and dancing experience.

They invite everyone who would like to perform to come to "Try-Out Night" promptly at 7 p.m. Monday, Jan. 5, prepared to work hard and have a lot of fun for the whole month to assist in a good cause.

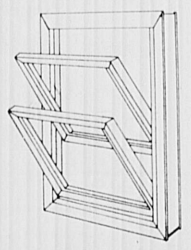

shows, and set all the club members to work on the show program.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

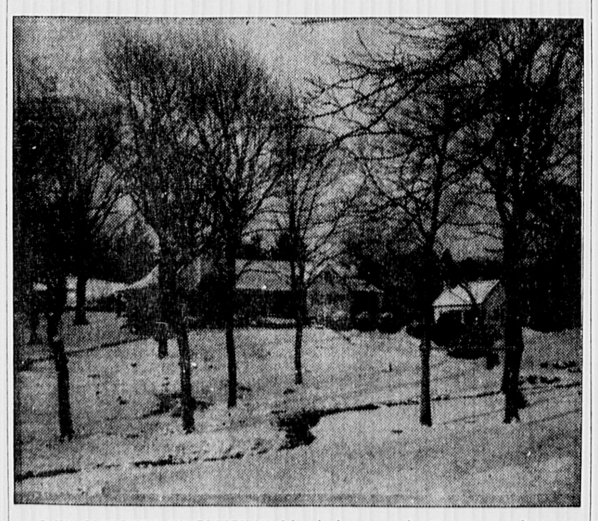

By Dick Murphy
The Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors

DETERMINING YOUR HOME'S MARKET VALUE

With the recent interest rate declines, we are seeing a lively real estate market and, in general, higher home prices. Even so, it's crucial to avoid overpricing your home if you plan to sell.

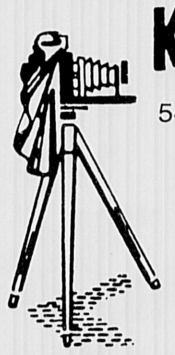

When you decide to list your property, your agent will prepare a market analysis for you. This will have prices of homes similar to yours that have sold recently in your area. These prices come from official sales records, and will be much more reliable than word-of-mouth information from your neighbors. The agent will help you make comparisons. You can adjust your price downward if your home lacks major features the comparables had; for example: a garage, finished basement, updated kitchen, or fireplace. If your home has features not found in the others, your agent can help you decide if a higher price is appropriate. The market analysis will give you a good idea of what your home is likely to sell for. If you keep your list price within five percent of the market price, your home has an excellent chance of selling quickly and for top dollar.

One of the professionals at Bixby & Porter Company Realtors would be happy to arrange a free market analysis of your home. Just call 729-7000 or drop by our office at 33 Thompson St., Winchester.

Three swimmers in New England's best

Three Winchester members of the Community Stars and Stripes of Medford (CSSM) swim team were recently named to the "Top 10" listing of New England swimming.

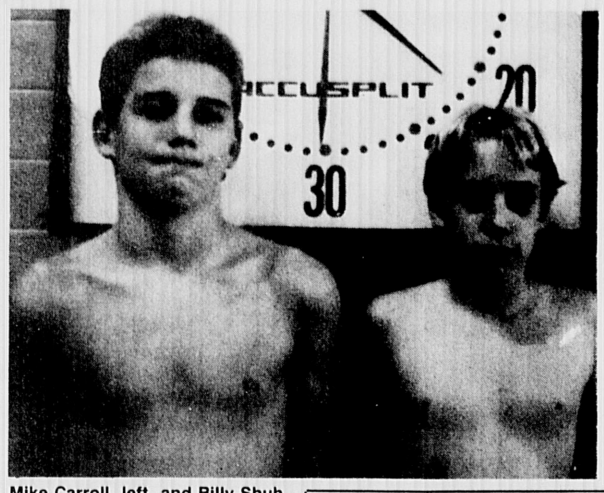

Ben Sheppard, 10, made "Outstanding Swimmer" after competing in only one meet. He finished sixth in the 50-meter freestyle, second in the 100-meter freestyle, third in the 50-meter backstroke, fourth in the 50-meter butterfly and second i the 200-meter individual medley.

Billy Shuh, 10, dropped his time more than 12 seconds in less than two weeks and captured fourth in the 100-meter butterfly, surprising the competition with his strong showing.

Mike Carroll, 12, continued his quest for excellence in both the short and long course season.

During the short course season, Carroll was the only 11-year-old to make the finals in any event and did so in all eight events he swam.

During the long course season, Carroll was named "Outstanding Swimmer" after finishing second in the 50-, 100-, 200- and 400-meter freestyle events, seventh in the 50- and 100-meter backstrokes, fifth in the 50-meter breaststroke, third in the 100-meter breaststroke, third in the 50-meter butterfly, first in the 100-meter butterfly and second in teh 200-meter individual medley.

Jewish volunteers to help Christians celebrate holiday

By JANINE DI GIOVANNI

In the true spirit of the season, members of Temple Shir Tikvah of Winchester will help to promote brotherhood by making the holiday one that families can enjoy together.

Temple Shir Tikvah, which translates as "song of brotherhood," is participating in a program Christmas Day at Winchester Hospital.

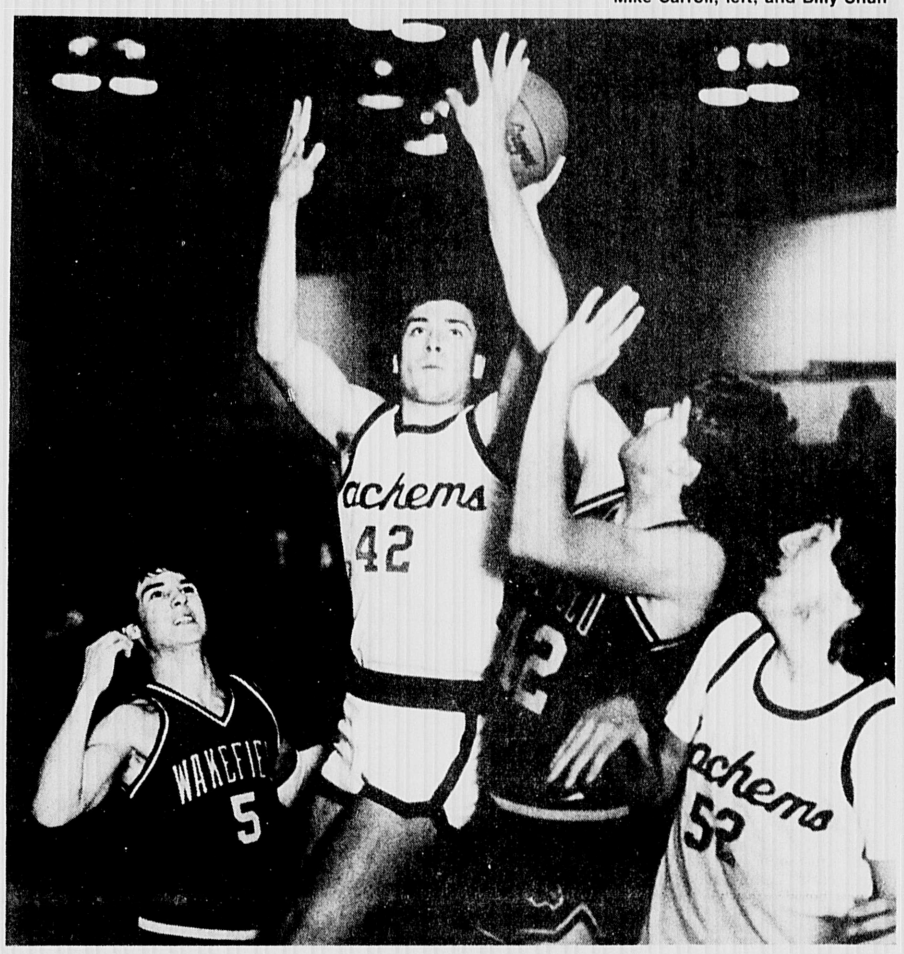

Volunteering to fill in the jobs done by Christian members so they may enjoy the holiday at home, members of the temple's social action committee, chaired by Phil Zacuto, will volunteer their services for two shifts of four hours each.

Known as Project Ezra, it is sponsored by the Synagogue Council of Massachusetts as a joint venture of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the United Synagogue and the Orthodox Congregatons in Massachusetts.

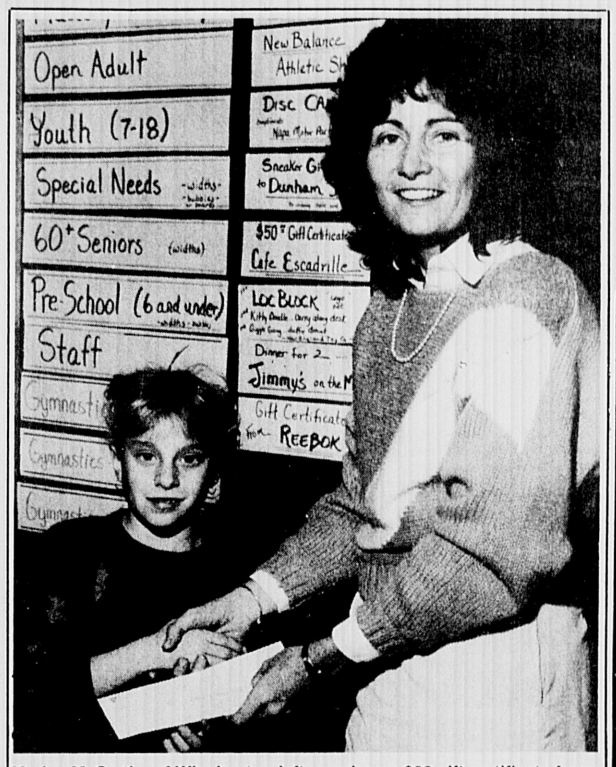

The program of Massachusetts synagogues is to provide volunteers so Christians may spend the holiday with their families. The staff will attend an orientation session prior to Christmas Day.

Some families are volunteering together, with children over the age of 14 lending a hand to help with the staff shortage.

Project Ezra follows the doctrines of the true meaning of the holiday season, one easy to forget in the commercial society — that the giving of oneself is the greatest gift of all.

Thompson Street oil tank suspected in river pollution

By KATHLEEN KELLEHER

The Department of Environment Quality Engineering (DEQE) suspects Locatelli Development Company many be responsible for oil leaking into the Aberjona River.

The leak originates underground in a courtyard adjacent to the Dover Grille Restaurant on Thompson Street, according to Joe Tabbi, health director. Presently, the DEQE had ordered the Locatelli Development Company to pressure test its storage tanks for leakage, said Ernie Penter of the DEQE.

The leak is considered an illegal discharge, said Tabbi. The responsible party will take financial responsibility for the clean-up.

Testing will continue through this week, said Penter, because DEQE has to be 100 percent sure. Testing is taking longer than expected due to inclement weather and the abnormal shape of the tanks, said Penter.

"It is of the utmost urgency to stop a leak like that," says planning board member Daniel Chane. Chane is concerned that the delay in the clean-up will increase damage to the river and its living community.

"I don't want that thing to leak for another week or two," said Chane. "The water courses, rivers and ponds are currently our biggest assest in Winchester."

The DEQE had placed booms to contain the oil, but the oil continues to contaminate the river, according to Chane.

"I was told it had to be a delicate operation," said Chane. If the suspected tanks were dug up and were not leaking, then the town would have to pay.

Chane called Tabbi Thursday to find out why testing has taken weeks to complete. Chane said Tabbi told him that Locatelli Development Company is "slow on this right now" but that the health department and the DEQE are working with the firm.

"We should have mechanisms and equipment in place as we move into this problem of oil spills," Chane said. The town plans to get its own boom as oil spills become commonplace, said Chane. There have been two or three other spills in the past six months, he said.

Schools to get $79,747 in state grants

Winchester schools will receive $79,747, its share of $22 million to be channeled by June to Bay State districts selected to participate in four discretionary grant programs offered under Chapter 188, the state's educational improvement package enacted in 1985.

According to state education commissioner Ron Raynolds, "half of the total was distributed between July 1985 and October 1986, with the remainder scheduled for distribution in June.

The four discretionary programs are dropout prevention, remedial, instructional materials and early childhood education and the total number of grants is 352.

Boodakian rugs on stage, screen

Kodo Boodakian and Sons of Winchester, oriental rug and carpet merchant, has had its rugs seen both on network television and on stage with two of Broadway's most notable writers.

"Spenser: For Hire" fans watch a 12 x 18 Kazvin rug from Kodo Boodakian as it adornes the living room of assistant district attorney Rita Fiori's Back Bay apartment.

Broadway veterans Betty Comden and Adolph Green performed their evening of song and comedy "A Party with Comden and Green" at Boston's Colonial Theatre last month on top of a Koko Boodakian rug.

Scenery for this musical cabaret featuring the songs from the duo's Broadway hits like "On the Town," "Bells Are Ringing," "Peter Pan" and "On the 20th Century" consisted of two stools, a plant and a 15 x 18 Oushak rug from Koko Boodakian and Sons.

According to Stephen Boodakian, the third generation of his family in the business, "My grandfather always told me that I'd have to start in show business from the ground up, but I never realized what he meant.

"Seriously though, we appreciate the fact that our reputation in Boston is such that these professionals came to our showroom when they needed to put the best rugs they could find before millions of people," he said.

Stephanie Nichols models the Great Peace March T-shirt at her home in Winchester. (George Derringer photos)

Stephanie Nichols

Peace on Earth is year-round goal of local woman

"It seemed a scary thing to do — to leave everything you know, friends, job, school — for nine months," she recalls.

By SUSAN CURTIS

The message of the Great Peace March for Global Nuclear Disarmament sounds appropriately seasonal and simple enough: worldwide peace.

Peace is a real and attainable goal, says Stephanie Nichols, valedictorian of Winchester High School's class of 1979. It can be attained by citizens' awareness fueling politcal action.

Yet many Americans are unsure, even skeptical, they individually or collectively can make peace happen.

So says Nichols after her participation in this year's cross-country peace march.

She and other mainstay marchers talked with hundreds of thousands of people across the country.

Conversations on city sidewalks, in farm fields or at formal programs in churches, synagogues and schools showed her Americans, from a wide variety of backgrounds, political preferences and personal priorities, feel "disempowered."

Yet, for Nichols, the experience of the Great Peace March proved that people, working together, can indeed make a difference.

Although ranks swelled to more than 1,500 at points along the designated route, Nichols, a graduate of Dartmouth College, was one of a core group of 400 who made the entire transcontinental march from Los Angeles March 1 to Washington, D.C., Nov. 15.

Marchers came from all 50 states as well as 12 foreign countries, including Japan, Mexico, Nigeria and France.

More than 100 participants were 50 or older. Marchers' ages ranged from a 9 months to 79 years.

Approximately 50 participants were under 15. They spent much of their time on a "school bus" — literally. Rolling classrooms kept youngsters in three learning groups — pre-school, elementary and middle school — up-to-date with their peers back home.

The decision to be part of the Great Peace March and put her more predictable life as a seminary student at Starr-King Seminary in Berkeley, Calif., "on hold" was easy for Nichols.

She did it, she says, to help fuel national awareness and action on the issue of world peace through global nuclear disarmament.

Already the worldwide arsenal of nuclear weapons stands at 54,000, reports Nichols.

Only one small weapon leveled Hiroshima 41 years ago, says Nichols, suggesting the unthinkable destructive potential of today's stockpile of much larger weapons.

Nichols was also motivated by her concerns for the country's increased defense budget which, she believes, draws funds and attention away from critical domestic issues.

As a counselor working with homeless and battered women in Oakland, Calif., she sees social needs going unmet.

Her commitment to world peace did not, however, eradicate doubts and fears during pre-march months last winter.

"It seemed a scary thing to do — to leave everything you know, friends, job, school — for nine months," she recalls.

"I also worried. Could I make it physically?

"I thought I could do it for one month, but nine?"

Prior to the California launch 10 months ago, Nichols and approximately 1,200 other accepted marchers went through a series of meetings, physical examinations and intensive safety support training sessions which addressed potential problems like hostile hecklers and hurricanes.

Marchers were alerted to possible dangers from day one.

Ways of making peace profitable need to be considered, Nichols thinks.

Kickoff day brought the marchers, then numbering 1,400, through East Los Angeles, described by march planners as a "tough" inner-city neighborhood.

Neither harm nor heckling greeted the novice marchers. Instead, they were overwhelmed with encouragement from hundreds of sidewalk suppporters, with calls of "We love you" and "God bless you" from tenement windows.

Similar welcomes were heard, Nichols reports, in urban areas throughout the country.

"There are very religous people in these communities," said Nichols. "We weren't sure how much they relate to disarmament, but we really felt their support for peace."

Nichols identified four constant questions among many in conversations with Americans, young and old, black and white, urban, suburban and rural.

"How many pairs of shoes did you walk through?"

Nichols went through three pairs of good running shoes.

"Where do you sleep?"

Marchers slept in tents at campsites arranged in advance. In particularly bad weather, communities would open churches or schools for overnight use.

"Why are you doing this?"

"I want to make a difference, personally and politically," she replies.

She noted connections and common concerns among people who might, stereotypically, be viewed at opposite ends of American interests — farmers in the Great Plains, suburban high school students, steel workers in Gary, Ind., sidewalk supporters in New York City.

Yet she would hear people, again from that rich cross-section, say "voting doesn't make any difference."

She also encountered many people on her cross-country hike with no opinion.

"Each person can do more and do it better through a group commitment. It can work," she says. That was the biggest lesson, she says.

"You can't trust the Russians, so why should we disarm?"

Nichols says "whether or not we can trust the Russians, we are morally obligated to work for peace."

Members of the Great Peace March outlined specific steps toward world peace.

The first reasonable step, says Nichols, is a mutual freeze on production of nuclear weapons.

The United States can establish "a comprehensive test ban treaty with the Russians," she suggests. "They have not done any testing since August 6, 1985, yet, since then, we've tested 24 times."

The Soviets say they will resume testing after the first American test in 1987, scheduled in late January. The USSR has extended its testing moratorium four times since 1985.

Testing of nuclear weapons is, says Nichols, verifiable by both sides, thus eliminating need for mutual trust.

From there, Nichols advocates planned and monitored worldwide reduction in existing arsenals of nuclear weapons.

Those industries now focused on weapon-producing activities would, the ideal scenario suggests, economically convert to other areas benefitting humankind.

Ways of making peace profitable need to be considered, Nichols thinks.

While satisfied with reactions to the march, she also notes significant personal growth.

Living with hundreds of other people in tight quarters and unusual circumstances gave her a better understanding of the concept "community."

Five or six days each week were allocated to marching, with a daily average of 18 miles.

Walking occupied only five or six hours each day. Other time was set aside for related responsibilities.

All marchers assumed duties ranging from camp set-ups, to coordination of hospitality and speaking engagements, cooking and general administration.

Nichols was in charge of bookkeeping, a skill she learned on the job. Her office, as were many other organizational operations, was housed on one of many back-up buses.

At times, she worked for three or four days at a stretch, then walked for the rest of the week.

Other times were for leisure and informal learning with activities as varied as swimming and seminars conducted by the marchers themselves about nuclear issues, different religions, and mediation techniques.

Pressure was not put on any marcher to walk more or do more. Rather marchers learned to pace themselves

"We had lots of conversations about responsiblity. You're responsible for your own choices. You can't place responsiblity for your decisions on someone else."

When walking became too much for any marcher, whether at one or 20 miles, he or she could easily hop on the "blister bus," so termed for the relief it gave tired feet.

There were tiring, frustrating times, admits Nichols.

She recalls what seemed an endless walk through the fields of the Great Plains. Here temperatures ran over 100 degrees with humidity screaming at 90 percent.

The heat aggravated the sense of emptiness Nichols felt at meeting so few people during that long open stretch of America.

Nichols believes the Great Peace March made a difference, increasing national awareness.

"We have to believe peace can happen," she says, "and people can make the difference."

"What draws me to the ministry is that I care about what the world is like and about the quality of life," says Nichols, now studying to become a Unitarian Universalist minister.

She also hopes to continue the work begun with the Great Peace March. She and some fellow marchers want to return to communities they visited to help develop "grass roots" support for nuclear disarmament.

One scene in Cedar City, Utah, sums up the meaning of the Great Peace March for Nichols.

As she and friends sat in a high-backed booth at a cafe, they overheard local citizens talking about the march.

"It makes sense, what they said," one person said. "Yes, it can work."

For more information, contact Nichols through the Winchester Unitarian Church, 478 Main St., 729-0949.

No Santa? Of course, parents don't believe in buying more toys

By TERRY MAROTTA

My little girl came into the kitchen with her two friends after school and addressed the matter directly.

"The kids on the bus say there's no Santa Claus," she reported, breaking out the crackers and the apple juice. "They say your parents are Santa." Then, fixing with me a level gaze, "Is it true, Mum? Are you and Daddy Santa?"

"No, we're not," I answered without hesitation.

"I didn't think so," she grinned. "I mean, there must be a Santa, or otherwise where would all those presents come from?"

"Right," said one of the friends. "OUR mom and dad would never go to all that trouble."

"They don't believe in giving a lot of toys," explained her sister.

"And anyway," my own daughter said to them both, "our parents wouldn't lie to us." They all smiled then, and started in on the apple juice.

But the question still hung in the air. That night at bedtime, both my daughters and I listened together to the reply Francis Church made almost 100 years ago in the old New York Sun, when 8-year-old Virginia Hannon penned that note with the famous question.

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus," he answered her in his editorial. "Your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age."

Two paragraphs into the tendrils and curlicues of his 19th century prose, my fifth-grader interrupted.

"He expects an 8-year-old to understand this?"

But I think Virginia did understand it, that little girl gone to dust now, like the man who wrote this careful reply.

"Not believe in Santa?" he went on. "You might as well not believe in fairies."

("FAIRIES?!," my older child's expression seemed to say).

Though no one sees them, he said, that's no sign that they don't exist.

"Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world."

"Is it all real?" he concluded toward the end of his letter. "Oh Virginia, in all the world there is nothing else as real and abiding."

We understood what he meant then. We began to see ourselves a little, and we sat a while in the peace and silence of the darkened bedroom.

"Do you believe in him?," the smaller child asked after a time.

"I do," I said simply.

Most of us believe in at least some things we can't understand. At this time of year especially, we put aside the skepticism of our own skeptical age.

Sure, we couch it in different terms, but the spirit's the same: Christians talk about God coming into the world; Jews about the sacred light being lit once again in the Temple.

The ancients talked about the sun, turning in its journey, bringing days that grow longer, sunrise by sunset, than days have been since the blooming dream of June.

It's cold out as I write this. But spring is already conceived; she sleeps now, deep in the earth's belly.

It's a mystery, this victory of life over death.

Like each day's birth. Like the balm and bulwark of human affection.

They're mysteries and miracles.

Like Santa himself; like the balm and bulwark of human affection.

They're mysteries and miracles.

Like Santa himself; like comfort drawn today from a dead man's words to a child; like all, in this riddle of a world, that teaches us to believe what our eyes have not seen.

BEACON HILL

The House and Senate. "Beacon Hill Roll Call" records local representatives' votes on 4 roll calls and local senators' votes on 2 roll calls from the week of December 15-19.

Drunk Driving (H 6565) - Approved by House 107-42, Senate 29-6 and signed by Governor Dukakis was the conference committee version of the bill imposing tougher penalties on drunk drivers. Key provisions include automatice license suspension for 90 days if a person registers .10 or greater on a Breathlayzer test; automatic 120 day license suspension for refusal to take the test; and increased penalties for many other offenses.

Supporters said the bill is a major step toward solving the drunk driving problem.

Opponents said the bill presents serious constitutional problems, takes rights away from citizens and noted the Breathalyzer test is not always accurate.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

Senator Richard Kraus voted yes.

Jails (H 6567) - Approved by House 90-36, Senate 22-2 was the conference committee version of a $213 million prison expansion package which calls for renovation or construction for 2000 prison beds.

Supporters said the bill will help improve the overcrowded and inhumane system.

Opponents said the package is incomplete and does not include sufficient safeguards. They noted that $40 million for Boston was cut from the package and pointed out the bill no longer includes language relating to the process for siting new prisons.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Kraus voted yes.

Consulting (H 6568) - House 103-36, refused to suspend rules to allow of an order creating a special joint committee to investigate the extent of illegal practices surrounding the awarding and administration of state consulting contracts.

Supporters said the committee would investigate recent allegations by the state auditor that there are serious inefficiencies and improprieties in the use of 03 consultants.

Opponents said the committee on public service is already looking into the matter.

A Yea vote is for rule suspension. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

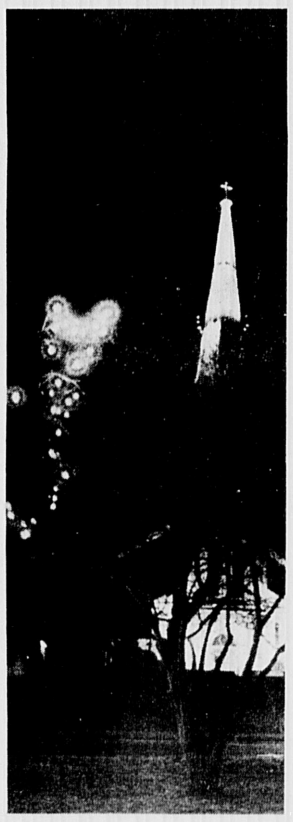

Computers (S 2229) - House 121-22, refused to reconsider its earlier approval of a $4.1 million supplemental budget. Debate centered around a $950,000 item for acquisition of computer equipment for the Senate.

Bill supporters said the money will help modernize operation of the Senate and may even save money in the long run.

Opponents said the money is unnecessary and is another example of waste.

A Yea vote is for reconsidering passage of the bill. A Nay vote is for the bill.

Saltmarsh voted no.

NOTES FROM THE BLACKBOARD

The giving tree at Muraco

At a time when many are thinking only in terms of getting, Muraco students have found a new way of giving. This year, a giving tree has been set up in the school lobby decorated with giving tags. Each tag has printed on it an item needed by the Woburn Food Pantry (which services needy Winchester residents as well as other surrounding communities) or several local families.

Each Muraco family and staff member was invited to take a tag from the tree and return that item to the base of the tree by Dec. 19.

Tags were made by Susan Haskall and Pat Malcolm's Brownie troop who will also arrange for distribution of the gifts to the Food Pantry and families.

Muraco students study volcanic action

In science, Pat Garvey's Muraco third graders are learning about volcanos. A piece of lava from Gabriel Zacuto and a model volcano ... ing studied, to gain insight to what an erupting volcano might look like. The Science Weekly magazine is being used, which is about volcanos.

Students sample colonial food

Sue Bokil's second graders at Muraco School enjoyed a taste of the past Dec. 11, sampling "colonial" food provided by parents. The menu consisted of cornbread, popcorn, corn pudding, dried apples, porridge, dried beef, and apple cider.

December at Lynch Library

December's theme at Lynch Library is "happy endings." Books with happy endings are being read and the library is decorated with construction paper cupcakes and gingerbread men. Students participated in a "dessert swap" during which real goodies were exchanged Dec. 12.

Students may also enter a contest to win ice cream cones donated by Brigham's. Winners must correctly match then literary characters to their books.

Kindergarteners at Muraco weigh in

The kindergarteners at Muraco have new water tables. They are enthusiastic about learning skills such as weighing, measuring, and balancing using rice, water, sand, and oatmeal.

Ambrose holiday programs

Children from kindergarten to sixth grade took a brief respite from their studies Dec. 18 to celebrate the holidays with a party. Good treats were supplied by the room mothers under the guidance of Ava Juwa and Cathy Interess.

A wonderful time was had by everyone.

An all-school holiday sing-along was planned for Dec. 22, in the Ambrose auditorium. Parents were invited to join their children in this holiday celebration.

V-O second graders study tradition

During December, Carol Romboli's second grade class has been using a program called "Good Things Never Change." This program has been created by Lifetime Learning Systems in conjunction with the Aunt Jemima Company.

It focuses on the importance of family tradition and encourages the children to communicate with family and appreciate what has gone on before them. The specific activities integrate students' skills in reading, writing, vocabulary, math, social studies, and science.

The children completed the first activity with their parents at open house. This involved comparing a kitchen scene from 1890, 1940, and present day. In math, the activity involved word problems with adding and subtracting pancakes.

The science activity was a discussion followed by a word search entitled, "machines have changed our lives." In social studies, students researched their heritage by creating a family tree. This will correlate with our colonial unit.

Ambrose students have penpals

Intermediate students at Ambrose School are receiving a great deal of mail, thanks to a penpal program which they have been participating in.

The students chose their penpals from a national register, concentrating on geographical location as well as interests.

Letters have been arriving from all over the United States, from as far away as Hawaii and California. A map of states in the classroom shows the location of each penpal. The program has been a great success.

Lynch program celebrates peace

On the evening of Dec. 18, an auditorium filled to capacity listened to Lynch School students fill the air with their sweet voices as Patricia McSorley and Lynn Rahmeier directedthe 1986 Lynch Schoolholiday program entitled "Peace."

Classes from kindergarten to sixth grade sang, danced and played instruments reflecting a wide variety of traditional, ethnic and contemporary music about peace. Among highlights were a "Holiday Dance from India," an "Israeli Lullaby," and "Let There Be Peace on Earth."

At the conclusion of the hour-long program all children, parents, teachers and visitors joined in singing "I'd Like To Teach The World To Sing."

Special thanks went to the music directors for their creative efforts. They produced a wonderful concert enjoyed by all.

Lincoln's incentive reading program

Reading takes on new meaning for students in the team-taught fifth grade at Lincoln School. Teacher James Perry designed an incentive-based reading program, letting students control 25 percent of their quarterly reading grade.

Perry assigns a minimum number of books as outside class reading. Students may meet the minimum, or for partial input on grades higher than C, go beyond the assigned amount.

In the first quarter, 16 students averaged 13 books, defined by Perry as the classics or recent award-winning books. Another way to appreciate this reading success, these students averaged 3000 pages of outside reading.

Co-teacher Steve Frazee reports an impressive range of books read, spanning a range of reading ability.

During the next three quarters, students have a chance to compete against their individual earlier accomplishments. Awards will be given in such categories as "most improved."

Perry and Frazee hosted a prize party in recognition of the first quarter's whiz readers: Scott Dieter, Jan Zeman, Shawn Crowley, John Magee, Meg Allen, Mandy Cook, Kristen Freeman, Heather Lanigan, Heather Markham, Catherine Krumme, Amy Albert, Mike Abatzis, Ben Coonley, Dusty Maxwell, and Esme Baker.

Winners of the paper airplane flying contest in science also feasted on pizza. They include Ryan Hertal, Gabe Brandt, Alden Bevington, and Jemma Desimone.

For a change of pace, fifth graders Dusty Maxwell, Alden Bevington, Ben Coonley, and Michael Abatzis meet with instructional specialist Joanne Benton during lunch and recess every Monday to learn French.

Lincoln's fourth graders organize bake sale

After reading an article written to Globe Santa about a disabled mother of four who will not have a holiday unless "friends" come to her assistance, Bernadette Golden's fourth graders launched a campaign to help.

Students organized a bake sale to raise money for this year's Globe Santa. Each class member contributed baked goods for the sale and money came pouring in.

After record sales and many happy faces the results were totalled. The amount of $103.25 was announced

With a few extra donations, a final check amounting to $109 was sent off in the evening's mail. One gleeful fourth grader said, "This was a lot of fun. I feel really good helping others."

Self study done at McCall

McCall Junior High has received the status of candidate for accreditation by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges. As part of the process, McCall must conduct a self study and be evaluated now and again in two and five years.

The self study is a thorough, open and honest look at every aspect of McCall, such as physical, economic, human, and societal conditions. Students, staff, and parents work with the Central Office Administration, and the School Committee.

Parents are needed from the McCall Standards Committees to work on the study. Most meetings will take place on release days and sessions will be held at the school Jan. 15, March 5, April 2 and May 7, 1987. Other meetings may be scheduled for convenience. Contact Gene Prior at McCall for information.

A free copy of the publication "Meeting College Costs" is available in the guidance office.

The snow date will be Jan. 8.

Studio Guild to have show

The Studio Guild of Winchester will present a group show at the Winchester Art Association Gallery, 585A Main St., beginning Sunday, Jan. 4, and running through Jan. 29. The gallery will be open from noon to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. The public is invited.

The Studio Guild is an art class which meets weekly at the Parish of the Epiphany. It is taught by Patrick Carter. Classes meet Tuesday evenings and/or Thursday mornings.

Aspiring artists at any stage of learning are welcome to join the Studio Guild when the new semester begins after Jan. 1. Anyone wishing further information about the show or the guild may call Barbara Carter at 729-3666.

Superintendent wins three-year extension

The contract of superintendent Charles L. Mitsakos has been extended three years by the school committee until Jan. 1, 1990.

Mitsakos became superintendent of Winchester public schools Jan. 1, 1984, and "has been eminently successful in bringing renewed leadership and increased excellence to the Winchester school system," said Michael Ronayne, chairman pro tem of the school committee.

Before coming to Winchester, Mitsakos was assistant superintendent of schools in Andover and taught in Chelmsford schools.

"The school system has seen dramatic advances in teaching, learning and administration, along with the development of a strong sense of community under Mitsakos' leadership," Ronayne said. "The school committee looks forward to even greater success."

No salary considerations are included in the three-year contract extension.

SENIOR NOTES

Christmas festivities fill the Jenks Senior Center

The spirit of the season has been one of merriment at the Jenks Senior Center. Christmas partying has permeated the activities of several active groups including ballroom and line dancing, the square dancing group, the Senior After Care (SAC) committee luncheon meeting, exercise classes, the group experience meeting, and Dec. 17, the annual Christmas Party that drew forth a capacity crowd filling the room to its brim.

After the brief quarterly meeting conducted by Walter Dignam, president of the Winchester Seniors Association, Dick Brogna and his boys in the band, Arthur and Vic, played some old favorites, encouraging a sing-along.

The Jenks Senior Center Glee Club led the audience in carol singing, accompanied and directed by Bob Mulford at the piano.

Helen Hodgdon and Tom Rogers, who are retiring from the food services at the center, were given a standing ovation. Charles Craven paid verbal tribute to their untiring devotion through the past eight years and presented each of them with a tangible expression of appreciation from their many friends.

Helen M. Murphy, chairperson for the Christmas party with the assistance of Ray Murphy, Sylvia Saslow and Larry Hutchings, presided over the table of gifts.

Larry Hutchings, in full Santa Claus attire, entered the hall at the appropriate time with his greetings of "Ho, Ho, Ho!" and "Merry Christmas to all!"

Sated by delectible goodies and filled with musical tunes ringing in their heads, those who attended the party headed homeward with the spirit of the season happily launched to await the approach of this festive holiday.

EnKa distributes to homebound

The EnKa Society and the Winchester Seniors Association transportation committee are working together to provide Christmas cheer for those who are homebound.

EnKa members have filled baskets of fruit for shut-ins during the holdiay season and the WSA transportation committee is delivering them to those who are unable to participate in community activities because of physical handicaps.

More about the orchestra

Those who have indicated a willingness to play in the orchestra at the dedication of the new wing at the Jenks Senior Center will be contacted after Christmas. We will welcome more musicians but we have enough pieces at present to begin to prepare an appropriate program for this history-making event.

We are grateful to Dr. Robert White for taking time from his busy schedule to conduct some rehearsals.

Saturday night dance is Jan. 10

From 8 p.m. to midnight Jan. 10, Dick Brogna and his boys will provide music for another evening of dancing. Vic on his saxaphone, Arthur at the piano and electronic instument and Dick on the drums, as he sings the favorite melodies will provide four hours of sheer enjoyment. Come and participate as the new year begins!

Hobby show set Jan. 7

After the last greeting card has been posted and the final packages tied up for Christmas delivery, please give thought to the hobby show scheduled 1 to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 7, at the Jenks Senior Center.

We need many more exhibitors. Among the membership are seniors who have exciting hobbies. Please join the group at this first hobby show sponsored by the education committee of the Winchester Seniors Association. Phone the Jenks Senior Center 721-7136 of your willingness to display your hobby, giving your name, type of exhibit, and telephone number.

Overnight trips to be proposed

At 1:30 p.m. Jan. 9 and 14, at Jenks Senior Center, presentations will be made about proposed overnight trips. If you want to get away for a change of scene, come to hear what is going to be offered.

Recreation committee to meet

Because of the busy activities during the holiday season, a reminder is given to the recreation committee of the Winchester Seniors Association to attend the meeting at 9:30 a.m. Monday, Dec. 29, at the Jenks Senior Center.

Bingo Dec. 26

At 1:15 p.m. Friday, Dec. 26, at the Jenks Senior Center, enjoy the monthly bingo game in the meeting room.

Helen Hodgdon, right, offers her assistant, Tom Rogers, some of the cookies served at the Jenks Senior Center Christmas party Dec. 17. The two are retiring from the food services at the center.

What To Do

By Anne Marie Reidy

Last-minute gifts:

Personalized presents mean

By Anne Marie E. Reidy

It's only hours and counting to Christmas—and you're ready to tear your hair out.

Your college-bound brother just does not need another sweater. Your Great Aunt Marie has spent the last year trying to give you various knick-knacks she's collected. Your nieces seem to have every doll and stuffed animal on the market.

Never fear.

There are solutions, last-minute gift ideas that need a little thought, but could end up being the most-appreciated gift of the year. And the makings can be found in sports shops, pharmacies, grocery stores, auto parts and hardware stores, and other non-traditional sources.

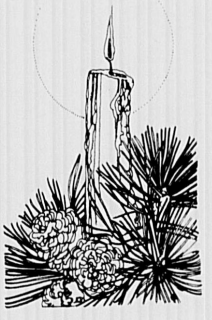

For athletic types, try buying a good quality "fanny pack," a small super-strong nylon bag that looks like a cross between a purse and a backpack, and sits at the small of the wearer's back ($12-$22). Fill it with sunscreen and lip balm, small packages of trail mix and sunglasses.

If your athlete is a bicyclist, add a small compass, cycling gloves and a water bottle; for cross country skiers, a set of ski waxes, gaiters (nylon or Gortex calf coverings to keep socks and slacks dry), and a water bottle, flask or small canteen.

For someone who just got their first car, a pamper-your-car kit might hit the spot.

Buy a washbucket at the hardware store ($4-$8). Fill it with items from a car-parts store like a chamois cloth for buffing ($5-$7), a magnetic spare key holder (79 cents), a window scraper with a fake-fur muff ($3-$10), depending on how luxurious it is), car blanket ($2), some flares ($4) and a jazzy key ring.

Kids on your list have too many toys already, and half the time they end up playing with boxes, anyway?

A sure-fire hit is another variation on the bucket, only this time you get the size designed for small chores around the house—only a little bigger than a child's sandpail, and the handle won't come off as easily ($3-$4), and fill it with bathtub and/or beach toys.

You could try a floating Bert and Ernie ($9 each, a little steep)—or fancy sponges, and odd-shaped plastic food-savers and the like, which the kids will use with glee. In the bathtub, it's water play; at the beach, they can also be used to build sandcastles.

One local toy store (Toys 'R Us) had a collection of sponge trains that hooked together for $3.50; at a chain drug store which carries a wide range of items (Osco) there was an assortment of whale-shaped sponges. If you don't find any you like, buy a bag of soft sponges, take your kitchen shears, and cut out whatever shapes you please. (You can put the scraps in a nylon net bag, a la hints-from-Heloise, and use it to wash dishes.)

Gourmet baskets can be a hit with just about anyone, but the ready-made baskets in the store may be more than you want to give, or may not suit the tastes of the person you're giving them to. When you make your own, they can be as elaborate or simple as you like.

You might want to find a pretty teacup at one of the antique/white elephant shops or gift shops that abound in the area ($5-$10), and fill it with home-made chocolate truffles or sugar-and-spice nuts—both a snap to make. (See recipes below). For a less delicate presentation, pack them in a coffee mug, or a single-serving oven-proof casserole.

If you want a slightly more elaborate package, add a tin of good loose tea and a teaspoon strainer, and a package of homemade cookies or cheese straws.

You can use the same basic ingredients to make up a romantic picnic hamper for your favorite couple (or give one to your sweetheart).

Instead of a teacup, pick up a pair of disposable plastic champagne glasses ($3) and a split of inexpensive champagne ($3-$5).

Put them in a picnic basket ($12 and up) or a nice basket that could be used later for rolls or taco chips ($4 and up), with a scented column candle or two ($2-$4).

Add cheese straws and hot spiced nuts, and a few jars of things like marinated mushrooms or artichokes, tins of smoked clams, a small can of pate, a box of special crackers.

Or, add a small tin of chocolate truffles, sugar-and-spice nuts, cookies, some fruit, and maybe some candied ginger or orange peel, marzipan, or another unusual store-bought goodie.

If your basket if going to an older person, (or anyone on a fixed income, or who isn't likely to cook for themselves) add a few one-serving sized cans of tuna or salmon, boned chicken, pate, some small cheeses like Babybel or Gouda (if it will be refrigerated until given) or processed cheese spreads (if it is shipped) special crackers, and other goodies you know would appeal.

Tailor your present to the person. One bride gave her new husband the power tool he had been craving (and pricing) since before they were engaged. Not her idea of a good Christmas present—but it certainly was his. And hardware stores are rarely mobbed the week before Christmas.

Another adult child was stumped on what to give her father, with a newly diagnosed heart condition, who had been told to walk more and lay off on goodies.

A good-quality pedometer, a map of the town he lived in, with colored highlighting markers to mark the streets he had covered, a basic book on architecture (so he could learn to recognize the different types of buildings) and a history of the town made a very satisfying and much-used present.

Everything she needed was available at the local sports shop and book/stationery store, and cost (three years go) under $45.

A little ingenuity can make it seem like you had it planned all along.

Recipes

Sugar-And-Spice Nuts

(takes about one hour to make)

Use 1 pound of nuts—pecans,

What To Do

Use head, hands think harder, maybe spend less walnuts, blanched almonds and hazelnuts—one kind, or a mixture.

Toss them with 6-8 tablespoons of melted margarine until they are just coated, and toast them in a 325 degree oven about 10 minutes (until the almonds are just golden). Let them cool.

Take the egg whites from three large eggs, and add one cup sugar, 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 1½ teaspoon each of grated nutmeg and allspice, and ½ teaspoon of either ground cloves or ground ginger.

Beat the egg white mixture into a stiff meringue. Fold in the cool nuts, trying not to break down the air bubbles in the meringue too much.

Lightly grease or oil cookie sheet with sides. Spread the nut meringue mixture on the cookie sheets in a layer about 3/8 of an inch thick (about as thick as the nuts themselves in a single layer).

Bake in pre-heated oven (350 degrees) for 8-12 minutes, until the meringue is crisp and dry and lightly golden. After about 4 minutes, take a fork and scramble the mixture around.

WATCH OUT—once it starts to burn, it will go quickly. Some ovens may take slightly less or more time.

Cool; store the nuts in a tin in a cool, dry place; they will keep at least 10 days, if they last that long. Makes about 4 cups.

Chocolate Truffles

Takes about two hours to make, split up over two days.

Makes four dozen or so, depending on size. MUST BE REFRIGERATED.

Heat 1⅓ cups of heavy cream to just boiling in a large double-boiler, and whisk in 24 ounces of good bittersweet chocolate (in bits—break up bars if that's what you're using) and 8 tablespoons (one bar) of good quality unsalted BUTTER—margarine WILL NOT DO—until a smooth blend is achieved.

(As you blend the choclate and butter, any of the flavorings below may be added. For basic truffles, use 3 tablespoons strong black coffee.)

Pour the chocolate mix into a bowl, cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate; if you use a shallow bowl or bowls, it will chill in 3-4 hours; otherwise, chill overnight. (The bowl scrapings makes great bribes, even for yourself.)

Scoop out the fudgy mixture with teaspoons, and roll into balls with clean hands. (The fastidious use waxed paper layers under and over the lumps.) Dredge the truffles in plain cocoa powder, colored sprinkles or dragees, chopped almonds or hazelnuts, or other coatings. Cocoa makes most like the prized fungus, truffles, for which the treat is named.

Place in tins with layers of waxed paper separating them, and freeze. Pack in tiny cups if you want to get fancy; otherwise, separate layers with waxed paper.

Caution: pack no more than two hours before gifts are to be opened—and/or tell your recipient to refrigerate or freeze this goodie.

Theoretically, chocolate truffles last 1 week in the refrigerator, one month in the freezer. Actually, they've never lasted that long anywhere.

Variations:

Nutty—Stir in 3 tablespoons hazelnut or amaretto liquer; roll in chopped hazelnuts or almonds. If you like, add 4-6 tablespoons chopped nuts to the chocolate mix before chilling.

Cappucino—Stir in 3 tablespoons coffee liquer and one tablespoon cinnamon when making chocolate mixture. Dredge truffles in a cinnamon-sugar mixture.

Orange—Use 3 tablespoons Triple Sec, Grand Marnier or other orange-flavored liquer, and 1 teaspoon vanilla, and dredge truffles in confectioners' sugar. .

Mint—Use 3 tablespoons Creme De Menthe or 3 TEASPOONS peppermint extract. Dredge in sprinkles.

Cheese Straws

Takes about three hours (with chilling time) to make three dozen or so. Can be spread over two days.

STEP 1—Take one 8-ounce bar of softened corn-oil or other high-quality margarine, and 1½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, ¼ (one quarter) teaspoon cayenne pepper and blend with a fork or pastry-cutter until you get lumps the size of peas.

Blend in one cup (8 ounces) of grated sharp cheddar cheese. (You can speed this up by buying ready-grated cheese), but DON'T use imitation cheese. Read the label carefully).

Add 1 teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce to ¼ (one quarter) cup of water. DO NOT ADD ALL AT ONCE. Tablespoon by tablespoon, work some of this mixture into your cheese-floor blend, until it just leaves the side of your mixing bowl—just like pie crust.

How much you will need varies on the type of flour, the humidity of the day, and so on.

Divide the dough into four equal parts, wrap in waxed paper, and chill at least one hour.

STEP 2—Preheat oven to 425. Take out one ball of dough at a time. On a slightly floured surface, roll out to a rectangle, 8 inches by 7 inches, about as thick as a piecrust (1/8 to 1/4 inch—thicker straws will be doughy).

What To Eat

Got the holiday hungries? Keep'em healthy, happy, vary focus

To keep alcohol to a minimum, consider alternatives such as the new non-alcoholic wines or sparkling water with a twist of lemon.

"Eating during the holiday season begins on Thanksgiving, continues into Chanukah and Christmas, and concludes with the grand finale on New Year's.

"But remember that you don't have to eat everything all at once!" says nutritionist Deborah Feil.

She suggests keeping the following tips in mind as the holiday season gets underway:

1) Don't starve yourself before holiday dinners; you'll be more likely to overeat. Before going to an "eating event," have a nutritious snack instead of skipping breakfast or lunch. A glass of fruit juice and a bowl of cereal or a cup of soup and a piece of fruit will assure that you don't arrive ravenously hungry.

2) Arrive at parties fashionably late or leave slightly early to minimize exposure to food — and the temptation to eat too much.

3) If you're thirsty, a glass of water or fruit juice before cocktail time will help you avoid using alcohol as a thirst quencher. And remember that salty snack foods increase thirst.

4) To keep alcohol to a minimum, consider alternatives such as the new non-alcoholic wines or Perrier with a twist of lemon/lime. Above all, if you drink, don't drive.

5) Pick and choose your way through smorgasbord tables. Look over the entire array of food and be selective — only take what really appeals to you.

Then move away from the food area, sit down, and enjoy. That way, if you want seconds, you deliberately make the choice to return.

6) Plan ahead when dining at a sit-down meal. When you know that your host or hostess is famous for sumptuous desserts, decrease some of the extras early in the meal such as bread, butter and gravy.

7) If you can't resist seconds, take only half portions each time.

8) Try to limit portion sizes.

A small serving of stuffing eaten slowly will taste better than a huge helping eaten without stopping to savor the flavor.

9) Don't save the best for last. Eat your favorite foods first and stop when you're full to save calories.

10) Eat slowly during holiday meals. When you eat slowly you tend to eat less.

Plus, when there's still food on your plate, it's easier to politely decline the "here-have-some-more" pressures of insistant hosts.

Try saying, "This is so good that I'm taking the time to enjoy every bite."

11) Relax and enjoy your food. Try not to eat while watching TV. Eating while watching an entire day's worth of Bowl Games on television will only prompt you to eat more and will distract you from enjoying your food.

12) After a big meal, take a walk, play a game or go holiday carolling as an alternative to television watching — or pitch in and help with the clean-up!

13) Take time to relax during the holiday season. Stress and fatigue lower your dietary self control.

14) Enjoy all of the pleasures of the holidays such as sharing the season with family and friends — and food will be one enjoyable aspect, not the only thing!

Drink offer, lots of food

"It's not as easy to throw a holiday party as it used to be. Besides trying to ensure that your guests have an enjoyable time, you are responsible for seeing that they stay clear of alcohol-related tragedies, particularly those caused by drinking and driving," says Richard Caplan, coordinator of the substance abuse program at Harvard Community Health Plan.

"It's okay to serve alcohol, as long as the entire party isn't centered around it," he says.

Here are some suggestions to keep in mind as you begin to plan your Christmas or New Year's get-together:

1) Don't greet your guests at the door with a drink in your hand, and don't set up the bar so that it's the first thing people see when they arrive.

2) Offer plenty of alternative beverages such as low-alcohol beer, wine coolers and fruit juice. Make sure that they are as readily available as alcoholic drinks. The more alternatives you offer, the more you convey the message that you're not just here to drink.

3) Don't walk around constantly refilling glasses.

4) Never push alcohol, and don't make stronger-than-usual drinks.

5) Serve plenty of food to help absorb the alcohol, but avoid thirst-causing salty snacks such as pretzels and chips.

6) Don't be afraid to tell someone that they've had too much to drink.

7) Close the bar about one hour before the party ends and switch to coffee and soft drinks. This will give the message that it's time to stop using alcohol and time to think about driving home.

8) If someone appears to be intoxicated, either offer to drive them home, call a cab, or invite them to stay the night.

9) If a guest insists on driving home, don't be afraid to take their keys away or, as a last resort, call the police with their license number.

Caplan also offers some guidelines to help parents prepare their teenagers for parties where alcohol will be served:

1) Ask them to keep drinking to a minimum, especially if they will be behind the wheel of a car.

2) Establish an "open phone" policy with your kids. Insist that they call you for a ride home if they have had too much to drink. Promise that no questions will be asked. It's better to be dragged out of bed at 2 a.m. than to risk having your child get into an accident.

3) Remind them to never get in a car with a driver who is under the influence.

4) Be very clear, but have faith in your teenager's ability to make responsible decisions.

"Give yourself more time to play.

What To Eat

Restaurants give tasty holiday tips

Kriss Kringle Cranberry Bread

2 cups flour
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
juice and rind of 1 orange
2 teaspoons melted margarine hot water
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup cranberries, halved
½ cup chopped walnuts

Preheat oven to 350 F. Sift together dry ingredients. Measure together orange juice, grated rind, and melted margarine; add enough hot water to make 1 cup of liquid. Stir liquid into dry ingredients. Add remaining ingredients and mix batter until smooth. Cut aluminum foil to fit the bottom of a 9 X 5-inch loaf pan. Grease sides of pan with margarine. Add batter. Bake for 1 hour or until toothpick inserted in top of loaf comes out clean. Let cool for easy slicing.

'Tis The Season Sweet Potatoes

The sweetening in this recipe comes from the orange juice and pineapple. Maple flavoring is used to simulate the taste of brown sugar. Salt and cream have been omitted.

3 medium sweet potatoes, pared and sliced ¼-inch thick
2-3 tablespoons margarine
1 cup unsweetened orange juice
½ cup unsweetened crushed pineapple
1/8 teaspoon white pepper
½ teaspoon maple flavoring

Saute sweet potatoes in margarine in a large skillet for five minutes. Slowly stir in orange juice, pineapple and pepper. Lower heat; cover; and simmer for 30 minutes or until potatoes are tender and sauce has thickened. Gently stir in maple flavoring. Yields 8 servings at 145 calories per serving.

Holiday Herb Veggie Dip

Plain, low-fat yogurt and low-fat cottage chesee have been substituted for sour cream and whole-milk cottage cheese. The salt and heavy cream have been omitted.

½ cup plain, low-fat yogurt
½ cup 1% low-fat cottage cheese
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley or 2 teaspoons dried parsley
1/8 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
¼ teaspoon dill weed

REVIEW

Insomniacs will have a field day with Tonight We Improvise, the American Repertory Theatre's opening production of the season (in repertory through Feb. 1).

It's guaranteed to put you to sleep within minutes.

Indeed, during the many pregnant pauses, the drone of snoring permeates the air. It is fortunate for the A.R.T. that this unbelievably amateurish offering was staged without an intermission; otherwise, director Robert Brustein would have discovered that the only magic would have been the disappearance of his audience prior to the second act.

After preliminary introductions of Brustein, who adapted as well as directed Luigi Pirandello's short story Leonora, Addio (Leonora, Farewell) and filmmaker Frederick Wiseman, who provided the undistinguished video sequences, the first audible word is a profanity yelled from the wings (shock effect?), with Brustein countering, "O.K. Harry, cut it out!"

Tonight We Improvise is a total evening of attempted improvisation.

The actors complain that they prefer working with a prepared script and rebel against doing an ad-lib exercise. One actress complains, "I'm in agony!" (By that time she has lots of company!).

Brustein urges an actor, "Act as if you're in despair!" He retorts, "No problem!" (He didn't have to act!).

Brustein and Wiseman roam about the theatre and stage for the balance of the show like two lost souls. Brustein observes that Pirandello believed a script "a waste of time on the stage, a waste of space in the newspaper."

The same applies to this regrettable foray.

Talented actors do not necessarily make talented improvisationalists. It has nothing to do with the memorized line.

Improvisation requires the very special ability of sharp repartee; performers must be clever, glib, and quick on the uptake.

Obviously this is not a medium in which the company excels.

Once the performers finally get into the story, we learn that it concerns the free-swinging ways of a family living in a small, sun-parched Sicilian garrison town in the late 1920s.

There's Signora Ignazia (Elizabeth Franz), a product of the relaxed social mores of Naples, and nicknamed "The General;" her cuckolded husband Pennywhistle (John Bottoms), a mining engineer; and their four beautiful daughters — Mommina (Harriet Harris), Totina (Lynn Torgove), Dorina (Rima Miller) and Nene (Pamela Gien).

While Papa is having a little fling with the local canteen torch singer (Isabell Monk), Mama and three of her daughters are taking care of the troops. Only Mommina refrains and eventually marries a true Sicilian, Rico Verri (flagrantly overacted by Nestor Serrano).

But the conflicts between Mommina's high-spirited home life and Rico's rigid, somber Sicilian code of behavior expose the dark passions of jealously, love and hate. Rico eventually creates a situation that he thinks he can control — he imprisons his wife in a tower room in their home.

It is only in the final 20 minutes of this two-hour farce that the A.R.T. displays the dramatic quality for which it is acclaimed, but even then, the ending is terribly contrived. Brustein has gone to the well once too often and come up empty-handed.

As Pirandello states in his notes, "The dramatic critics of the town are the only ones who have not thought it worth their while to come, feeling that it will be easy enough the next morning to say what a hodge-podge the thing was."

What a truism!

Tonight We Improvise is the opening production of the season for American Repertory Theatre, and continues performance sthrough Feb. 1.

Henry Miller's novella airs through Jan. 3 at Eliot Hall.

The Performers Ensemble, a professional repertory company of Boston, will present the world premiere of Henry Miller's novella The Smile At The Foot Of The Ladder, through Jan. 3 at Eliot Hall in Jamaica Plain, their home for this season.

Smile represents the latest in a series of original theater pieces conceived, produced and performed by the company. The story is very much a modern parable about the human condition, concerning Auguste, a circus clown in a traveling show. Despite his great comic skills, he seeks to transcend his role as a mere performer.

The Performers Ensemble's mounting makes use of the full spectrum of the kind of physical theater and musical expression for which they are known, with slack-rope walking, slapstick, juggling, story-telling and a capella singing.

Henry Miller originally wrote the novella as a text for a book of circus drawings. Inspired by the works of Chagall, Rouault, and Picasso, Miller ended up publishing the story separately. Amile represents Miller's lyric, mystical and philosophical side. It proves a thoughtful, joyous work, which should contribute to the current critical and public reassessment of Miller's writings.

Get to the museum!

Boston's museums and galleries are a treat any time of year, but their presence is sometimes taken for granted and visits are postponed until one hears oneself saying "I've been meaning to see that exhibit," or "It's been months since I've been to the museum.

The holiday season with the out-of-town guests it brings provide the perfect context for catching up. No visitor to Boston could fail to be impressed with, and just plain enjoy, the "view."

The Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, 280 The Fenway in Boston is housed in a 15th-century-style Venetian palazzo which is surely as much of a draw as the enormously varied collection it contains, including sculpture, textiles, period furniture, drawings, prints and Italian Renaissance and 17th-century Dutch paintings.

Featured through Jan. 4 is Anders Zorn (1860-1920), a special exhibition of selected prints, drawings and paintings of the Swedish artist and lifelong friend of Mrs. Gardner in whose collection he is represented by more works than any other artist.

Five major paintings, five drawings and some 80 prints are included in the exhibit.

Zorn was an internationally known etcher and painter who was also a friend and contemporary of John Singer Sargent. As painters of fashionable portraits, the works of the two artists were often compared.

The museum is open noon to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday and noon to 9 p.m. Tuesdays. Call 566-1401.

The nearby Boston Museum of Fine Arts celebrates the recently renovated and reopened Evans Wing with its 26 galleries, and more than 800 American and European paintings from the permanent collections.

First opened to the public in 1915, the Greek Revival building has been closed since 1982 for renovations. Offering double the exhibition space of the original facility, the "new" Evans Wing's 26 galleries include the Garden Court Gallery for modern American paintings, formerly the Lecture Hall, now the single largest gallery in the Wing, and a handsomely restored Tapestry Gallery.

Meanwhile the museum's popular Boston Collects: Contemporary Painting and Sculpture continues in the Gund Gallery through Feb. 1. Ninety-five works on loan from area collectors include pieces by Willem de Kooning, Arshile Gorky, David Smith, and Anthony Caro.

In the Torf Gallery, '70s Into '80s: Printmaking Now exhibits 100 prints by 85 painters and sculptors, revealing the diversity of style, scale, and use of the media characteristic of printmaking during the last decade. The exhibit continues through Feb. 8.

Carved In Marble: American Sculpture 1830-80, works by the first Americans to study in Italy and pursue careers as sculptors is exhibited in the Founders Gallery through 1987.

The Museum of Fine Arts is located at 465 Huntington Ave., Boston. Hours and admission charges vary. Call 267-9300 for information.

Nuts take half hour

Trim the pastry edges even; cut crosswise strips (about 10). Twist each strip four times; to form a corkscrew shape, and place on an ungreased cookie sheet, about one inch apart. Refrigerate 30 minutes.

Bake about 10 mintues, until golden brown. Let stand one minute after removing from oven; then move to wire rack to cool. Store in tins in a cool, dry place.

Curried Nuts

Takes about 30 minutes to make each two-cup batch.

Combine ¼ cup of olive oil in a large cast-iron frying pan with 1 tablespoon curry powder, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, and 1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper OR two or three drops of Tabasco sauce. Heat to blend flavors, but be careful not to burn. Toss in two cups of mixed nuts: pecans, walnuts, blanched almonds—and toast.

To make several batches in a hurry, preheat the oven to 325 degrees. Mix oil and spices, one batch at a time, in a sauce pan. Toss with two cups nuts and spread on cookie sheets. Toast for 8-12 minutes, depending on your oven. Watch for burning. (These seem to be less oily than the first method, as well as more efficient).

Cool before packing in tins and storing in a cool place.

What's Healthy?

Helping the bedwetter

What can be done to help a child who is a bedwetter?

Bedwetting typically creates a stressful situation for both parent and child. This is because parents often look at it as something that can be easily overcome even when the child continues to have a difficult time in gaining night-time bladder control. Fortunately however, if it's handled correctly, the problem can be conquered.

Bedwetting in children often results from overstrenuous early-life toilet training. It's not unusual for the mother to think the child should 'know better' after a certain age. She places so much attention and importance on the procedure that going to the bathroom becomes a major household issue. The child may cover up his or her embarrassment with a "don't care" attitude, and this only increases emotional strife for everyone.

Most children stop bedwetting by age five. When the problem continues beyond this point, you might start treatment by limiting fluid intake after supper.

If this doesn't work, I suggest that you take your child to a physician. The doctor will probably do a physical examination and run some urine tests to determine if there is a physical cause of the problem.

If the doctor determines that no physical problem is present, then he or she can counsel you on ways to teach your child bladder control.

Most bedwetters also have trouble during the day. These children often tend to use the lavatory on every possible occasion because their urinary bladders become accustomed to holding less than full capacity. The "bladder full" signal to the brain then occurs sooner than it would otherwise. In this context, the act of bedwetting can be seen as more of a reflex response than a purposefully willed act.

I want to stress that you shouldn't scold or punish your child for bedwetting. He or she does not enjoy lying in a wet bed any more than you enjoy changing the bedding. Punishment only makes the problem worse and may lead to serious psychological problems. Also, never embarrass or ridicule a child around his friends or siblings.

Bedwetters who are treated in a loving manner by their families can grow up without emotional scars. Bedwetting is not a sign of mental problems or lack of intelligence, and with love and support, it can be overcome.

Dr. Norman is a Winchester resident who is a family practitioner in Arlington. He is associated with Symmes Hospital. Questions can be addressed to him at 22 Mill st., Suite 109, Arlington, 02174.

SPECIFY WHAT STAYS OR GOES WITH A HOUSE

The Purchase & Sale contract may be the most important document in the sale of a home. In order to save a lot of aggravation, post-sale bickering, and possible law suits, the gray area of which items will stay with the house and which the Seller will take away should be spelled out specifically in the contract.

Know the difference between chattels which can be picked up and moved without leaving nail holes; and fixtures which have been attached with the intention of their becoming part of the real estate. The Buyer expects fixtures to remain with the property.

Items like wall-to-wall carpeting, smoke alarms, and fireplace equipment should be specified as remaining as fixtures or being taken as chattels in the contract to avoid confusion.

Two commonly troublesome items are the TV antenna and fancy lighting fixtures; people form strong emotional attachments to chandeliers. Rather than get bogged down over such matters, simply make sure your offer stipulates that all fixtures remain except specific ones you're willing to up to the Seller.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

Expressions

THIS CHRISTMAS season will not be happy for everyone. There are people out there dying and relatives who are up against the wall because they want their loved ones home with them in their final hours. Hospice is by far the greatest source to guide you along the way, coping and just being there when you feel so desperately alone.

I want to thank my special case worker, Jacque Lapidus and the whole Arlington Hospice staff, including Dr. Liberus for all their help.

And to people who are afraid to face the inevitable and refuse to visit the sick I say just keep in mind when you visit that the sick person that you see was once vital and active and see them as they were, not as they are. It really makes a difference.

"Twas the month before Christmas,
Santa sat by the fire
He needed more elves,
But didn't know who to hire
He sipped his hot chocolate with a sigh of dismay
So much work to do in so very few days!
Then what to his tired old eyes should appear,
But this week's "What's Up" section and he got an idea!
He opened it up with a jolly Ho! Ho! Ho!
He dialed 729-8100!
"The kids are so good" he said "So few have been bad!"
Saint Nick had to place a "HOLIDAY HELP WANTED" AD!
With each tiny applicant Santa's confidence grew,
As he happily conducted each elf interview!
His inventory grew as they stocked all his shelves,
His workshop now bustling with busy elves!
Santa sat back and counted the days till his ride,
So relieved that he'd called CENTURY CLASSIFIEDS!
